Gain Near Voronezh

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Thursday), July 23. The million-man German army pounding at the Caucasus and the Volga has driven a deep wedge roughly halfway between Rostov and Stalingrad, and the sorely pressed Russians have fallen back on the outer defenses of Rostov for a finish fight, the Russians indicated officially early today.

While Russian soldiers were reported gaining ground in their offensive around Voronezh, the midnight communique acknowledged that the Red armies in the deep south were fighting in the areas of Tsimlyansk, near the Don about 130 miles northeast of Rostov and about 120 miles southwest of Stalingrad, and in the Novocherkassk area just about 20 miles outside Rostov proper.

Tsimlyansk is about 60 miles east of the Donets River and is just above the Don near where that great waterway makes its westward sweep toward the Black Sea.

Fierce Battle on Railway

Novocherkassk is on the Rostov-Moscow railroad and on a tributary of the Don River.

The midnight communique disclosed the Russians had fallen back to new positions in the Novocherkassk area after suffering considerable losses under the blows of numerically superior enemy forces in a two-day fight.

"Our troops fought fierce battles in the area of Novocherkassk," the communique said.

In one Novocherkassk sector Red planes bombed enemy columns of tanks and trucks and enemy infantry concentrations, destroying several tanks, 57 trucks with troops and ammunition and dispersing a large group of soldiers.

Thousands of Enemy Killed

In another sector of the erupting Novocherkassk front the Russians said their troops fought for two days against the Germans before retiring to their new positions, killing 1300 officers and men, destroying 14

Hull Addresses World Tonight

Secretary of State Hull last night completed preparation of his radio address to the Nation tonight on the seriousness of the war situation.

The talk will be broadcast by all network beginning at 9:30 p. m. Simultaneous broadcasts will be made in Spanish and Portuguese. Later it will be re-broadcast throughout the world in nine more languages.

President Roosevelt has said it comprises a very able and conclusive summary of what the war means to every American.

Mead Enters Governor Race

Senator James M. Mead yesterday entered the race for the Democratic nomination for Governor of New York, claiming the backing of President Roosevelt. His action was denounced by James A. Farley, former Postmaster General, who is supporting Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., for the governorship.

Tuesday's primary election returns in Montana, meanwhile showed that Senator James E. Murray had been renominated by the Democrats, while the G. O. P. nomination was won by Wellington D. Rankin, brother of Congresswoman Jeannette Rankin.

29 Nazis From U-Boat Sunk By Destroyer Buried in Virginia

By International News Service

Norfolk, Va., July 22.—Twenty-nine Germans, killed when their U-boat was sunk by a United States destroyer, were buried today in Virginia.

They were the first German dead of this war to reach American shores.

Along with the bodies of the German U-boat crew, several lifejackets, all that remained afloat after the submarine was destroyed, also were buried.

The burials took place in the Military Cemetery at Hampton, Va., with full military honors.

Two chaplains directed the services—Lieut. R. A. Lundquist, of the Navy, a Catholic priest, and Capt. A. G. Daum, of the Army, Protestant.

A Navy bugler sounded taps over the graves of the Germans.

Navy authorities here declined to reveal any details of the encounter in which the U-boat was sunk, and the bodies of part of the crew recovered and brought into this port for burial. Neither was the identity of any of the German seamen made known.

Ruling the Air, British Open 40-Mile Attack

Cairo Reports Gains From Qattara to Sea; Tank Battle Rages

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, July 22.—Under cover of Allied planes ruling the air almost without challenge, British imperials were attacking the Axis forces tonight all along the 40-mile desert front west and south of El Alamein in an onslaught that began last night and raged inconclusively through today.

While it was still too early to see definite results, the British under the leadership of Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck reported progress.

The imperials in the northern coastal sector occupied all of Tel El Eisa (Hill of Jesus) ridge, which has changed hands repeatedly.

In the center, where the action began last night, some progress was reported, with tanks in the fighting on both sides.

First Attack in All Sectors

In the south, where the desert merges into the salt marshes of the Qattara Depression, United Kingdom troops attacked and were making some progress.

It was the first time the defenders of the Alamein positions—and of Egypt, the Nile and the Middle East—had attacked on all three sectors simultaneously.

The enemy forces of Marshal Erwin Rommel launched several counterattacks during the day and heavy see-saw fighting ensued.

[Only four German Messerschmitt fighters, which fled without a fight, and one Italian bomber, which was blown to pieces over the coast near Sidi Barrani, Libya, were encountered by the R. A. F. over the desert front all day Tuesday, a United Press dispatch said.]

Enemy fliers were out in slightly greater strength today, but the Axis air activity still was small.

With the desert and sea air virtually all to themselves for the first time, fighters, fighter-bombers, and light and heavy bombers probably augmented by American Liberators (B-24s) ranged near and far over the Egyptian-Libyan-Mediterranean theater.

On one attack, they struck at enemy preparations in the area of Sidi

Mrs. Devereux, Wife of Hero, Dies Here at 27

Ordered Home With Diabetes, She Succumbs To a Sudden Attack

Mrs. James Patrick Sinnot Devereux, 27-year-old wife of the gallant Marine major who headed the epic 14-day defense of Wake Island, died at 6:30 p. m. yesterday in Doctor's Hospital.

Her death, attributed to a long illness from diabetes but brought on by a sudden attack suffered Tuesday morning, came without her ever having received direct word from Major Devereux since the fall of the island last December.

Nor did she know, definitely, that a cablegram which she attempted to send him through the International Red Cross several months ago, was ever delivered.

Arrived Here Saturday

Mother of an eight-year-old son named for his father, Mrs. Devereux had been ill since last October when she returned from Honolulu to the home of her parents, Col. and Mrs. John P. Welch, on Governor's Island, N. Y. She was ordered home, it was revealed last night, by her husband, now a prisoner of the Japanese in Shanghai, who felt that her recovery would be swifter at home.

Mrs. Devereux arrived in Washington last Saturday, en route with her parents to Richmond where Colonel Welch has been transferred. They stopped over for a visit with friends in Arlington, and it was there that Mrs. Devereux sustained the fatal attack. She entered the hospital Tuesday morning.

Her parents and son were with her when she died, members of the family said last night.

Seek to Inform Husband

Born Mary Welch at an Army post near Niagara Falls, Mrs. Devereux traveled from post to post with her Army officer father, and lived, from her fourteenth year until she was 17, on Bataan and Corregidor—names as symbolical of undying courage as Wake Island.

Last night, members of Major Devereux's family were trying, through the Red Cross, to inform him of his wife's passing, but at an early hour this morning they did not know what success they would have.

Warrant Out For Mrs. Dilling

28 Indicted in Wide Conspiracy To Corrupt Army and Navy

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

A gigantic conspiracy against the loyalty, morale and discipline of the Army and Navy is charged against 28 persons by the secret indictment returned Tuesday by the special grand jury on Axis agents.

The charges and the names of many of the accused became public last night as warrants were issued in half a dozen cities for the arrest of the alleged conspirators, whose operations reached from Coast to Coast.

The full text of the indictment is scheduled to be disclosed here late today.

The indictment charged two conspiracies. The grand jurors found that one of these was in operation before the war, and had as its object the corruption of the armed forces by the circulation of seditious papers and other material. The penalty upon conviction of this crime would be $10,000 fine or 10 years in prison, or both.

The grand jurors found the conspirators continued their operations, with the same object, after the attack on Pearl Harbor and the subsequent declaration of war, in violation of another section of the United States Code. The penalty upon conviction of such a conspiracy in wartime is $10,000 fine, or 20 years in prison, or both.

Warrants were issued in Chicago, the Associated Press reported, for:

WPB Doubts Tire Plan Is Feasible

Agency Created

Optimism Out

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The War Production Board's top rubber experts agreed last night that there might be "too many ifs" in at least some phases of the Rubber Manufacturers Association plan for keeping all mechanically usable automobiles on tires for the next two years.

The association plan, formally unveiled Tuesday but available to WPB officials for several weeks, set up a schedule of materials assignment which would produce a two-year supply of 48,174,000 tires of various types for all of the country's 27 million motor cars.

Termed "Interesting"

"I think the rubber industry has done an immensely interesting job, but there are a great many ifs in the program it has presented," declared WPB's rubber coordinator, Arthur B. Newhall.

Dr. Harry S. Rogers, chief of WPB's Rubber and Rubber Products Branch, stated that the rubber companies' plan failed to allow an adequate margin of safety to take care of possible future rubber needs of the United Nations which the United States must supply.

"There is still the possibility that the military requirements for rubber may be increased by a change in the extent and scope of the grand strategy," Rogers declared.

"It may very well be, for example that in recent weeks the fighting on the vital Russian front may have had a seriously adverse effect on the ability of the Soviet to produce synthetic and other rubbers."

Not "Optimistic"

Dr. Rogers said he believed the rubber companies have given a "fairly accurate" statistical picture of rubber, but added that after an examination of their exhibit in the Willard Hotel and consideration of their plan he could see no present reason to be "optimistic."

In a morning conference yesterday, Newhall left reporters with the impression that he felt optimistic about the tire manufacturers' plan. In a formal statement issued for him later by the Office of War Information and during an early evening press conference he emphatically denied intending to give such an impression.

Repeats Declaration

After a comparison of their notes, reporters who talked with Newhall in the morning agreed that the rubber czar said he believed it would be possible to provide tires for essential driving in all "mechanically usable" autos.

(The phrase—"mechanically usable passenger cars"—was used in the tire companies' statement of their plan. It was learned that the plan

Roosevelt May Invoke War Powers to Halt Inflation; Ceilings Force Meat Shortage

Packers Squeezed As Uncontrolled Stock Prices Mount; Subsidy Proposed

Solution to a "squeeze" between prices of livestock and meat products that already has forced many packers to shut down and has confronted housewives in Washington and other Eastern cities with a shortage of beef and pork, was hurriedly sought last night by the Office of Price Administration and the Agriculture Department.

Both agencies agreed with packers that the meat scarcity, which became so pronounced yesterday that many cities reported sharply curtailed deliveries of quality cuts, is due to advancing, ceilingless prices of livestock.

The margin between livestock prices and OPA ceiling prices on processed meats has narrowed to a point where many small independent packers either must operate at a loss or go out of business. Many have chosen the latter course.

Big Packers Not Affected

The larger packing plants, which sell most of their meat to the Agriculture Department for lend-lease shipment abroad have not been as hard hit as the smaller firms.

On pork, in carload lots, the large packers recevie increases ranging as high as one cent and a half per pound above Chicago quotations in order to cover the costs they incur in preparing the cuts for export. The increases do not apply to beef, however. Inasmuch as the price increase on pork is granted only on quotations on carload lots, the small packers are more or less excluded by the limited range of their operations.

The OPA and Agriculture Department have under consideration two "remedies" which hold the possibility of what, in effect, would be Government subsidization of the smaller packers.

Under one plan, the Agricultural Marketing Administration would buy 75 per cent of the output of small packers at the same prices big packers get for lend-lease sales, with the idea in mind of keeping the small operators in business until livestock prices decline.

The other plan under consideration would involve Government contracts under which the small packers would operate on a fee or commission basis—the Government would buy the hogs and cattle and take over the meat.

U. S. Would Absorb Loss

Under either plan, it was pointed out, it would be necessary probably for the Government, after paying lend-lease prices, to resell to distributors at lower prices in order to get the meat into civilian channels.

Agriculture Department officials believe the squeeze will disappear by late September when hogs and cattle start moving to market in larger numbers than at present.

OPA Fights 3-Cent Increase

U.S. to Pay More on Lend-Lease Butter—Boosting Retail Price

The Department of Agriculture, it was learned last night, has boosted from 36 to 39 cents the price per pound on butter it is purchasing for lend-lease and its school lunch program.

The move was stoutly resisted by the Office of Price Administration whose officials insisted that the increase in what is known as the department's "support" price not only will bring a corresponding Nation-wide rise in retail butter prices, but will boost prices for fluid milk.

Milk is now under OPA's general maximum price order with a ceiling price at highest prices charged last March. If the higher butter price prevails—and there is nothing legally that OPA can do to block the rise—the milk ceiling is certain to be punctured because of the close market relationship between butter and milk, OPA sources maintained.

The department's order has precipitated a bitter renewal of its historic quarrel with OPA over basic policies affecting the Government's efforts to keep down living costs.

The step was taken, OPA sources explained, because under previous prices for butter, fluid milk and evaporated milk the department's buyers were obtaining more evaporated milk than they needed for United Nations export, and not enough butter. OPA officials attempted to induce the department to lower the evaporated milk price, so that farmers would stop channeling their milk production into this product and would divert more of it for butter manufacture.

The decision to raise the butter price, it was reported, was made while the question was under discussion between officials of the department and OPA. Since the price-boost was posted, the entire question has been transferred from OPA subordinates to Price Administrator Leon Henderson who is ready to carry the fight at once to Secretary of Agriculture Claude

Gas Violations To Mean Stiff OPA Penalty

Noncomplying Dealers May Lose Businesses, Henderson Warns

Expressing a readiness to "take drastic measures," Price Administrator Leon Henderson warned yesterday that filling station operators violating the new gasoline rationing regulations may be put out of business by OPA.

The coupon system of gasoline rationing went into effect yesterday in the District and 17 Eastern States. In most areas, gasoline trucks began the job of refilling dry gasoline pumps Tuesday midnight, permitting relatively smooth operations without the accumulation before service stations of long lines of gas-thirsty motorists.

Motorists Warned

In Washington, the 15 local rationing boards were jammed with applicants seeking additional ration books under the program. Some 12,000 motorists have applied for extra supplies, compared with the 13,000 who received unlimited-X cards under the previous system of card rationing.

Henderson's warning was blunt:

"Careless dealers should know that by violating the provisions of the regulations, they choose to run the risk of being put out of business. We will take drastic measures, if necessary, to assure that honest people are protected against the chiselers."

Situation Desperate

Reminding the motoring public that they also might face prosecution for violating the law, he stated that all applications for additional supplies would be carefully checked. He also asked motorists not to buy more gasoline than they need, even when they have the coupons to buy it.

"I say bluntly, that the petroleum

Bethlehem Complies With WLB Pay Edict

Does Under Protest; Inland Will Fight Union Security Order

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Bethlehem Steel Co.—largest of the four "Little Steel" companies—yesterday agreed to comply under protest with a War Labor Board order for a 44 cents an hour wage boost, union security and minimum daily wage guarantee, while Inland Steel Co.—smallest of the four—disclosed that it intended to fight in the courts the board's union security edict.

Inland did not disclose its position on the wage boost. Republic and Youngstown, the other two companies, have thus far refrained from commenting on any phase of the board order. The union security order provided for maintenance of union membership in combination with a checkoff of union dues by the companies.

Indications that the steel wage increase would spread to other industries increased as representatives of General Electric Corp. and Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. and the C. I. O. United Electrical, Radio, and Machine Workers of America tentatively agreed on new collective bargaining contracts increasing the wages of 200,000 electrical workers 5½ cents an hour or 44 cents a day—the same increase which WLB ordered for Little Steel.

The two firms reached this tentative agreement in separate conferences with union representatives before Director John R. Steelman of the United States Conciliation Service, it was learned. Union security in the form of modified maintenance membership was also agreed to. Neither company had cases before WLB.

Leaders Called in As President Seeks To Avoid Collapse By Quick Action

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday considered quick executive action under his war powers to hold living costs in line as a rising tide in farm prices and war wages threatened to smash the price-control structure.

With the inflation threat nearing crucial proportions, the President consulted congressional leaders at the White House and then called in spokesmen for management and labor for a conference today.

Canvasses Powers

He asked Attorney General Biddle to rule on his power to act directly, under his Constitutional authority as Commander in Chief, implemented by the War Powers and Price Control Acts.

Plans for an urgent message to Congress were held in abeyance while President Roosevelt thoroughly canvassed leaping living cost factors, evidenced yesterday by the following developments:

A serious meat shortage developed at several mid-Western and Eastern Seaboard points which packers attributed to inability to stay under wholesale and retail ceilings with the price unchecked on live cattle.

General Electric and Westinghouse, employing 200,000 electric workers, tentatively agreed to the same 5½ cents an hour wage increase awarded "little steel" workers by the War Labor Board.

The Bethlehem Steel Co. tentatively accepted the 44 cents a day wage increase but the Inland Steel Co. announced plans to fight the board's union security order. It was not disclosed whether the wage increase, affecting 157,000 workers in four companies, would go to a court test.

C. I. O. United Steel Workers meanwhile sought to extend to 400,000 employes of eight other steel companies the board's wage award to Little Steel.

White House Parley

Later the C. I. O. fight for 44 cents a day wage increases will be carried to some 225,000 additional workers in steel production and fabricating plants.

Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O., and President William Green of the A. F. L. were invited to sit with representatives of the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers at today's wage stabilization conference at the White House.

Both the A. F. L. and the C. I. O. have voiced a vital stake in the Administration's battle against in-

Suction Used To Pull Heart Back Into Place

Somerville, Mass., July 22 (AP).—Physicians disclosed today that they had rigged an emergency device of two water bottles and a length of rubber tubing in an effort to save the life of Ethel House, 12, whose heart was forced far to the right of her chest when she fell on a picket fence.

Dr. Paul C. Kelleher, who said her chest was pierced and a lung deflated by two pickets, gave her an even chance of recovering. The emergency apparatus was expected to inflate the collapsed lung and by suction draw the heart back into place.

The apparatus consisted of one bottle placed above the child's head, which forced water through the tubing to a second bottle, on the floor beside her bed. This tubing, attached to another inserted in the punctured chest, created a suction designed to pull the heart slowly into position.

Invisible Ink Records Wedding Registered by Remote Control

By the United Press

New York, July 22.—Prince Mohammed Al Raschi, self-styled descendant of the Prophet, explained in court today how he married a beautiful redhead in a ceremony recorded in invisible ink and registered in Turkey by remote control.

The trouble with this mystical ceremony was the red-head's husband, whose marriage was recorded in strong ink in Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches considerably nearer than Turkey.

"Mohammedan marriage is thus," the sallow-complexioned "prince" explained on the witness stand in magistrate's court, waving his hands.

"First she says 'I give you all my love.' Then I say, 'I give you all my love.' Then I write it down in my sacred religious book and nobody can separate us for eternity."

He produced a slightly dog-eared photograph of his "bride" and "princess," Mrs. James C. Handy.

"The all-powerful words are written on here," he said, "only you can't see them because the ink is invisible.

"She is now legally registered as my wife in Turkey and my princess under Mohammedan law. If any man interferes I have the right to kill him under Mohammedan law."

James Handy, a telegraph operator, said he thought the prince had this right in mind when he attacked him with a cane as he stood on a street corner talking to his wife—wedded in two churches with standard prayer-book ceremonies.

The caning started, Handy testified, when he told the prince to quit pawing the "princess" and stopped only when a passing motorcycle policeman interfered.

The prince, who doubled as his own lawyer, questioned "Princess" Handy, plump and pretty, about her feelings for him.

"What do you consider me?" she asked.

"An imbecile," the "princess" replied, with a curl of her lip.

"Since when did you consider me that?"

"Since you began threatening our lives," Mrs. Handy answered, saying she and Handy and their son were scared by the prince's wild threats.

Right here an attractive blonde dashed into the court room and shouted:

"I'm Princess Kay Dischon Al Raschi. The prince is my husband. I want this woman arrested."

"My secretary," the prince muttered. He was held in $1000 bail for further hearing.

Morgenthau to Press Drive For Administration Tax Goal

Administration proposals to increase the House tax bill by at least 2½ billion dollars will be laid before the Senate Finance Committee today, by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr.

Morgenthau prepared to renew Treasury recommendations for an $8,700,000,000 tax bill, as ranking finance committeemen hinted at "a general rewriting job" on the House-approved measure.

But the Treasury secretary, rebuffed by the House on some 900 million dollars in "special privilege" taxes and on corporation and individual rates scaled to more revenue, faced a similar fight in the Senate Finance Committee.

Sentiment for sales taxes, to which Morgenthau is vigorously opposed, already was welling up in the Senate Committee. Rather than raise corporate and individual rates higher than the House figure, several ranking committeemen favored modification of House schedules and reaching out into untapped fields for the new revenue needed.

Morgenthau, prepared to renew his request for plugging of loopholes, was expected to ask Congress once again to require married couples to file joint returns, to make taxable all income from State and local securities and to lower oil depletion allowances.

He favors going 10 per cent higher than the House 45 per cent combined normal and surtax on corporations.

Unlike the House, he would recommend no increase in the 4 per cent normal individual income tax, but would range individual surtaxes from 12 per cent on the first $500 of taxable income. He

Meat Prices Here Show Big Increase

Shortage Unlikely

U. S. Supply Of Power Held Ample

By Francis M. Le May
Associated Press Staff Writer

J. A. Krug, chief of the Power Branch of the War Production Board, expressed confidence yesterday that war production would not be crippled by a shortage of electric power.

"We have sufficient electric power," he said, "to meet all the requirements of war production and for essential civilian needs, if used wisely—as far as we can see ahead."

He emphasized, however, that some local shortages probably would occur, necessitating curtailment of nonessential consumption. He urged that no person should permit any wasteful use of electricity.

The improved power outlook was attributed to rains that have built up the reservoirs behind the great hydro-dams, to the huge generator production program, and to extensive interconnections and adjustments for the output and transmission of power.

One power official said this country is in a position to match and out-do any nation or combination of nations in a war of kilowatts. He said America had greater resources of electric power than all Axis sources combined.

Krug's statement followed the prediction by the Brookings Institution of an eventual power shortage "sufficient to impede the war production effort" unless "conservation and more effective power utilization is undertaken in the immediate future."

The WPB power chief said the energy outlook was especially bright in the southeast and Far West, centers of aluminum and war plane production.

"In the hydro-areas of the southeast and the west," he told newspapermen, "we have no reason to anticipate likelihood of any but minor shortages during the next year, such as might result from equipment breakdowns."

In the South, he said, there now are two billion more kilowatt hours of power in hydro-dam reservoirs than at any time last year, due to beneficial rains. This area, which produces a large portion of the Nation's aluminum for aircraft, had its power rationed last summer and fall, when a record drought dried up the water behind the Great Southern hydro-power dams.

As for the rest of the country, members of the WPB power staff foresaw a possibility that rationing might be necessary later this year for some areas, but they expected these restrictions to affect only nonessential uses.

Portland Cement Output Climbs 5.2% in June

The Bureau of Mines reported yesterday the Portland cement industry in June produced 16,022,000 barrels, shipped 18,250,000 barrels and had in stock at the month-end 22,654,000 barrels.

Production was up 5.2 per cent, shipments 13.3 per cent and stocks 3.6 per cent higher, as compared with June, 1941, the bureau said.

Ham, Beef Lead Advance in District; Others Also Rise

A comparison of Chicago livestock market reports—yesterday's and that of the corresponding day last year—furnishes an interesting index to today's high cost of living.

Hogs and cattle on July 22 last year were bringing from $3 to $4 less per hundredweight at Chicago than they did yesterday—and, correspondingly, hams (the same brand) which sold for 27 cents a pound last year currently are bringing 39 cents per pound. Ground beef was advertised a year ago at 2 pounds for a quarter. Today, it's a dime more.

Sliced bacon is up from 33 cents to 41 cents and higher, and in the sidelines, liverwurst is going for 35 cents a pound as compared with 25 cents a year ago.

Significantly, over the past weekend, grocery advertising was conspicious for its absence of the choicer meat listings, the field, in which women say, the greatest increases have occurred. To find out what these choice cuts cost today you'll have to ask your grocer; last year, one large store advertised porterhouse steak at 33 cents, sirloin at 33 cents and round steak at 35 cents per pound.

Last year at Chicago, hog prices ranged from $9.50 per hundredweight to a top of $11.85 for the best animals in the 180-240 pound bracket; yesterday, the price range was from $13.85 to a top of $15. Last year, the best grades of cattle brought a top of $12.85; yesterday the top was $15.40 for fat steers.

"Not enough stock cattle here to make a market," yesterday's Chicago report concluded.

U. S. Acts to Raise Price on Butter

Wickard.

OPA officials view the price rise as a "major setback" in the inflation battle. From the farmers' standpoint, it is conceded that millions of dollars increased butter revenues will result.

While admitting that there is nothing illegal about the department's move under the Price Control Act, OPA officials pointed out that "this Administration has undertaken to keep the cost of living stable, and the Office of Price Administration is taking President Roosevelt's seven-point inflation-control program seriously."

Wickard and Henderson have been at loggerheads over major price policies since the earliest days of the inflation-control program. Their differences arise from the insistence of Wickard, backed by the potent Congressional farm bloc, that operation of price controls should not imperil the Administration's goal of parity prices for farm products.

While the price-control act was being fought out in Congress last year, Senate farm leaders sought to give Wickard "veto" power over any of Henderson's decisions that might affect farm prices. Intervention by President Roosevelt blocked this move, but farm legislators succeeded in writing into the law a rigid set of parity price safeguards.

Several weeks ago Henderson announced that to prevent food processors from being squeezed between parity prices for the producer and price ceilings it would be necessary to raise as much as 15 per cent the prices on this year's pack of canned fruits.

Michigan Convict Kills Worker

Jackson, Mich., July 22 (AP).—William Tomczik, 46, a convict serving life for murder, killed an employe with a hatchet and butcher knife at Southern Michigan Prison tonight, then climbed atop the prison's 160-foot water tower and defied guards to remove him.

Tomczik's victim was Andrew Faust, 65, operating engineer at the prison power plant. After the slaying outside the plant, Tomczik went inside and smashed five meters and several power switches, cutting off all electricity at the prison for a half hour. Then he climbed to the top of the tower.

Prices Force Meat Shortage

This is the slack season in livestock sales, it was pointed out, and an increased market supply logically could be expected to force prices downward and affect a wider margin between livestock and the meat ceiling prices.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson, it was learned yesterday, has been reluctant to place a ceiling on prices paid for hogs and cattle without the approval of Agriculture Secretary Claude Wickard, who has opposed such action.

Recently, an organization of more than 400 small packers appealed to Wickard and Henderson for a ceiling on hogs and cattle at prices which would enable them to make a fair profit. These animals, it was pointed out, have advanced beyond 110 per cent of parity—the minimum level at which ceilings may be imposed on farm products.

The shortage here, most noticeable in the best quality cuts, was described as "definite but not alarming" by local dealers.

One large wholesale house said Canadian bacon, slicing bacon and shoulders are difficult to obtain, and "that beef is getting shorter all the time."

Elsewhere, stores in Akron, Ohio announced they were out of meat, and beef deliveries in Boston dropped 75 to 80 per cent below normal.

In Cincinnati, a packer said out-of-town orders were being rationed 50 per cent. His report was corroborated by District grocers who revealed that pork already is being sold to dealers here on the basis of certain limited amounts each week. However, the head of a large chain meat department in the District stressed his belief there is no immediate danger of "a severe shortage."

Ed Stenger, processor of meat and canned goods in Cincinnati, said his production of Government orders for military consumption had been halted because of price ceilings.

"We can't meet the ceilin gfor the finished product," he commented.

Another packer charged that farmers were holding on to their beef, apparently in the hope of getting higher prices, but in Chicago, Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, asserted there was "no foundation for the charge that farmers are holding back shipments of livestock in order to force prices higher."

Other contributing factors to the shortage were cited by packers in the Midwest. A Chicago trade authority said cattle were sent to market without being fattened because, under the ceiling setup, packers won't pay a good price for heavy cattle.

F. E. Mollin, secretary of the American National Livestock Association, said in Denver that "every time the markets are adjusted to suit meat retailers, losses are rolled back on the feeders." The feeders need assurance, he declared, that they won't have to go on suffering these cuts.

In Des Moines, President Harry Bookey of the Bookey Packing Co., said there was no meat shortage, but a shortage of finished cattle.

"The Western man is not selling his stockers. There's an abundance of feed so they're not rushing the stuff to market."

The American Meat Institute reported cattle receipts at 27 market centers during the past two weeks were approximately 20 per cent lower than during the week ended July 3.

The shortage extended as far south as Atlanta where 150 men usually employed during the week-end rush by two large chain stores were released.

Whatever the cause, the fact remained that beef and pork, at least for the time being, will make their appearance on the dinner table less frequently than in the past. Their use, it was pointed out yesterday, already has been severely curtailed in many households because of high prices.

Inflation Crisis Grips Capitol

flation, but have opposed, as has the President, an "wage freeing."

The C. I. O. has indorsed the President's seven-point anti-inflation program, including wage "stabiliation." The A. F. L. proposed creation of a wage policy commission to coordinate wage policies, but demanded wage adjustment through collective bargaining, with the War Labor Board the final arbiter.

The President's desire to act quickly before rising costs crash through Price Administrator Henderson's price ceilings was communicated to leaders at a two-hour legislative conference yesterday.

Mr. Roosevelt was reported to have originally sought brisk action by Congress, within two or three days if possible, to extend OPA control over all prices and wages as well.

Quick Law Idea Dismissed

Leaders advised him of the inevitable delays in trying to speed any controversial legislation through both Houses on short notice and the President is understood to have agreed to examine his own powers to act, without legislation.

Plans for a second antiinflation message to Congress were held up pending the study, and a probable opinion by Attorney General Biddle early next week. Even if it is determined that the President has needed authority, he may ask a more direct authorization from Congress, it was said in one leadership quarter.

Barely more than a quorum of either House was in Washington, many members having jumped on planes and trains for home immediately after House passage of the tax bill, with an understanding that no business was imminent.

A quorum of the House Banking Committee, which would insist on the right to hold hearings on any price-wage legislation offered, was still standing by, and the President was told that congressional majorities can be mustered back any time at his call.

But there was a definite lack of enthusiasm in Congress for embarking on any prolonged price controversy, bringing powerful farm and labor blocs into play, in the heat of the congressional primaries. Elections are just three months away. Immediate action could be obtained only by unanimous consent, or a two-thirds vote to suspend the rules. It might be weeks before general legislation could be moved out of committees and to the floors of both Houses, and then the outcome was uncertain, the President was advised. Price Administrator Leon Henderson has just come off second best in one appropriation bout with Congress and would almost certainly be the center of another fight.

President Wants Speed

Mr. Roosevelt was after speed, and said so, and all concerned agreed the quickest route to action was through executive proclamation if it could be clearly established that the President has the power.

Returning from the White House, Speaker Rayburn told reporters that leaders surveyed with the President "the whole inflation question and discussed every factor that enters into the cost of living."

Rayburn said existing powers of the President were discussed and will be further studied. He indicated there might be another legislative conference this week.

"I think the President's powers under the War Powers Acts, the Price Control Act, and as Commander in Chief are pretty broad," said the Speaker.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley said it had not yet been decided whether the President will send a message, and in any event he expected none this week. Barkley said that if it is determined that the President has power to act, there might be no formal message.

Concerning the President's power to proceed on his own, Barkley said "good lawyers" were divided. He said President Wilson did not think he had price-fixing authority under war powers legislation of the World War No. 1, but the second War Powers Act of the present war went beyond the Wilson precedent.

May Ask Declaration

Barkley said the President still might want Congress to declare itself, even if his authority is established.

An alternative to executive action, the Senate leader indicated, might be a request for a "general" rather than a specific grant of authority, to give the President a green light to proceed.

This would depart from the original proposal under White House scrutiny—a bill drawn by the Office of Price Administration giving OPA power to fix wages as well as all prices.

Should the OPA bill be forwarded to Congress, an effort may be made in the House Banking Committee to supstitute the overall cost control bill drawn by Representative Gore (Democrat) of Tennessee. The bill was introduced immediately following the President's seven-point antiinflation message, and was designed to give it legislative force.

British Women Now Are Nearly All War Workers

British women are now nearly 100 per cent mobilized in Britain's all-out war effort, the British Information Service said here yesterday.

There are 15,800,000 women in Great Britain between the ages of 18 and 64. Of this number, approximately 670,000 are disabled and 5,800,000 are taking care of families. There remain 9,630,000 women within the 18 to 64 age group available for war work.

By June there were 7,800,000 women in the United Kingdom already doing full-time jobs in some part of the war production program. This figure includes women employed as clerks, waitresses and in similar categories, but does not include those serving in the women's auxiliaries of the army, navy and air force or the land army, or women's voluntary services.

Stoppages Gain In Production Of War Goods

By the Associated Press

Work stoppages due to labor disputes cost 254,638 "man-days" of war production in June, an increase of 117,353 days over May, the War Labor Board reported yesterday. The time lost in June was .09 per cent of the total war work done, compared with .06 per cent in May.

Two current strikes which had hampered war production were settled during the day while a proposed walkout of 22,000 A. F. L. building trades workers in New York on 100 million dollars of Navy projects was postponed until today pending the outcome of a conference between President Roosevelt and A. F. L. leaders.

The Bronx Building Trades Workers, a segment of the Building and Construction Trades Council (A. F. L.), voted unanimously on Monday to walk out, charging that 1100 WPA workers were being used in 13 building projects at the Fort Schuyler Navy Training Station in the Bronx.

The scheduled conference between President Roosevelt and William Green, A. F. L. president, and George Meaney, secretary-treasurer, was disclosed at union headquarters in New York yesterday.

Strike of the 22,000 workers would affect building projects at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, Floyd Bennett Airport, the Marine Hospital on Staten Island and the Fort Schuyler development.

The General Motors Tank Arsenal at Grand Blanc, Mich., idle a week when a strike followed the layoff of 80 workmen for smoking, resumed production after a settlement of grievances was reached. The smoking issue was left for later settlement.

Striking A. F. of L. truck drivers in St. Louis began delivering materials to war plants at the request of Army officers, relieving critical shortages which had developed at many factories. Some 3000 drivers struck over demands for a $5 a week increase over the old scale of $30 to $40 for a 48-hour week. William Ryan, president of the Teamsters and Chauffeurs Local, said the strike was unauthorized.

Bethlehem Complies Under Protest With WLB Wage Order

ers Union, whose demand for $1 a day wage increases in "little steel" was cut to 44 cents by WLB, announced that United States Steel and its affiliates—"big steel"—employing 400,000 workers, were being notified that the union wanted to reopen contracts to bring wages up to the new level of "little steel's" 137,000 employes. Demands for similar increases for 225,000 other steel workers will be sought later, Murray said in Pittsburgh.

In the course of WLB hearings on the "little steel" case it was generally assumed that any increase granted would almost automatically be extended to the entire industry. However, the panel which reported on the case to the full board refused to acknowledge an assertion by Inland that increases in steel would "spread like wildfire" to other industries.

The Westinghouse agreement was concluded on the day the steel decision was announced, but remains subject to ratification by the union, it was learned. Although agreement was reached prior to the steel announcement, the conferees knew from advance newspaper accounts what the steel increase was going to be.

Since then, it was learned, G. E. and Union officials have conferred with Steelman. Yesterday company and union representatives, having agreed on the same 5½ cents an hour increase previously approved for Westinghouse, took a plane to New York City to present the proposal to Charles E. Wilson, G. E. president, as a preliminary to final approval.

Dr. Steelman declined to comment on the negotiations other than to acknowledge that they had been taking place.

In the background of the electrical industries proposed increase is their need to remain on a parity with steel, it was said. Westinghouse's main plant is in Pittsburgh which is also the country's steel center. Pittsburgh wage rates have always been "tied" to steel wage rates.

Because of the competition between Westinghouse and G. E., it is almost inevitable that G. E. will follow suit with any Westinghouse wage increase. In the spring of 1941 when wages in steel were increased 10 cents an hour, both companies also increased their wage rates by the same amount.

One of the more interesting aspects of the G. E. and Westinghouse negotiations is that the negotiators failed to make reference to the War Labor Board's new wage stabiliaztion formula announced in the steel decision. The formula provides that wage increases up to 15 per cent may be granted to restore a group of workers purchasing power to January 1, 1941 levels. Because of the present nature of the companies' wage structures, it was generally assumed yesterday that substantially the same result might have been secured had the formula been applied.

Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem, announced his concern's acceptance of the WLB "little steel" order by making public in New York the text of a letter to WLB which warned that he considered the order harmful to the national economy and the war effort.

Bethlehem intended to comply, Grace said, only because it regarded the WLB order as a mandate from President Roosevelt.

In Chicago, Ernest S. Ballard, general counsel for Inland, sent to the WLB a telegram stating that the company was preparing to institute suit in a Federal Court challenging WLB's power to impose union security in labor contracts "within three days."

Inland will be ready for a hearing "as soon as a court can hear us," Ballard's telegram read.

Grace in his letter accepting the order stated that it ignores "the basic principles on which our Government was founded."

Meanwhile, in New York, the National Association of Manufacturers announced that more than two-thirds of the Nation's manufacturing industries already have granted wage increases of 15 per cent or more since January 1, 1941. These industries would not be entitled to increases under the WLB wage stabilization formula.

The N. A. M. warned manufacturers not to grant any increase which might violate the formula, stating that "the disastrous inflationary effects of general blanket wage increases at this time can be avoided by careful adherence to the policies advocated by the War Labor Board."

R.A.F. and Russian Planes Pound Reich

In Hospital

1 Left of 19 Yanks First To Join RAF

By William R. Downs
United Press Staff Writer

An R. A. F. Hospital in Eastern England, July 22.—There were 19 of them back in the days when Britain was waging a lone fight against the Axis—19 American lads who paid their own way over here to join the fight with the R. A. F.

He is 33-year-old Alex "Scotty" Cooke of Los Angeles. His back is broken in three places. For nine months he has lain in a hospital cheating death with each tick of the clock.

They came from Texas, New York, the Carolinas, the Middle West. They knew it would be dangerous and for many it was strictly a one-way trip.

"Now, I'm the only one left and someone's gotta represent that bunch," Scotty said, occasionally wincing from pain.

Right now he's fighting a tougher opponent than any that ever appeared in the sights of his guns from the turret of the Wellington bombers in which he had made over 50 trips against enemy territory.

When he was brought to this hospital, doctors said Scotty was going to die. Scotty said he wasn't.

Today, the doctors, who are amazed at what they call his plain American guts," are a little more hopeful—not much. But Scotty is as determined as ever.

He has a sister, Mrs. Barbara Lambert of Berkeley, Calif. Scotty said that she has been prepared for him to "snuff out" but "I've fooled her so many times I think I'm going to do it again."

Scotty is lonely for Americans to talk to.

He said that when his group bought their own tickets to come to Britain:

"We thought we would have a little fun; see some action and do some good before the United States came into the war."

Scotty said that back home he had held numerous jobs but the one he liked best was with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, where he was a movie script writer and dabbled in songwriting. He got interested in aviation so when the war came along he decided "to do something about it."

"Hell," he said. "I'd do the same thing over again—back and all. But the next time I'd want to be in an American uniform. As a matter of fact, when I get out of here I'm going to transfer to the United States Air Corps."

Scotty "got it" one night last September, when his Wellington, assigned to bomb Frankfort, was damaged and made a crash landing on its return.

British Use 2-Ton Bombs on Duisberg; East Prussia Hit

By the Associated Press

London, July 22.—A force of 300 R. A. F. bombers dumped more than 50 two-ton "block-destroying" bombs and other high explosives last night on industrial Duisburg and the world's largest river port nearby while the Russian Air Force struck at the German military power at Koenigsberg, East Prussia.

Giving the Germans little rest from air raids, British Spitfires flew over the Channel this afternoon for the fourth successive day's raid on objectives in occupied territory, including Dunkerque and Le Touquet. The planes attacked railway engines, factories, gunposts and barges, the Air Ministry reported.

The ministry said the raid on Duisburg, the heaviest by the British since the 1000-plane attack on Bremen June 25 and the first night raid on the Ruhr city since July 13, cost the British 13 bombers.

But, the air ministry added with a note of satisfaction, "really good fires" were left blazing in Duisburg itself and in the dock area of the river port. Duisburg-Rhurort, just north of the city at the confluence of the Ruhr and Rhine Rivers.

Good weather, for the lack of which Britain's bombers have been held back often this month, favored the attackers.

[Four-thousand-pound bombs have been used in earlier raids on Germany, the United Press reported, but it was noteworthy that it was the first time that the air ministry had disclosed the approximate number dropped in a single attack. Their direct force wipes out everything within a wide area and gouges out a crater which may be deep enough to hold a 5-story building, but even wider damage is done by the concussion from their blast, which knocks the life out of humans.]

In the Russian air attack, the Moscow radio said military and industrial targets in the city area and suburbs of Koenigsberg were raided in difficult weather. Six large fires and four heavy explosions resulted, the radio added.

Russian planes previously struck Koenigsberg last Saturday and reported 38 fires left in the city.

The Germans announced six British raiders were shot down last night in attacks which caused civilian casualties in Duisburg and Moers. The Germans also declared that the raiders dropped a "fairly great number of high explosives and incendiary bombs."

The Germans carried out a light attack at scattered points in eastern England, causing some damage. One German bomber was destroyed.

The British, meanwhile, still were hearing of results of the 1000-plane attack May 30 on Cologne. The British Press Association quoted a "reliable foreign source" as saying 10,000 Germans were killed in the attack and were buried in communal graves; that the Germans moved 140,000 persons from the city; that houses by the hundreds were ruined beyond repair; and at least 16 factories, including railway workshops, were destroyed.

R. A. F. Bombs Plants in Ghent

London (Thursday), July 23 (INS). R. A. F. bombers swept over the Nazi-occupied city of Ghent in Belgium last night to attack the important chemical works and power station in the city, it was officially announced early today.

Two-motored American-built Boston (Douglas) bombers scored many hits on both of the main objectives.

2 Raid Alarms In Kuibyshev

Kuibyshev, July 22 (AP).—Two air-raid alarms sounded here today, both of which passed without incident.

The sirens first shrilled at 2 a. m. for an alarm which lasted two hours. The second began at 9 a. m. and the all-clear was heard at 10:15 a. m.

U. S. Air Chief Sent to Russia

By Thomas F. Reynolds
Copyright by Chicago Sun

President Roosevelt yesterday dispatched one of the Army's top fighting airmen, Maj. Gen. Follett Bradley, to Russia as military observers here predicted almost immediate large scale American Army air operations in the European and Middle Eastern war theaters.

Bradley's mission suggested the possibility that United States air forces soon might open action on the Soviet-Russian front. Bradley had been commanding general of the First Army Air Force at Mitchell Field, N. Y.—the important combat unit which defends the Eastern Coast.

His mission to Russia was disclosed at the White House shortly before Soviet Ambassador Maxim Litvinov called on Mr. Roosevelt to repeat once again that a second front must be opened immediately in Europe if distaster is to be avoided on the Eastern Front.

White House Secretary William D. Hassett revealed the Bradley mission with a casual remark that he is to represent the United States on a "Russian-American commission." Other Government sources later refused to amplify the remark, but it was indicated Russia and the United States now have established a joint military commission and that Bradley is to represent American Air Forces on it.

Chinese Drive Japs From Base In Chekiang

By the Associated Press

Chungking, July 22.—The Chinese have recaptured Kienteh, 65 miles southwest of Hangchow, main Japanese base in Chekiang Province, after a five-day battle which ended Sunday, the high command announced today.

The war bulletin said fighting was continuing around the Chekiang coast port of Wenchow from which the Chinese are trying to drive the invaders for a second time.

Kienteh, on the Tsientang River, was one of the first towns seized by the Japanese when they opened their Chekiang offensive in mid-May.

Heavy fighting also was reported at Lanchi, on the Chekiang-Kiangsi Railway 20 miles south of Kienteh. There, the communique said, the Chinese repulsed a sortie by the Japanese inflicting 200 casualties.

In eastern Kiangsi the Chinese have attacked Japanese positions southwest of Kwangfeng, killing a number of Japanese, the high command reported.

Meanwhile it was reported 30,000 Chinese troops still were fighting in Burma, supplied with food and materiel by American transport planes.

Lauchlin Currie, administrative assistant to President Roosevelt, conferred for several hours today with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek on matters of an undisclosed nature.

Berlin (From German Broadcasts) July 22 (AP).—The German radio broadcast a Shanghai dispatch tonight reporting that industrial plants of the city of Chungking were bombed for three hours today by Japanese planes. The report said Chungking's three aircraft factories were seriously damaged and an assembly plant was destroyed by fire.

Appointment Ban For Congress Candidates Urged

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Candidates for Congress would be barred from appointment to Federal office for two years after their candidacy, under a bill introduced yesterday by Representative Joseph W. Martin, House Republican leader.

Declaring that this was "contrary to the spirit of clean, fair politics," Martin offered his proposal as an amendment to the Hatch law. He also would prevent appointment of members of Congress to Federal jobs during their service in Congress.

British Attack Along 40-Mile Front

Barrani, 250 miles from the R. A. F. bases.

In Suda Bay, Crete, two medium-sized supply ships were hit, a near-miss was scored on a larger vessel and a pier was set afire, while in the desert a concentration of 1000 Axis vehicles was bombed and motorized infantry moving up the coastal road was dispersed. The Crete raid was described as "in force."

Although there was no official mention of parachute tactics or training observed on Crete, the attack there, 350 miles overseas from Egyptian bases, was regarded as a precautionary mission against any surprise to offset the failure of Axis desert forces to advance since they were stalled before El Alamein June 30.

The fact that the R. A. F. was able to carry out almost unrestricted aerial operations testified to the effectiveness of recent mass attacks on Rommel's two foremost air bases at El Daba and Fuka, where more than 50 aircraft were caught on the ground and bombed.

Frontline dispatches said the raids not only destroyed or damaged many Axis planes but forced Rommel to resort to improvised airfields.

The R. A. F. Middle East News Service reported that torpedo planes had scored at least three hits on a medium-sized freighter and probably struck an escorting destroyer in the Mediterranean, but did not disclose the date of the attack.

Naval commentators, summarizing the sea and air attacks on Matruh, declaring that British warships and Navy bombers are making a habit of "knocking hell" out of that most advanced port of entry for Axis supplies.

Nazis 20 Miles From Rostov; Reds Retreat

German tanks and other material.

In the Voronezh sector some 250 miles north of the critical Rostov area, the Russians announced, their soldiers captured a populated place straddling a highway and continued to advance in an offensive which apparently hopes to bring some relief to the armies of the deep south.

During yesterday, the communique added, 15 enemy tanks were destroyed and about 2000 men were killed in the Voronezh fighting.

It was an hour of utmost gravity in the south. The Red army organ, Red Star, said frankly: "Terrible days face the country." It called upon the fighting men of Russia to emulate the example of the 28 Red soldiers who, in the defense of Moscow last winter, died fighting a tank charge with little more than their bare hands.

The nation was summoning all its strength to the front. Soldiers with newly sewn wound stripes, introduced only last week, were appearing in the battle line.

One dispatch said the Germans were bringing up new tanks, infantry and aircraft for a great push into the country between the Don and the Volga.

Soviet air strength in the South was reported increasing, storming the tanks and infantry with which the Germans were reinforcing their columns and raiding airdromes as the invaders pushed forward.

(The German high command announced that "organized resistance of the enemy in the Rostov region has collapsed," and said German troops were standing before a defended bridgehead which runs in a semicircle outside the town. Possibly this referred to a Don tributary which loops through Novocherkassk about 20 miles outside Rostov proper.

(It also was claimed that the lower Don had been crossed east of the Donets River and that only slight Russian resistance was being offered on the direct approaches to Stalingrad.)

The loss of either Rostov or Stalingrad would be a tragic blow, but the loss of communications which they control would be far worse.

The fall of Stalingrad would mean severance of northern and southern armies and breakage of the Volga lifeline to Caspian Sea and east Caucasian oil pools.

The loss of Rostov with the present battle southeast of Millerovo would practically isolate the Red army of the west Caucasus.

Oil, the lifeblood of mechanized war, would be denied to large areas, or at least it would be so delayed in delivery as to slow down dangerously both the vehicles of war and the factories which make them.

The Red Army's courageous counterattacks at Voronezh, 250 miles above the southern battle areas on the upper Don, was helpful—but not enough to offset the impending perils to Rostov, Stalingrad and the Volga.

Russians Score in North . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

. . . FALL BACK IN SOUTH—The Red Army widened a wedge in the German left flank before Voronezh. Meanwhile, a million-man Nazi drive endangered Rostov (A) and Stalingrad (B). One German force (1), reportedly, is pressing down the Moscow-to-Rostov railroad and two other attacks, one from the southeast of Millerovo (2) and another from Voroshilovgrad (3), are driving on Rostov. A Nazi column also in the Millerovo area is aimed at Stalingrad

R. A. F. and Russian Planes Pound Reich

1 Left of 19 Yanks First To Join RAF

By William R. Downs
United Press Staff Writer

An R. A. F. Hospital in Eastern England, July 22.—There were 19 of them back in the days when Britain was waging a lone fight against the Axis—19 American lads who paid their own way over here to join the fight with the R. A. F.

He is 33-year-old Alex "Scotty" Cooke of Los Angeles. His back is broken in three places. For nine months he has lain in a hospital cheating death with each tick of the clock.

They came from Texas, New York, the Carolinas, the Middle West. They knew it would be dangerous and for many it was strictly a one-way trip.

"Now, I'm the only one left and someone's gotta represent that bunch," Scotty said, occasionally wincing from pain.

Right now he's fighting a tougher opponent than any that ever appeared in the sights of his guns from the turret of the Wellington bombers in which he had made over 50 trips against enemy territory.

When he was brought to this hospital, doctors said Scotty was going to die. Scotty said he wasn't.

Today, the doctors, who are amazed at what they call his plain American guts," are a little more hopeful—not much. But Scotty is as determined as ever.

He has a sister, Mrs. Barbara Lambert of Berkeley, Calif. Scotty said that she has been prepared for him to "snuff out" but "I've fooled her so many times I think I'm going to do it again."

Scotty is lonely for Americans to talk to.

He said that when his group bought their own tickets to come to Britain:

"We thought we would have a little fun; see some action and do some good before the United States came into the war."

Scotty said that back home he had held numerous jobs but the one he liked best was with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, where he was a movie script writer and dabbled in songwriting. He got interested in aviation so when the war came along he decided "to do something about it."

"Hell," he said. "I'd do the same thing over again—back and all. But the next time I'd want to be in an American uniform. As a matter of fact, when I get out of here I'm going to transfer to the United States Air Corps."

Scotty "got it" one night last September, when his Wellington, assigned to bomb Frankfort, was damaged and made a crash landing on its return.

British Use 2-Ton Bombs on Duisberg; East Prussia Hit

By the Associated Press

London, July 22.—A force of 300 R. A. F. bombers dumped more than 50 two-ton "block-destroying" bombs and other high explosives last night on industrial Duisburg and the world's largest river port nearby while the Russian Air Force struck at the German military power at Koenigsberg, East Prussia.

Giving the Germans little rest from air raids, British Spitfires flew over the Channel this afternoon for the fourth successive day's raid on objectives in occupied territory, including Dunkerque and Le Touquet. The planes attacked railway engines, factories, gunposts and barges, the Air Ministry reported.

The ministry said the raid on Duisburg, the heaviest by the British since the 1000-plane attack on Bremen June 25 and the first night raid on the Ruhr city since July 13, cost the British 13 bombers.

But, the air ministry added with a note of satisfaction, "really good fires" were left blazing in Duisburg itself and in the dock area of the river port, Duisburg-Rhurort, just north of the city at the confluence of the Ruhr and Rhine Rivers.

Good weather, for the lack of which Britain's bombers have been held back often this month, favored the attackers.

[Four-thousand-pound bombs have been used in earlier raids on Germany, the United Press reported, but it was noteworthy that it was the first time that the air ministry had disclosed the approximate number dropped in a single attack. Their direct force wipes out everything within a wide area and gouges out a crater which may be deep enough to hold a 5-story building, but even wider damage is done by the concussion from their blast, which knocks the life out of humans.]

In the Russian air attack, the Moscow radio said military and industrial targets in the city area and suburbs of Koenigsberg were raided in difficult weather. Six large fires and four heavy explosions resulted, the radio added.

Russian planes previously struck Koenigsberg last Saturday and reported 38 fires left in the city.

The Germans announced six British raiders were shot down last night in attacks which caused civilian casualties in Duisburg and Moers. The Germans also declared that the raiders dropped a "fairly great number of high explosives and incendiary bombs."

The Germans carried out a light attack at scattered points in eastern England, causing some damage. One German bomber was destroyed.

The British, meanwhile, still were hearing of results of the 1000-plane attack May 30 on Cologne. The British Press Association quoted a "reliable foreign source" as saying 10,000 Germans were killed in the attack and were buried in communal graves; that the Germans moved 140,000 persons from the city; that houses by the hundreds were ruined beyond repair; and at least 16 factories, including railway workshops, were destroyed.

R. A. F. Bombs Plants in Ghent

London (Thursday), July 23 (INS). R. A. F. bombers swept over the Nazi-occupied city of Ghent in Belgium last night to attack the important chemical works and power station in the city, it was officially announced early today.

Two-motored American-built Boston (Douglas) bombers scored many hits on both of the main objectives.

2 Raid Alarms In Kuibyshev

Kuibyshev, July 22 (AP).—Two air-raid alarms sounded here today, both of which passed without incident.

The sirens first shrilled at 2 a. m. for an alarm which lasted two hours. The second began at 9 a. m. and the all-clear was heard at 10:15 a. m.

U. S. Air Chief Sent to Russia

By Thomas F. Reynolds
Copyright by Chicago Sun

President Roosevelt yesterday dispatched one of the Army's top fighting airmen, Maj. Gen. Follett Bradley, to Russia as military observers here predicted almost immediate large scale American Army air operations in the European and Middle Eastern war theaters.

Bradley's mission suggested the possibility that United States air forces soon might open action on the Soviet-Russian front. Bradley had been commanding general of the First Army Air Force at Mitchell Field, N. Y.—the important combat unit which defends the Eastern Coast.

His mission to Russia was disclosed at the White House shortly before Soviet Ambassador Maxim Litvinov called on Mr. Roosevelt to repeat once again that a second front must be opened immediately in Europe if distaster is to be avoided on the Eastern Front.

White House Secretary William D. Hassett revealed the Bradley mission with a casual remark that he is to represent the United States on a "Russian-American commission." Other Government sources later refused to amplify the remark, but it was indicated Russia and the United States now have established a joint military commission and that Bradley is to represent American Air Forces on it.

Chinese Drive Japs From Base In Chekiang

By the Associated Press

Chungking, July 22.—The Chinese have recaptured Kienteh, 65 miles southwest of Hangchow, main Japanese base in Chekiang Province, after a five-day battle which ended Sunday, the high command announced today.

The war bulletin said fighting was continuing around the Chekiang coast port of Wenchow from which the Chinese are trying to drive the invaders for a second time.

Kienteh, on the Tsientang River, was one of the first towns seized by the Japanese when they opened their Chekiang offensive in mid-May.

Heavy fighting also was reported at Lanchi, on the Chekiang-Kiangsi Railway 20 miles south of Kienteh. There, the communique said, the Chinese repulsed a sortie by the Japanese inflicting 200 casualties.

In eastern Kiangsi the Chinese have attacked Japanese positions southwest of Kwangfeng, killing a number of Japanese, the high command reported.

Meanwhile it was reported 30,000 Chinese troops still were fighting in Burma, supplied with food and materiel by American transport planes.

Lauchlin Currie, administrative assistant to President Roosevelt, conferred for several hours today with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek on matters of an undisclosed nature.

Berlin (From German Broadcasts) July 22 (AP).—The German radio broadcast a Shanghai dispatch tonight reporting that industrial plants of the city of Chungking were bombed for three hours today by Japanese planes. The report said Chungking's three aircraft factories were seriously damaged and an assembly plant was destroyed by fire.

British Attack Along 40-Mile Front

Barrani, 250 miles from the R. A. F. bases.

In Suda Bay, Crete, two medium-sized supply ships were hit, a near-miss was scored on a larger vessel and a pier was set afire, while in the desert a concentration of 1000 Axis vehicles was bombed and motorized infantry moving up the coastal road was dispersed. The Crete raid was described as "in force."

Although there was no official mention of parachute tactics or training observed on Crete, the attack there, 350 miles overseas from Egyptian bases, was regarded as a precautionary mission against any surprise to offset the failure of Axis desert forces to advance since they were stalled before El Alamein June 30.

The fact that the R. A. F. was able to carry out almost unrestricted aerial operations testified to the effectiveness of recent mass attacks on Rommel's two foremost air bases at El Daba and Fuka, where more than 50 aircraft were caught on the ground and bombed.

Frontline dispatches said the raids not only destroyed or damaged many Axis planes but forced Rommel to resort to improvised airfields.

The R. A. F. Middle East News Service reported that torpedo planes had scored at least three hits on a medium-sized freighter and probably struck an escorting destroyer in the Mediterranean, but did not disclose the date of the attack.

Naval commentators, summarizing the sea and air attacks on Matruh, declaring that British warships and Navy bombers are making a habit of "knocking hell" out of that most advanced port of entry for Axis supplies.

Appointment Ban For Congress Candidates Urged

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Candidates for Congress would be barred from appointment to Federal office for two years after their candidacy, under a bill introduced yesterday by Representative Joseph W. Martin, House Republican leader.

Declaring that this was "contrary to the spirit of clean, fair politics," Martin offered his proposal as an amendment to the Hatch law. He also would prevent appointment of members of Congress to Federal jobs during their service in Congress.

Nazis 20 Miles From Rostov; Reds Retreat

German tanks and other material.

In the Voronezh sector some 250 miles north of the critical Rostov area, the Russians announced, their soldiers captured a populated place straddling a highway and continued to advance in an offensive which apparently hopes to bring some relief to the armies of the deep south.

During yesterday, the communique added, 15 enemy tanks were destroyed and about 2000 men were killed in the Voronezh fighting.

It was an hour of utmost gravity in the south. The Red army organ, Red Star, said frankly: "Terrible days face the country." It called upon the fighting men of Russia to emulate the example of the 28 Red soldiers who, in the defense of Moscow last winter, died fighting a tank charge with little more than their bare hands.

The nation was summoning all its strength to the front. Soldiers with newly sewn wound stripes, introduced only last week, were appearing in the battle line.

One dispatch said the Germans were bringing up new tanks, infantry and aircraft for a great push into the country between the Don and the Volga.

Soviet air strength in the South was reported increasing, storming the tanks and infantry with which the Germans were reinforcing their columns and raiding airdromes as the invaders pushed forward.

(The German high command announced that "organized resistance of the enemy in the Rostov region has collapsed," and said German troops were standing before a defended bridgehead which runs in a semicircle outside the town. Possibly this referred to a Don tributary which loops through Novocherkassk about 20 miles outside Rostov proper.

(It also was claimed that the lower Don had been crossed east of the Donets River and that only slight Russian resistance was being offered on the direct approaches to Stalingrad.)

The loss of either Rostov or Stalingrad would be a tragic blow, but the loss of communications which they control would be far worse.

The fall of Stalingrad would mean severance of northern and southern armies and breakage of the Volga lifeline to Caspian Sea and east Caucasian oil pools.

The loss of Rostov with the present battle southeast of Millerovo would practically isolate the Red army of the west Caucasus.

Oil, the lifeblood of mechanized war, would be denied to large areas or at least it would be so delayed in delivery as to slow down dangerously both the vehicles of war and the factories which make them.

The Red Army's courageous counterattacks at Voronezh, 250 miles above the southern battle areas on the upper Don, was helpful—but not enough to offset the impending perils to Rostov, Stalingrad and the Volga.

Maritime Commission Reaffirms Its Stand Against Letting Higgins Build Shipyards

By the Associated Press

Andrew J. Higgins, New Orleans shipbuilder, clung today to a slender hope that President Roosevelt would reverse a Maritime Commission decision canceling his contract for 200 vessels to be built by mass production methods.

Meanwhile, he said, he was not ready "to reveal this whole picture," adding that "it's not a pretty thing."

Under his contract, Higgins was to have built a vast shipyard in a reclaimed Louisiana swamp. Instead of ways there were to have been four long channels down which the ships under construction would pass, as though along an assembly line.

Last Saturday, however, the Maritime Commission asserted there was not enough steel for the job.

Higins came to Washington Tuesday seeking a reversal. He had an audience with the commission yesterday and later, it reaffirmed the cancellation order.

Meeting reporters Higgins challenged the statement that there was insufficient steel, and said he would like to know whether the cancellation was the result of "fumbling and bumbling," or whether "ulterior forces" had been at work.

Congressional committees investigating the steel shortage will be "dumfounded" at the amount of available steel, he said.

"There is ample steel for the entire shipbuilding program and all the yards operating and authorized —including mine—to the maximum program of the number of ships allocated," he said. "There is ample steel for all that and 100,000 tons over that in surplus, not including the 'black market.'"

By the black market, he added thathe meant steel hoarders who would sell only in less than carload lots. The "carload lot patriots," he called them.

The commission, he said, had spoken of the cost of his yard as excessive, and there was no basis for that statement. By his methods a ship would be produced with 300,000 less man-hours of labor than by conventional methods. The wages saved on the first 150 ships would pay for the yard, he asserted. In addition the yard was to have included repair facilities for 12 vessels simultaneously, facilities that could be produced with conventional drydocks only at enormous cost.

He had been informed, he said, that a large plant of the Bethlehem Steel Co. which had been fabricating steel for his yard would be closed down for four to five weeks as a result of the cancellation, and an immence amount of steel already prepared would become the equivalent of scrap.

"If this thing isn't corrected," he said, "if this is an example of what we have to pass through, we are in a hell of a fix."

During the day, Higgins called at the White House. Unable to see the President he laid his case before Mr. Roosevelt's secretary, Marvin McIntyre. When the President is given the facts, Higgins said, he was hopeful that the commission would be reversed.

He planned to stay in Washington for several days, principally to talk with Congressional committees interested in the case.

The Senate Defense Investigating Committee headed by Senator Truman (Democrat), Missouri, announced that it would inquire into the Higgins contract situation, the proposal of Higgins and Henry J. Kaiser, shipbuilder of Portland, Oreg., to build giant cargo planes, and the availability of steel. The steel hearings are to start August 6.

In the House, the Merchant Marine Committee, which on Tuesday named a subcommittee to study the Higgins situation, delegated a second subcommittee yesterday to look into the "alleged shortage of steel for shipbuilding." The group also was instructed to study other relevant matters "pertinent to the proper prosecution of the war." Representative Boykin (Democrat), Alabama, was named chairman.

Next Year or 1944

Victory Seen By Churchill's 'Chutist Son

CAPT. RANDOLPH CHURCHILL.

By the Associated Press

New York, July 22.—Randolph Churchill, 31-year-old son of the British prime minister, predicted today that "if we're lucky" the United Nations would win the war by the end of next year, "and if we're unlucky then we'll win by the end of 1944."

"We, the British, were only one-quarter ready for this war," Churchill said at a press conference. "Germany prepared for 20 years for this war. The English have not been as clever in this war as the enemy.

"We have been largely enthusiastic amateurs in this war as compared to professional military men. We still have a lot to learn, but we are learning fast and we are going to win."

Churchill, captain of a British parachutist formation, reached here yesterday from Egypt where he suffered a crushed vertebra in an automobile accident near Cairo last May.

"Rommel Has Shot Bolt"

Churchill said he took a hopeful view of the Egyptian situation.

"I think Rommel has shot his bolt," he said. "Whatever help he wants must come from Russia—and I don't think he's going to get it."

As Churchill talked he bent forward to ease the pain in his back, which was strapped in splints.

"One thing I'd like to say about that Egyptian campaign was the extraordinary calm and loyalty of the Egyptians. Even when the going got tough, their loyalty was unswerving—a tremendous vindication of 70 years of loyalty to the United Kingdom," he said.

Churchill said he was on his way home to England to convalesce and hoped to get back into action soon.

"We had decisive air superiority in Egypt, but I realize the results were disappointing to the folks back home," he continued. "You don't get the same sort of dividend in the desert in air warfare. It's hard to hit anything; the troops are scattered, and there are no long lines of troops to gun for.

German Guns Terrific

"The 88-millimeter antitank guns the Germans used were terrific. We couldn't match them. But tremendous reinforcements from this country—superior tanks, guns—are reaching us out there and I am extremely hopeful of the result."

Churchill added that although the present combined British and American air force in the Far East was far superior to anything yet shown by Germany "neither Britain nor the United States has produced any tank as good as the best of German tanks."

Churchill said that there was no American fighter plane that compared to the efficiency of the German Messerschmitt 109-F but that American long range bombers did a better job than done by any German bomber.

"Remember, I'm talking about what has happened in the past few weeks—and your production here and back in Britain is remedying that situation, fast," he said. "The Spitfire 5 fighter, for instance, is a superior plane now reaching Egypt."

Navy Develops Secret Weapon

By the Associated Press

The Navy has a mysterious new weapon, the nature of which is a jealously-guarded secret, the House was told yesterday by Chairman Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia of the Naval Committee.

The disclosure came as the chamber, by voice vote, passed and sent to the Senate a measure authorizing expenditure of $975,634,000 for naval shore facilities to supplement the recently-passed $8,850,000,000 fleet expansion program.

In cautionusly-phrased sentences, Vinson declared that 30 million dollars of the new authorization would be spent "for a kind of secret training and a kind of secret weapon." He left the details to his colleagues' imaginations.

"This," he said, "is a matter the Naval Affairs Committee should leave entirely to the prudence of the men who are going to carry out the secret work. I do not know except in the most general way where they will be located—within so many miles of the coast and so many miles back of that."

The Georgian said that the necessity for secrecy was so great that testimony concerning the weapon, taken in executive session, had been excluded from even the committee's private records.

The authorization measure itself provided for broad expansion of naval aviation training facilities designed to turn out 2500 aviators a month, and development of present and new naval outposts as bases for operation against the enemy.

Representative Mott (Republican), Oregon, declared that a number of the outposts to be developed were "of great strategic value" and that several of them were to be located in Alaska.

A short time earlier Representative Coffee (Democrat), Washington, demanded that troops and men o' war be sent to oust the Japanese from the Aleutian Islands "immediately." Coffee said that the Japanese there were not a "token" force, that they were headed for Alaska.

Vinson said that some of the naval shore facilities would be established at Panama and on islands in the Pacific as well as Alaska.

British Unions Demand Second Front Now

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, July 22.—The plight of Russian armies retreating into the vital Caucasus swelled the clamor in Britain tonight for a second front to divert Germany's steel might from the East.

However, the government and virtually all the press kept strictly silent on the prospect.

Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard, three large trade unions and the British Communist party all cried out for swift action by British and United States armies based in these islands.

The Evening Standard declared in discussing the possibility of a Russian defeat:

"All then depends not on how much we bring but how quickly. The outcome of a Soviet defeat would be violent and possibly calamitous for our cause in every theater of war."

The big union of British War Workers called for the immediate establishment of a second front.

The Electrical Trades Union unanimously adopted a resolution asking the government to open a second front. The union, claiming 60,000 members, is the largest of its kind in England.

Yesterday the Mine Workers Federation numbering 600,000 members made a similar appeal.

The Communist Party of London held a mass meeting in Westminster tonight demanding a second front.

A discordant note came from the Evening News which said Britain's shipping losses were "a darker peril to the United Nations than Russia's fight for life."

British military sources who have discouraged the idea that a second front would be opened immediately called the situation in Russia "grave and potentially dangerous."

These informants rejected the claim that all organized resistance was ended in the Rostov sector. They said they believed Marshal Timoshenko's rear guard was fighting bitterly to cover the passage of his main army across the Don. The Soviet commander might try to hold Rostov, focus of German attacks in the south, they said.

Most of the city is north of the Don, however, and thus it would be difficult to defend if the main armies are across the river.

The German columns approaching Rostov have failed to cut off any large bodies of Soviet troops, these sources said. They added Timoshenko's ability to keep his armies intact is of primary importance to the Allies.

Last Saturday, however, the Maritime Commission asserted there was not enough steel for the job.

Higins came to Washington Tuesday seeking a reversal. He had an audience with the commission yesterday and later, it reaffirmed the cancellation order.

Meeting reporters Higgins challenged the statement that there was insufficient steel, and said he would like to know whether the cancellation was the result of "fumbling and bumbling," or whether "ulterior forces" had been at work.

Congressional committees investigating the steel shortage will be "dumfounded" at the amount of available steel, he said.

"There is ample steel for the entire shipbuilding program and all the yards operating and authorized —including mine—to the maximum program of the number of ships allocated," he said. "There is ample steel for all that and 100,000 tons over that in surplus, not including the 'black market.'"

By the black market, he added thathe meant steel hoarders who would sell only in less than carload lots. The "carload lot patriots," he called them.

The commission, he said, had spoken of the cost of his yard as excessive, and there was no basis for that statement. By his methods a ship would be produced with 300,000 less man-hours of labor than by conventional methods. The wages saved on the first 150 ships would pay for the yard, he asserted. In addition the yard was to have included repair facilities for 12 vessels simultaneously, facilities that could be produced with conventional drydocks only at enormous cost.

He had been informed, he said, that a large plant of the Bethlehem Steel Co. which had been fabricating steel for his yard would be closed down for four to five weeks as a result of the cancellation, and an immence amount of steel already prepared would become the equivalent of scrap.

"If this thing isn't corrected," he said, "if this is an example of what we have to pass through, we are in a hell of a fix."

During the day, Higgins called at the White House. Unable to see the President he laid his case before Mr. Roosevelt's secretary, Marvin McIntyre. When the President is given the facts, Higgins said, he was hopeful that the commission would be reversed.

He planned to stay in Washington for several days, principally to talk with Congressional committees interested in the case.

The Senate Defense Investigating Committee headed by Senator Truman (Democrat), Missouri, announced that it would inquire into the Higgins contract situation, the proposal of Higgins and Henry J. Kaiser, shipbuilder of Portland, Oreg., to build giant cargo planes, and the availability of steel. The steel hearings are to start August 6.

In the House, the Merchant Marine Committee, which on Tuesday named a subcommittee to study the Higgins situation, delegated a second subcommittee yesterday to look into the "alleged shortage of steel for shipbuilding." The group also was instructed to study other relevant matters "pertinent to the proper prosecution of the war." Representative Boykin (Democrat), Alabama, was named chairman.

Next Year or 1944

Victory Seen By Churchill's 'Chutist Son

CAPT. RANDOLPH CHURCHILL,

By the Associated Press

New York, July 22.—Randolph Churchill, 31-year-old son of the British prime minister, predicted today that "if we're lucky" the United Nations would win the war by the end of next year, "and if we're unlucky then we'll win by the end of 1944."

"We, the British, were only one-quarter ready for this war," Churchill said at a press conference. "Germany prepared for 20 years for this war. The English have not been as clever in this war as the enemy.

"We have been largely enthusiastic amateurs in this war as compared to professional military men. We still have a lot to learn, but we are learning fast and we are going to win."

Churchill, captain of a British parachutist formation, reached here yesterday from Egypt where he suffered a crushed vertebra in an automobile accident near Cairo last May.

"Rommel Has Shot Bolt"

Churchill said he took a hopeful view of the Egyptian situation.

"I think Rommel has shot his bolt," he said. "Whatever help he wants must come from Russia—and I don't think he's going to get it."

As Churchill talked he bent forward to ease the pain in his back, which was strapped in splints.

"One thing I'd like to say about that Egyptian campaign was the extraordinary calm and loyalty of the Egyptians. Even when the going got tough, their loyalty was unswerving—a tremendous vindication of 70 years of loyalty to the United Kingdom," he said.

Churchill said he was on his way home to England to convalesce and hoped to get back into action soon.

"We had decisive air superiority in Egypt, but I realize the results were disappointing to the folks back home," he continued. "You don't get the same sort of dividend in the desert in air warfare. It's hard to hit anything; the troops are scattered, and there are no long lines of troops to gun for.

German Guns Terrific

"The 88-millimeter antitank guns the Germans used were terrific. We couldn't match them. But tremendous reinforcements from this country—superior tanks, guns—are reaching us out there and I am extremely hopeful of the result."

Churchill added that although the present combined British and American air force in the Far East was far superior to anything yet shown by Germany "neither Britain nor the United States has produced any tank as good as the best of German tanks."

Churchill said that there was no American fighter plane that compared to the efficiency of the German Messerschmitt 109-F but that American long range bombers did a better job than done by any German bomber.

"Remember, I'm talking about what has happened in the past few weeks—and your production here and back in Britain is remedying that situation, fast," he said. "The Spitfire 5 fighter, for instance, is a superior plane now reaching Egypt."

Navy Develops Secret Weapon

By the Associated Press

The Navy has a mysterious new weapon, the nature of which is a jealously-guarded secret, the House was told yesterday by Chairman Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia of the Naval Committee.

The disclosure came as the chamber, by voice vote, passed and sent to the Senate a measure authorizing expenditure of $975,634,000 for naval shore facilities to supplement the recently-passed $8,850,000,000 fleet expansion program.

In cautiously-phrased sentences, Vinson declared that 30 million dollars of the new authorization would be spent "for a kind of secret training and a kind of secret weapon." He left the details to his colleagues' imaginations.

"This," he said, "is a matter the Naval Affairs Committee should leave entirely to the prudence of the men who are going to carry out the secret work. I do not know except in the most general way where they will be located—within so many miles of the coast and so many miles back of that."

The Georgian said that the necessity for secrecy was so great that testimony concerning the weapon, taken in executive session, had been excluded from even the committee's private records.

The authorization measure itself provided for broad expansion of naval aviation training facilities designed to turn out 2500 aviators a month, and development of present and new naval outposts as bases for operation against the enemy.

Representative Mott (Republican), Oregon, declared that a number of the outposts to be developed were "of great strategic value" and that several of them were to be located in Alaska.

A short time earlier Representative Coffee (Democrat), Washington, demanded that troops and men o' war be sent to oust the Japanese from the Aleutian Islands "immediately." Coffee said that the Japanese there were not a "token" force, that they were headed for Alaska.

Vinson said that some of the naval shore facilities would be established at Panama and on islands in the Pacific as well as Alaska.

British Unions Demand Second Front Now

By Drew Middleton

Associated Press Staff Writer

London, July 22.—The plight of Russian armies retreating into the vital Caucasus swelled the clamor in Britain tonight for a second front to divert Germany's steel might from the East.

However, the government and virtually all the press kept strictly silent on the prospect.

Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard, three large trade unions and the British Communist party all cried out for swift action by British and United States armies based in these islands.

The Evening Standard declared in discussing the possibility of a Russian defeat:

"All then depends not on how much we bring but how quickly. The outcome of a Soviet defeat would be violent and possibly calamitous for our cause in every theater of war."

The big union of British War Workers called for the immediate establishment of a second front.

The Electrical Trades Union unanimously adopted a resolution asking the government to open a second front. The union, claiming 60,000 members, is the largest of its kind in England.

Yesterday the Mine Workers Federation numbering 600,000 members made a similar appeal.

The Communist Party of London held a mass meeting in Westminster tonight demanding a second front.

A discordant note came from the Evening News which said Britain's shipping losses were "a darker peril to the United Nations than Russia's fight for life."

British military sources who have discouraged the idea that a second front would be opened immediately called the situation in Russia "grave and potentially dangerous."

These informants rejected the claim that all organized resistance was ended in the Rostov sector. They said they believed Marshal Timoshenko's rear guard was fighting bitterly to cover the passage of his main army across the Don. The Soviet commander might try to hold Rostov, focus of German attacks in the south, they said.

Most of the city is north of the Don, however, and thus it would be difficult to defend if the main armies are across the river.

The German columns approaching Rostov have failed to cut off any large bodies of Soviet troops, these sources said. They added Timoshenko's ability to keep his armies intact is of primary importance to the Allies.

3 Saboteurs Testify in Effort To Avoid Death Penalty

Three of the eight German spies on trial before the President's Military Commission took the stand yesterday in their own behalf.

After hearing these and other witnesses the commission adjourned until tomorrow morning. The reason for interrupting the defense case was not told, the presiding general, Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy sayig only that it was "at the request of counsel."

One of the defense witnesses was believed to be Mrs. Gerda Melind, Chicago widow, who was at one time engaged to Herbert Haupt, 22, the youngest of the spies. Another was Mrs. Agnes Jordan, whose son once gave Haupt a beating for pro-Nazi expressions.

Mrs. Melind lost, for the first time, yesterday, the cool composure she has manifested since she was first called to testify in the secret trial. She was led out of the court room near collapse, sobbing and with reddened eyes. Evidently she had broken down while being examined before the seven grain generals who may send her former finance and his seven fellow spies to their deaths.

The calling of Mrs. Melind to the witness stand indicated that Haupt was one of those who tried to put in a defense to the charge of being a spy who sneaked into America in war time on a belligerent mission.

There had been indications, previously, that one of the others who testified was George John Dasch, 39, the leader of the four who landed on Long Island in fog and darkness the night of June 13. Dasch is the spy who has clung to hope that his life will be spared in consideration of the long and detailed confession in which he told all about the plans of the German High Command for a reign of terror in America.

There was nothing to show which of the others had taken the stand. However, it was not believed the trial would end until all eight had grasped whatever hope of mercy a full disclosure in open court might offer.

This suggested that the trial might end tomorrow night, if this testimony is brief, or might extend into next week, if the other spies talk at length.

ington in the last two years and a distributor of the then anti-British book, "Lord Lothian vs. Lord Lothian," which was instigated and published by the German agent, George Sylvester Viereck.

Dr. Donald Judson McDaniel, a dentist who made an avocation of subversive agitation and hired an artist to turn his propaganda ideas into pictures and cartoons.

Otto Brennermann, the artist, who did this work for McDaniel and others.

William J. Connor, First Assistant United States Attorney, got these warrants on orders from Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and John T. M. Reddan in Washington. These special assistants to the Attorney General conducted the grand jury investigation here into the Nation-wide conspiracy alleged in the secret indictment.

Warrants were out in New York for:

William Griffin, publisher of the New York Enquirer, paying client of the Nazi propaganda service Transocean, and collaborator of the Nazi agent Viereck.

Col. Eugene Nelson Sanctuary, promoter of the Fascist organization, American Christian Defenders, and author of a book, "War Guilt and War Mongers," which attacked England and the American Government.

Robert Edward Edmondson, whose paper was called American Vigilante and who once issued a chart purporting to prove that "Roosevelt" was an alias to conceal a Jewish family name.

Russell K. Lambeau, assistant United States attorney in Los Angeles, said last night that seven men in his district were named in the secret indictment. Four of them were already in custody. They were:

Robert Noble and Ellis O. Jones, who were given prison terms of five and four years, respectively, this week for seditious conspiracy and are wanted by the State of California for violating the anti-subversion law.

Hermann Max Schwinn, former Silver Shirter and promoter of the Deutscher-Amerikaner Bund.

Hans Diebel, former operator of the Aryan Book Shop, which was set up in the Deutsches Haus in Los Angeles.

Schwinn and Diebel are under indictment in New York for conspiring with other Bund leaders to thwart the Selective Service Act.

Caught last night, in San Diego, was Constantin Leon de Aryan, editor of The Broom, distributor of tons of isolationist speeches under Congresional frank and now a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress. He was held overnight without bail, for hearing today upon removal to Washington to face the conspiracy charges.

Wanted also in the West were David Baxter, chancellor of the secret, Revolutionist Social Republic Society. This armed band was poised to seize control of the American Government when a revolution broke out. They said this was imminent.

The seventh defendant from the far West was William Kullgren, editor of the pro-Nazi monthly, Beacon Light, who slyly hinted at the assassination of President Roosevelt and other officials. He is already under indictment in California for sedition.

The trail of the alleged conspirators led to Omaha, Nebr., where Maloney despatched orders for the arrest of Charles B. Hudson, whose weekly bulletin, "America in Danger!" has attacked the Government, the British and the Jews for five years, meanwhile justifying the Nazis and promoting the efforts of other American workers along the same line.

Four defendants were sought in Wichita, Kans., were:

Elmer J. Garner, 78, and his son, James Franklin Garner, 48, who already are under indictment for sedition and conspiracy in connection with material which appeared in their paper, Publicity. The paper was cited for sedition and barred from the mails.

Gerald B. Winrod, the pro-Nazi editor of the monthly magazine, Defender, which published the work of many of the other defendants.

Hudson de Priest, a collaborator of both Winrod and the Garners.

United States marshals from Indianapolis were sent to pick up Court Asher, Muncie, Ind., whose paper, The X-Ray, was barred from the mails a few weeks ago after a hearing on a charge of sedition.

No hunt was necessary for these three defendants:

George Sylvester Viereck, the Nazi agent, who was in the District Jail last night, waiting for a ruling on his appeal of a prison sentence of 2 to 6 years for violating the Foreign Agents Act.

Prescott Freese Dennett, Viereck's Washington operative, who was taken in custody in Fort Jefferson, Mo., as soon as Army officials learned he was under indictment. He was drafted a few weeks ago.

Ralph Townsend, the Japanese agent who wrote for Scribner's Commentator, who is under a prison sentence of 8 to 24 months

Senate Votes Grain Alcohol Rubber Bill

Brushing aside Administration opposition, the Senate passed a measure yesterday to create an independent agency for the production of synthetic rubber from grain alcohol.

Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky complained that the bill would deprive the War Production Board of control over much of the rubber program and declared that if it should be passed by the House, "I should hope fervently that the President would disapprove it."

Barkley's plea found no echo among his colleagues, however, and the measure passed without a record vote.

He conceded that supporters of the bill, including a bloc of farm State Senators, had sufficient votes for passage when he took the floor in opposition as the session opened.

However, Barkley said he felt duty-bound to defeat WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson's warning to the Agriculture Committee that it would be a "rash act" to build new rubber production facilities with critical materials needed for airplanes, tanks and guns.

No Demand for Quorum

Sentiment behind the measure was so strong that Barkley made no demand for a quorum call as the time came for voting with less than a dozen Senators on the floor. Only 49 members, a bare quorum, were recorded present earlier in the day.

Senators Thomas (Democrat) of Oklahoma and Gillette (Democrat) of Iowa, chief spokesman for the bill, charged that the WPB program calling for 800,000 tons of synthetic rubber next year was largely based on "untried laboratory experiments" with petroleum.

The bill, which goes to the House today, provides for an agency empowered to conduct research, enter into contracts and lend money to encourage manufacture of rubber from products of the farm and forest.

The agencys' director would be charged with producing enough synthetic so that the total supply from all sources would be sufficient to meet civilian as well as military needs.

Barkley pointed out that the 800,000 pounds projected for next year included 200,000 tons of synthetic rubber from alcohol and said the bill would take from Nelson "responsibility for this production."

Gillette asserted the bill was intended to clarify the rubber production program, which he said was in a state of "indescribable confusion."

WPB Dubious of Plan for Tires

for supplying these machines with tires was conditioned by an estimate that within two years, five million autos now on the highways will no longer be usable because of wear.)

At the later press conference, Newhall stated that he had not meant to give an impression of confidence about the outlook for tires for all usable cars. He repeated this declaration from his prepared statement:

"The War Production Board feels, as it always has felt, that passenger cars should be kept running for essential purposes, if possible, because otherwise our citizens would have to use public transportation vehicles which could not possibly stand the load."

Newhall was asked to define what he meant by "essential driving." It would not be possible, he said, to supply such a definition. It was suggested to him that on occasions, such as in emergencies involving family illness or failure of public transportation, every automobile is apt to become essential. With this he agreed, but declined to amplify.

The rubber coordinator was questioned about the possibility of restricting auto use to "essential" driving without rationing gasoline on a Nation-wide basis. He suggested that this question be taken up with the Office of Price Administration which is handling rationing. He did observe, however, that he had never seen rationing work on a voluntary basis.

Newhall told reporters that the rubber manufacturers' plan was one of several that the WPB is studying. No plan, he cautioned, would guarantee any given amount of tires for a long period of time in view of the "variables," such as increased Allied military needs, that might upset any program. Newhall emphasized these two points:

"The best evidence I have before me shows that there is no rubber of any kind available for anything except the most essential purposes.

"Military and the most essential civilian needs must have first call on all the rubber we can get."

Newhall attacked accounts of the companies' plan that interpreted it as exposing the "myth" of the rubber shortage.

"I should like to point out that the only reason why such a plan has been developed is because there is a rubber shortage of extremely grave proportions," he said. "Since the Japanese took over most of our rubber sources a rubber shortage has been—still is—our most serious materials problem."

One of the "ifs" in the companies' plan, said the rubber czar, is that it is predicated upon a 40 per cent reduction in auto mileage and a top speed limit of 40 miles per hour.

Large Military Demand

The manufacturers' program called for the Government to make available 97,420 long tons of reclaimed rubber. This "if," in view of "very large" military demands, remains to be answered by a policy decision of the War Production Board, said Newhall.

As for another "if"—the question of whether 3332 long tons of crude rubber can be spared to make the plan effective—Newhall stated: "Our stockpile is diminishing in size, and if we take any crude rubber at all from the stockpile, we will be taking it away from the only guaranteed source of crude rubber that we can see."

Observing that the companies' plan calls for 33,188 tons of thiokol and 32,475 tons of butyl, Newhall went on:

"While the production of these materials is being expanded as rapidly as possible, I should like to point out that in 1942 we do not expect to have more than 300 long tons of butyl rubber, and do not expect to have more than 12,000 long tons of buna and thiokol together. This raises the question as to how much of these types of rubber could be made available promptly for the program outlined."

Way Worked Out 'to Assure' Arms for China

By Richard L. Turner
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Pacific War Council worked out plans for delivering supplies to the hard-pressed armies of China yesterday, and its members left the White House obviously feeling that much had been accomplished.

"Now we know what the Chinese need and how and when and where we can get the stuff in," Walter Nash, the minister from New Zealand, reported to newspapermen. The council, he said, had "worked out procedure to be followed to assure that China puts up the best fight that can be put up."

The trend of submarine warfare against American shipping, the closing of the Burma Road, over which tons of materials had been hauled to China, and the new Japanese offensive in that country, obviously combined to present the Pacific War Council with a difficult problem.

Since the Burma Road became inaccessible, due to Japanese victories in Burma, some materiel has been flown into China by transport plane from India. There has been talk recently of increasing the world-wide use of heavy transport planes.

Throughout its long war with Japan, China has been constantly and seriously hampered by a lack of fighter and bombing planes. Not long ago, some aerial reinforcements were delivered to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's forces, and they have already been used effectively. It was considered probable that the plans drawn up yesterday included additional aircraft deliveries.

The Chinese Foreign Minister, T. V. Soong, told reporters that the meeting began with an exposition by himself "of the position of the lines of fighting in China, the routes of communication, some of the problems, and some of the possibilities of developing the situation in our favor."

Virtually the entire session, which lasted more than an hour, was believed to have been devoted to the Chinese problem. The situation in Egypt as it affects the Orient and the Pacific areas was discussed in detail at previous sessions.

situation in the East is so desperate that any attempt to violate the rationing system will constitute an assault on a vital war measure and will be dealt with immediately . . . I want to emphasize that every gallon of gasoline used for other than essential war transportation on the East Coast means a gallon less fuel oil for keeping people warm next winter and keeping war plants going," Henderson said.

Washington boards expect some time to elapse before they are able to complete action on all the applications for supplementary rations. Those who failed to apply for basic "A" books earlier will be able to apply for them at local boards tomorrow.

Goebbels Busy Denying Rumors

The Office of War Information reported yesterday that a German radio station was heard vigorously denouncing these two rumors current in Germany:

"That German tank crews on the Eastern Front are being securely locked up in their panzers before battle, to assure their fighting to the last."

"That German cooking fats are being produced from the corpses of air-raid victims in bombed cities."

Treasury to Renew Tax Goal Drive

would take 100 per cent of all income above $25,000 clear. House rates range from 13 per cent on the first $2000 to 82 per cent on all over $200,000.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, meanwhile followed Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, in declaring for a retail sales tax. Taft said a retail levy, with food possibly exempted, might permit lowering of House rates on the lower income brackets. The Treasury has contended a sales tax would be inflationary, but Taft said it would help siphon off inflationary spending.

Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, another member of the committee, said he considered a sales levy an "unfair and unequal" form of taxation and hoped it would not be considered by the committee.

Japs Land At Buna, Lose Big Transport

By the Associated Press

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Australia (Thursday), July 23. A Japanese invasion force has landed at Buna, 100 miles directly across the eastern arm of New Guinea from Port Moresby, last Allied outpost north of Australia, a communique announced today.

Allied planes attacked the invasion fleet and sank a large transport and a barge, the communique said.

Reconnaissance planes first sighted the landing parties yesterday and bombers and fighters immediately began bombing and strafing attacks which continued throughout the day.

Japanese ships, landing barges and troops on shore were sprayed with machine-gun bullets and blasted with bombs, causing heavy casualties, the communique said.

A Japanese seaplane was shot down.

Only yesterday, a communique reported that Allied bombers had scored a direct hit on a transport during an attack on a Japanese fleet off Buna Tuesday. At that time, it was thought the fleet was en route to the Lae and Salamaua area, more than 150 miles northwest of Buna, with reinforcements.

The invasion was the first offensive action by the Japanese in the Southwest Pacific since their disastrous defeat in the battle of the Coral Sea last spring.

Va. Father Jailed In Fatal Beating Of Crying Infant

Montross, Va., July 22 (AP).—A 43-year-old father who told Westmoreland County police he whipped his 8-month-old child to make it stop crying was held in the county jail here today on a charge of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the child's death.

Commonwealth's Attorney F. F. Chandler said Henry S. Kohr, a painter, was arrested shortly after the death of the baby, Henry Shirley Kohr yesterday.

Chandler said the child's mother, Mrs. Dorothy Ambrose Kohr, was arrested on a similar charge but that she later was released.

The Commonwealth's attorney quoted Dr. V. O. Caruthers as saying death was caused by a fractured skull. The physician also reported finding bruises on the infant's body.

Chandler said Kohr admitted using a strap to whip the child but denied causing a fracture of the skull.

Run Japs Out of Aleutians, Begs Coffee, Fearing Invasion

Representative John M. Coffee (Democrat) of Washington declared yesterday that "the Army brass hats and the Navy equivalents" should take cognizance of "the growing concern felt by the people of the Pacific Northwest over the increasing menace of the Japanese war machine in the western Aleutian Islands."

In a one-minute speech in the House, Mr. Coffee said that "the Japs are headed in our direction" and added:

"We beseech the authorities of the Army and Navy to send sufficient troops, airplanes and ships of war up there to oust the Japs from American possessions."

Mr. Coffee's statement coincided with word from Salem, Oreg., that Senator Rufus C. Holman of Oregon, had concurred in criticism voiced during recent days by several members of Congress, among them Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat) of Oklahoma, and Delegate Anthony J. Dimond of Alaska.

Mr. Holman, visiting his home State as a member of a subcommittee of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, told newspapermen that "criminally obsolete, woefully inadequate and poorly distributed" defense installations guard the West Coast of the United States and Alaska. He said that "grossly inadequate" fighter plane forces were stationed in Washington and Oregon.

Meanwhile, it was learned that Mr. Holman and three other members of the Senate subcommittee will leave for Alaska in a week or 10 days to see for themselves what the situation is. The other members are Albert B. Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky; Mon C. Wallgren (Democrat) of Washington, and Harley M. Kilgore (Democrat) of West Virginia. It is understood that a House group contemplates an inspection trip to Alaska, but its makeup has not been announced.

Mr. Coffee said he had heard rumors that the Japanese had occupied 20 to 22 islands.

"They are not entering the Aleutians merely to get islands," he said, "nor to go after eastern Siberia. The plain fact is that their plan is to go after us. I am not criticising what the Army and Navy are doing with what they have up there. I do believe they don't appreciate the need of getting more and more up there as fast as they can."

Sidelights of the War

Death Preferable to Cooperation With Intruders, Gandhi Says

New Delhi, July 22 (U.P.).—Mohandas K. Gandhi, Indian Nationalist leader, said today he "would rather be shot" than submit to or cooperate with the Japanese or any other power.

The wizened little leader of the new anti-British movement which the All-India Congress Party is preparing to launch next month made this assertion in a telegraph reply from his headquarters at Sevagram, outside Wardha, to a series of three questions asked by the United Press.

"Are you willing," the first question said, "to see the British go while the Japanese are on the frontier?"

Gandhi answered that "this question should not occur to anybody contemplate Allied arms operating in India during the war."

"Would you," the second question asked, "urge noncooperation with the Japanese after Japanese occupation?"

"Japanese occupation is inconceivable while Allied arms are operating on Indian soil," he replied. "If the Japanese inflict defeat on Allied arms and succeed in occupying India, I most decidedly would advise full noncooperation."

"Would you persist in urging noncooperation if the Japs shot noncooperators," the final question asked, "and yould you rather be shot than cooperate yourself?"

"Noncooperation worthy of the name must invite shooting," Gandhi answered. "In any case, I would rather be shot than cooperate with the Japanese or any other power."

Malta Toll Grows

Valletta, July 22 (AP).—The defenses of Malta, the most bombed spot on earth, have destroyed 849 enemy planes during 2787 alarms since Italy entered the war June 10, 1940, the British said tonight.

Two German fighters and one bomber shot down during five small bombing attacks in the last 24 hours were included in the total.

Captain Shot For Refusing To Name Ship

By the Associated Press

The captain of a large Norwegian merchant ship sunk in the Atlantic was machine-gunned because he refused to give the U-boat commander the name of his vessel, the Navy reported yesterday.

Torpedoing of a United States cargo ship and a British merchantman also were announced, bringing to 396 the unofficial Associated Press tabulation of Allied and neutral losses in the Western Atlantic since Pearl Harbor. The toll in the three sinkings was 35 dead and 89 rescued.

Capt. Finn Ager Madsen, 42, of Tonsburg, Norway, said at a gulf coast port that the submarine fired on a dinghy carrying himself and three crewmen from the sinking ship. The captain was hit in the arm but the other three were unhurt.

Thirty-five other men in the crew rowed away in two lifeboats and reached Devil's Island, French Guiana. Rather than face internment there, they escaped and pushed on to Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana.

The American vessel, torpedoed about 650 miles off the Atlantic Coast June 28, was sent to the bottom with the loss of 19 of her 37-man crew. The 18 seamen who were rescued after drifting for 19 days aboard life rafts, said that Miles Nelkin, a 25-year-old able bodied seaman, was responsible for their escape. Survivors said Nelkin released the life rafts while the vessel was under attack, and in so doing lost his life.

The rescued crewmen related that they fished onions and potatoes out of the water to supplement their supply of biscuits, improvised a small shack out of the floating wreckage for protection against the sun and carefully saved rain water to conserve their original small supply. Oiler William Thompson told of catching fish, using his oar as a budgeon, and maintained, "raw fish are delicous, especally after you get to lke uncooked onions and potatoes."

Two torpedoes sank the British merchantman in the Caribbean May 28, her 32 survivors reported on landing at a Gulf Coast port.

Senator Murray To Oppose Rankin

Congresswoman's Brother Will Run On Win-the-War Platform in Montana

By the Associated Press

Helena, Mont., July 22.—United States Senator James E. Murray, Democrat and consistent backer of Roosevelt Administration policies, will be opposed in the November general election by Wellington D. Rankin, Republican senatorial nominee and brother of Congresswoman Jeannette Rankin.

Murray defeated Joseph P. Monaghan, former Butte Congressman, by a convincing margin in yesterday's Montana primary election.

Rankin, a former Montana attorney general, pledged in his campaign that he would "vigorously support every measure to win the war." He won the nomination in a race with Lieut. Col. Charles A. Dawley of Great Falls, serving with American forces in Australia, and Jacob Thorkelson of Butte, former Congressman. Miss Rankin voted against United States entry into both World Wars.

Unofficial returns from 913 of 1185 precincts gave Murray 42,322 and Monaghan 26,815.

Returns from 892 of 1185 precincts gave Rankin 21,834, Dawley 8112 and Thorkelson 7232.

The Republican race for the First Congressional seat from which Miss Rankin is retiring still was undecided with returns yet to come in from outlying precincts.

Howard K. Hazelbaker of Missoula, former State Senator, gained a slight lead late today in a see-saw contest with Edmond G. Toomey, Helena attorney.

Returns from 325 of 412 precincts gave Hazelbaker 6507; Toomey 6267, and Sherman W. Smith, Helena, 3291.

Representative James F. O'Connor, Democrat, strode ahead of W. W. McCracken of Great Falls and Robert A. Patterson of Havre in the Second District with 205 of 773 precincts giving O'Connor 7844, McCracken 1370 and Patterson 2386.

Former Congressman J. J. O'Connell of Butte and Mike Mansfield of Missoula were running close for the Democratic First District Congressional nomination, in a field of five.

Mead Will Run In N. Y., Aided By Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

Albany, N. Y., July 22.—United States Senator James M. Mead became an avowed seeker of the Democratic nomination for Governor of New York today and claimed the important support of President Roosevelt.

Presaging a contest which appears certain to pit the President's political weight against that of former National Democratic Chairman James A. Farley, Mead (Democrat) of New York announced he would seek the gubernatorial nomination although "up until now I have resisted every appeal to become a candidate."

The Buffalo Senator's announcement, which immediately drew powerful up-State Democratic support to him, followed pleas from many politically prominent New Yorkers, including Senator Wagner (Democrat) of New York, that he run.

Farley Asks Withdrawal

It came amid a developing "draft" movement started by George B. Doyle, chairman of the Democratic committee in Mead's home county of Erie.

In New York City, a few hours later, Farley called vehemently upon Mead to renounce his candidacy.

Farley, State Democratic chairman who managed two of Mr. Roosevelt's three Presidential campaigns, is supporting State Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr. Bennett claims the backing of a majority of the 1014 delegates to the Democratic State Convention next month.

Farley assailed the "draft Mead" movement, to which the Senator said he had finally yielded after long resistance, as "dishonest" and hypocritical," and declared Mead should withdraw from the race to avert "sure disaster."

Not on the Level, He Says

The former Postmaster General launched a scathing attack on Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle, jr., who headed a list of 19 signers of a letter urging Mead to run.

Berle should resign his State Department position, Farley said, "if he wants to be a local politician in the State of New York."

Declaring that Mead "owes to me more than any other man in the State the position he now holds," Farley accused the Senator of "not playing on the level with me."

Mead—who like Wagner—has been a consistent supporter of President Roosevelt's policies, told his fellow-Senator in a letter announcing his candidacy:

"You, Senator, and other high-minded citizens have made me come to realize that I must not permit my personal wishes and my personal preferences to stand in the way of rendering a public service to the people of my State and of my country."

Tells of Roosevelt Aid

Leaving the White House after a visit later, Mead told reporters that Mr. Roosevelt favored his candidacy. The President, Mead said, reminded him that he is not a delegate to New York's Democratic convention but added "if I were, I would cast my vote for Jim Mead."

Democratic Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, whose decision not to campaign for a fifth term precipitated the battle for the Democratic nomination is supporting his 38-year-old protege, Lieut. Gov. Charles Poletti, for the nomination.

The Story Behind The TAX INCREASE

For some time rumors have been rampant about a new Tax on alcoholic beverages. It is true that legislation is now being considered.. To clear up existing confusion in the minds of our patrons, here is what the suggested tax amounts to . . . and HOW IT WILL AFFECT YOU. The proposed measure calls for an additional tax of $6.00 per case.. That means you will pay for

★ QUART . . . Bottled-In-Bond, 100 proof . . . 50c MORE ★
★ QUART . . . Straight or Blend, 90 proof . . . 45c MORE ★

★ FIFTH . . . Straight or Blend, 90 proof . . . 36c MORE ★

(Pints and Half-Pints Proportionately Increased)

In addition, there is a great likelihood that distilleries will increase THEIR prices! They will be called upon to make a tremendous outlay of cash as Tax on their floor stocks . . . and millions of dollars will probably be borrowed to pay this tax. To meet interest payments on these loans, their prices cannot remain at the present low levels.

YOU, as a consumer, will ultimately have to pay the total bill! BUT REMEMBER, this is NOT for OUR benefit or profit—BUT . . . every dollar of it is basically scheduled to aid our ALL-OUT WAR EFFORT. So pay it, patron . . . AND PAY IT GLADLY.

Giegengack Clarifies Franking Muddle

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

A. E. Giegengack, the public printer, was "pleased to advise" last night that it was no mistake of his that enabled a man running for the Senate in Mississippi to get hold of 200,000 franked envelopes that would be useful in his campaign.

The favored candidate was James O. Eastland, who served a few months by appointment last year and is now trying to regain his seat, and his franking privilege, by unseating Senator Wall Doxey in the Democratic primary Saturday.

Eastland made two speeches on cotton last year and got his old friend, Senator W. Lee O'Daniel (Democrat) of Texas to order him 100,000 copies of each, with an equal number of envelopes with O'Daniel's frank to carry them to the Mississippi voters without Eastland's campaign fund having to pay a penny of postage.

When 140-odd thousand envelopes, with the speeches in them, had been delivered to Eastland's headquarters in Jackson, Miss.—in mailbags which went postage free by virtue of an O'Daniel franked tag—there were protests from Senator Doxey and others. Mr. O'Daniel then had the Government Printing Office destroy the remaining envelopes, about 60,000.

The Post revealed these deals and Eastland's headquarters issued a long statement to the effect that it was all a mistake by some clerk at the G. P. O. No envelopes were wanted, said this statement, and none were ordered.

Mr. O'Daniel's headquarters said the speeches were ordered and "in accordance with the usual practice" they were put in envelopes. But when the Senator found out about it, this statement said, he cautioned Eastland not to use the envelopes.

Public Printer Giegengack cleared all this us last night, in a letter on the subject, which said:

"I am pleased to advise that the envelopes in question were furnished to Senator O'Daniel for the purpose indicated and that they were ordered by the office of Senator O'Daniel through the Congressional Record clerk. Proof of these envelopes bearing the title of the speeches made by James Eastland and also containing the frank of Senator O'Daniel was approved by the office of Senator O'Daniel, before the envelopes were printed.

"The cost of supplying these 200,000 envelopes," the public printer continued, "was $791.92. This amount included $205 for printing and $586.92 for envelopes.

"You are advised that Former Senator Eastland, having been out of Congress over six months, could not have ordered speeches printed by the Government Printing Office. This Office accepts orders for speeches only from members of Congress.

"It is the practice of the Government Printing Office," the public printer concluded, "not to accept orders for speeches unless accompanied by check, money order or cash."

Army Releases Names of 53 Killed In Western Pacific

By the Associated Press

The names of 53 American soldiers killed in action in the western Pacific theater, including Australia, were announced yesterday by the War Department.

The men represented 28 States and included 27 officers and 26 enlisted men. None of them was killed in the Philippines. With publication of this list, the Army has announced a total of 890 soldiers killed in action or died of wounds since the war began.

The department made public the casualty list on the condition that publication of names be confined to newspapers and radio stations normally serving the areas in which the men's homes were located.

Lieut. Col. Francis Stevens, whose wife lives at 3183 North Seventeenth Street, Arlington, Va., was the only casualty listed as being from the Washington area. The War Department first reported his death on July 11.

550 miles of big new pipe to speed gas and oil

▶ The Government has ordered immediate production of 550 miles of seamless steel pipe, two feet in diameter.

The only plant in the world equipped to produce a seamless pipe of this size is the National Tube Company, a United States Steel subsidiary.

Through the huge tube will flow 300,000 barrels of crude oil a day from Texas to Illinois. Eastern war plants will have increased supplies. Tank-car hauls will be shortened; more tankers released for service to the armed forces.

Already loaded with war orders, National Tube Company tackled this new job in its stride. It is expected to be completed in November. Five miles of the big pipe are now rolling out every day, faster even than it can be laid. Output of bombs and shells meanwhile increases.

Ship-plate production in United States Steel plants is in no way affected. Current rate is more than enough for 100 ships a month and is climbing.

Cols. Brink and Clear Given Distinguished Service Medal

Two Army officers currently on duty at the War Department yesterday received the Distinguished Service Medal for "exceptionally meritorious service" rendered during their assignment to posts in the Far East.

They are Col. Francis G. Brink, Infantry, of Marathon, N. Y., and Lieut. Col. Warren J. Clear of Newton, Mass.

Colonel Brink's citation stressed his service "in a position of great responsibility as military observer and liaison officer with British General Headquarters, Far East, at Singapore; later a member of the Allied Headquarters, Java, and upon the closing of that headquarters, as military observer on the British and Chinese fronts in Burma.

Ability Stressed

"By his resourcefulness, exceptional ability and untiring zeal, he rendered services of outstanding value to the Government," the citation declared.

Colonel Clear, the first American officer to return to the United States, via Australia, from Bataan and Corregidor, where he said life was "like living on a bullseye," was cited "for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service while on an intelligence mission for the United States Government in the Far East, from July, 1941, to April, 1942.

"By his resourcefulness, exceptional ability and untiring zeal, he rendered services of conspicuous worth to the Government."

Clear on Corregidor

Colonel Clear, whose colorful description of Corregidor was made on an Army-sponsored broadcast last April 12 following his return to the United States, later received more than 1800 letters from the anxious families of men then on Bataan and Corregidor.

The relatives inquired after the health of their boys, what outfit they were with, etc., and Col. Clear, although making it plain that he would be unable for military reasons to answer all of their questions, vowed that he would answer every letter, regardless of how long it might require.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Young paid a surprise visit to the Naval Medical Center in Bethesda, Md., "just to see the boys." She was accompanied by a member of the Treasury Department's War Savings publicity staff.

Clergy Asks:

Separate Navy Unit Of Chaplains

Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

American parents are vitally concerned about the spiritual welfare of their sons in the Navy, a committee of eminent churchmen yesterday remided Navy Secretary Knox, urging his aid in creating a separate Navy chaplaincy bureau.

Members of a special committee from the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains who conferred with Knox and Admiral Randall Jacobs, Chief of the Bureau of Naval Personnel, were:

The Rev. Dr. Arthur S. Devan, director of the commission; the Rev. Dr. William B. Pugh, stated clerk of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., the commission vice chairman, and the Right Rev. Henry K. Sherrill, Bishop of the Massachusetts Diocese of the Episcopal Church and chairman of the Episcopal Army and Navy Commission, and members of the general commission's executive committee. Also meeting with the group was Rabbi David De Sola Pool of New York City, president of the Synagogue Council of America. He is not a commission member, but has pledged his brethren's support in the Navy chaplaincy move.

Letter Sent to President

Following the meeting, the general commission sent a letter to President Roosevelt urging his approval of a separate naval chaplains' bureau.

Dr. Devan, interviewed after the conference with Knox and Jacobs, reported that the Navy Secretary was particularly impressed with the commission's report that they represented not just the chaplains in the service, but also spoke for the thousands of persons with relatives in the armed forces.

A written statement left with the Secretary for consideration, declared, in part:

"The general commission, which officially represents Protestant churches having 30 million adult communicant members, does not feel that the present organization gives adequate recognition to the dignity and importance of the religious life of men in the service as these are recognized in utterances of the President of the United States, in the feeling of the churches of the country, and in the minds of millions of American parents who are giving their sons to the Navy.

"It is further felt that the practical effectiveness of the Chaplains' Corps is limited to a very considerable degree by the present arrangements. The changes that have been made, beginning in 1920, by the Army, have brought about a state of effectiveness in religious work in the Army to which the Navy offers no parallel, and this difference is beginning to be realized.

"Part of the work of this Commission is the securing of suitable clergymen as candidates for the Chaplaincy. Great difficulty has been experienced in obtaining an adequate number of qualified candidates. We feel that this difficulty is in a small degree connected with the present organization of the Navy chaplaincy."

Chapel Also Asked

Specially, the General Commission's request is for a Chaplains' Corps of the Navy, to be established by an act of Congress into a separate bureau, apart from the Bureau of Personnel, to be headed by a chaplain as Chief of Bureau, with a rank of Rear Admiral, and for a definite number of duty.

The request also calls upon the Navy to "prepare a program of systematic building of chapels at shore stations where any considerable number of men is to be permanently located, and ask Congress to authorize the program and provide the necessary funds for the erection of these chapels."

Members of the Commission's committee unable to attend the meeting with Knox and Jacobs were the Right Rev. Adna Wright Leonard, Methodist resident bishop and chairman of the General Commission, and the Rev. Dr. Samuel McRae Gilbert, secretary of the Federal Council of Churches.

Steel Workers Here Receive Wage Increase

With the assistance of the United States Conciliation Service of the Department of Labor, the wage dispute between Local No. 486 of the A. F. of L. Iron Workers and two Washington area steel fabricating plants has been settled by a wage increase of approximately 10 per cent to 100 employes.

The two steel firms involved are the Rosslyn Steel & Cement Co., 3031 K Street Northwest, and the Hudson Supply & Equipment Co., Arlington Ridge Road, Arlington.

According to Frank J. Sheehan, Department of Labor conciliator, the agreement was ratified at a union meeting following negotiations at the offices of the Conciliation Service. The union had demanded increases ranging from 18 to 32 per cent for different classifications.

Barbenders: from 70 cents an hour to 78 cents.

Experienced helpers: 55 cents to 60 cents.

The new rates will be incorporated in collective bargaining contracts between the union and the two firms. A previous breakdown in negotiations resulted in a strike which was terminated at the request of the Conciliation Service.

The two firms fabricate steel for bridges, residential, and public building projects in the Washington area.

Capone Beer Tax Case Settled For $30,000

Chicago, July 22 (AP).—The Federal Government today accepted a $30,000 settlement on behalf of Al Capone and seven others charged in a $250,000 tax suit with nonpayment of taxes on beer bootlegged from 1921 to 1932.

Charges are still pending against three of the 15 persons originally named in the action. Charges against the other four, believed dead, will be dropped as soon as definite proof of their deaths is established.

The suit alleged the defendants failed to pay taxes on 19,384 barrels of beer. Of the total, $119,367 was for taxes due and the remainder for interest and penalties.

Those with Capone scheduled for release under today's settlement are his brother, Ralph; Nick Jeffra, Joseph Fuco, Hymie Levin, George Howlett, Charles Fuehrmeyer and Jack Guzik.

Charges are pending against August Dold, Frank Jeffra, brother of Nick, and Michael La Pristi. Those believed dead are Bert Delaney, John J. Nolan, Albert Johnson and Steve Svoboda.

Errant 18-Month-Old Boy Found Safe

Barboursville, W. Va., July 22 (AP). An 18-month-old baby just learning to walk was still traveling today when he was found after some 75 persons had searched for 24 hours along the mountainous, heavily thicketed sky high ridge in the Ona District.

The baby—Richard Lee Cazad—was found three-quarters of a mile from the grandparents' home he left yesterday. He was scratched, bruised and covered with insect bits, but was not seriously hurt.

Assault Suspect Held Under $20,000 Bond

John B. Robinson, 25-year-old Negro and former employe of the Chestnut Farms Dairy, was held for grand jury action under $20,000 bond by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday on a charge of assaulting and attempting to rape a 20-year-old WPB stenographer last week.

Robinson was acquitted about three months ago of a charge that he was the mysterious "gas burglar" who terrorized Northeast Washington last winter by breaking into several apartments and turning on the gas jets after robbing the occupants.

Detective Sergt. Roy E. Blick, of the Special Investigating Squad, said at the hearing in Turnage's office that Robinson was arrested Saturday in Newark. Clues as to his identity, the officer said, were a pair of shoes, a hat, and a coat left behind in the girl's room.

Blick also produced a pay check stub found in the coat pocket. Tracing it to the Chestnut Farms Dairy, he learned that Robinson had not reported for work July 16, the night of the crime.

The alleged victim said she could not positively identify Robinson as her assailant, but police obtained a palm print in the room that coincided with that of Robinson.

The girl told of waking about 4 a. m. and finding a man in her bed who tried to subdue her by scratching and striking her. She picked up a small fan from a table near the bed, she said, and pushed it into the attacker's face. He fled, with the girl brandishing a chair at his heels. When he escaped through a window and started down one of the posts supporting the porch, she hurled the chair at him.

Police later followed a trail of blood that led for more than a block from the house.

Blick told Turnage that when Robinson was arrested his head was bandaged, and that Robinson said he had received the injuries in an argument in New York's Harlem section.

550 miles of big new pipe to speed gas and oil

▶ The Government has ordered immediate production of 550 miles of seamless steel pipe, two feet in diameter.

The only plant in the world equipped to produce a seamless pipe of this size is the National Tube Company, a United States Steel subsidiary.

Through the huge tube will flow 300,000 barrels of crude oil a day from Texas to Illinois. Eastern war plants will have increased supplies. Tank-car hauls will be shortened; more tankers released for service to the armed forces.

Already loaded with war orders, National Tube Company tackled this new job in its stride. It is expected to be completed in November. Five miles of the big pipe are now rolling out every day, faster even than it can be laid. Output of bombs and shells meanwhile increases.

Ship-plate production in United States Steel plants is in no way affected. Current rate is more than enough for 100 ships a month and is climbing.

Cols. Brink and Clear Given Distinguished Service Medal

Two Army officers currently on duty at the War Department yesterday received the Distinguished Service Medal for "exceptionally meritorious service" rendered during their assignment to posts in the Far East.

They are Col. Francis G. Brink, Infantry, of Marathon, N. Y., and Lieut. Col. Warren J. Clear of Newton, Mass.

Colonel Brink's citation stressed his service "in a position of great responsibility as military observer and liaison officer with British General Headquarters, Far East, at Singapore; later a member of the Allied Headquarters, Java, and upon the closing of that headquarters, as military observer on the British and Chinese fronts in Burma.

Ability Stressed

"By his resourcefulness, exceptional ability and untiring zeal, he rendered services of outstanding value to the Government," the citation declared.

Colonel Clear, the first American officer to return to the United States, via Australia, from Bataan and Corregidor, where he said life was "like living on a bullseye," was cited "for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service while on an intelligence mission for the United States Government in the Far East, from July, 1941, to April, 1942.

"By his resourcefulness, exceptional ability and untiring zeal, he rendered services of conspicuous worth to the Government."

Clear on Corregidor

Colonel Clear, whose colorful description of Corregidor was made on an Army-sponsored broadcast last April 12 following his return to the United States, later received more than 1600 letters from the anxious families of men then on Bataan and Corregidor.

The relatives inquired after the health of their boys, what outfit they were with, etc., and Col. Clear, although making it plain that he would be unable for military reasons to answer all of their questions, vowed that he would answer every letter, regardless of how long it might require.

Star's Bond Drive Nets Half Million

Half a million dollars raised in about a week—that's the record of beautiful Loretta Young who participated in an extensive war bond campaign of the District retailers.

The screen star will round up her successful appearance here and will autograph bond receipts and stamp books at the Washington Gas & Light Co., Eleventh and H Streets Northwest, tomorrow at noon, it was announced yesterday.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Young paid a surprise visit to the Naval Medical Center in Bethesda, Md., "just to see the boys." She was accompanied by a member of the Treasury Department's War Savings publicity staff.

Home Appliances Need Extra Care

Clergy Asks:

Separate Navy Unit Of Chaplains

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

American parents are vitally concerned about the spiritual welfare of their sons in the Navy, a committee of prominent churchmen yesterday reminded Navy Secretary Knox, urging his aid in creating a separate Navy chaplaincy bureau.

Members of a special committee from the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains who conferred with Knox and Admiral Randall Jacobs, Chief of the Bureau of Naval Personnel, were:

The Rev. Dr. Arthur S. Devan, director of the commission; the Rev. Dr. William B. Pugh, stated clerk of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., and commission vice chairman, and the Right Rev. Henry K. Sherill, Bishop of the Massachusetts Diocese of the Episcopal Church and chairman of the Episcopal Army and Navy Commission, and member of the general commission's executive committee. Also meeting with the group was Rabbi David DeSola Pool of New York City, president of the Synagogue Council of America. He is not a commission member, but has pledged his brethren's support in the Navy chaplaincy move.

Letter Sent to President

Following the meeting, the general commission sent a letter to President Roosevelt urging his approval of a separate naval chaplaincy bureau.

Dr. Devan, interviewed after the conference with Knox and Jacobs, reported that the Navy Secretary was particularly impressed with the commission's report that they represented not just the chaplains in the service, but also spoke for the thousands of persons with relatives in the armed forces.

A written statement left with the Secretary for consideration, declared, in part:

"The general commission, which officially represents Protestant churches having 30 million adult communicant members, does not feel that the present organization gives adequate recognition to the dignity and importance of the religious life of men in the service as these are recognized in utterances of the President of the United States, in the feeling of the churches of the country, and in the minds of millions of American parents who are giving their sons to the Navy.

"It is further felt that the practical effectiveness of the Chaplains' Corps is limited to a very considerable degree by the present arrangements. The changes that have been made, beginning in 1939, by the Army, have brought about a state of effectiveness in religious work for the Army to which the Navy offers no parallel, and this difference is beginning to be realized.

"Part of the work of this Commission is the securing of suitable clergymen as candidates for the Chaplaincy. Great difficulty has been experienced in obtaining an adequate number of qualified candidates. We feel that this difficulty is in no small degree connected with the present organization of the Navy Chaplaincy."

Chapels Also Asked

Specifically, the General Commission's request is for a Chaplains' Corps of the Navy, to be established by an Act of Congress into a separate bureau, apart from the Bureau of Personnel, to be headed by a chaplain as Chief of Bureau, with a rank of Rear Admiral, and for a definite tour of duty.

The request also calls upon the Navy to "prepare a program of systematic building of chapels at shore stations where any considerable number of men is to be permanently located, and ask Congress to authorize the program and provide the necessary funds for the erection of these chapels."

Members of the Commission's committee unable to attend the meeting with Knox and Jacobs were the Right Rev. Adna Wright Leonard, Methodist resident bishop and chairman of the General Commission, and the Rev. Dr. Samuel McRae Cavert, secretary of the Federal Council of Churches.

Steel Workers Here Receive Wage Increase

With the assistance of the United States Conciliation Service of the Department of Labor, the wage dispute between Local No. 486 of the A. F. of L. Iron Workers and two Washington area steel fabricating plants has been settled by a wage increase of approximately 10 per cent to 100 employes.

The two steel firms involved are the Rosslyn Steel & Cement Co., 3031 K Street Northwest, and the Hudson Supply & Equipment Co., Arlington Ridge Road, Arlington.

According to Frank J. Sheehan, Department of Labor conciliator, the agreement was ratified at a union meeting following negotiations at the offices of the Conciliation Service. The union had demanded increases ranging from 18 to 32 per cent for different classifications.

The following wage changes were agreed upon according to Sheehan:

Barbenders: from 70 cents an hour to 78 cents.

Experienced helpers: 55 cents to 60 cents.

The new rates will be incorporated in collective bargaining contracts between the union and the two firms. A previous breakdown in negotiations resulted in a strike which was terminated at the request of the Conciliation Service.

The two firms fabricate steel for bridges, residential, and public building projects in the Washington area.

Capone Beer Tax Case Settled For $30,000

Chicago, July 22 (AP).—The Federal Government today accepted a $30,000 settlement on behalf of Al Capone and seven others charged in a $250,000 tax suit with nonpayment of taxes on beer bootlegged from 1921 to 1932.

Charges are still pending against three of the 15 persons originally named in the action. Charges against the other four, believed dead, will be dropped as soon as definite proof of their deaths is established.

The suit alleged the defendants failed to pay taxes on 19,984 barrels of beer. Of the total, $119,367 was for taxes due and the remainder for interest and penalties.

Those with Capone scheduled for release under today's settlement are his brother, Ralph; Nick Jeffra, Joseph Fuco, Hymie Levin, George Howlett, Charles Fuehrmeyer and Jack Guzik.

Charges are pending against August Dold, Frank Jeffra, brother of Nick, and Michael Le Pristi. Those believed dead are Bert Delaney, John J. Nolan, Albert Johnson and Steve Svoboda.

Errant 18-Month-Old Boy Found Safe

Barboursville, W. Va., July 22 (AP). An 18-month-old baby just learning to walk was still traveling today when he was found after some 75 persons had searched for 24 hours along the mountainous, heavily thicketed sky high ridge in the Ona District.

The baby—Richard Lee Cazad—was found theree-quarters of a mile from the grandparents' home he left yesterday. He was scratched, bruised and covered with insect bits, but was not seriously hurt.

Assault Suspect Held Under $20,000 Bond

John B. Robinson, 25-year-old Negro and former employe of the Chestnut Farms Dairy, was held for grand jury action under $20,000 bond by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday on a charge of assaulting and attempting to rape a 20-year-old WPB stenographer last week.

Robinson was acquitted about three months ago of a charge that he was the mysterious "gas burglar" who terrorized Northeast Washington last winter by breaking into several apartments and turning on the gas jets after robbing the occupants.

Detective Sergt. Roy E. Blick, of the Special Investigating Squad, said at the hearing in Turnage's office that Robinson was arrested Saturday in Newark. Clues as to his identity, the officer said, were a pair of shoes, a hat, and a coat left behind in the girl's room.

Blick also produced a pay check stub found in the coat pocket. Tracing it to the Chestnut Farms Dairy, he learned that Robinson had not reported for work July 16, the night of the crime.

The alleged victim said she could not positively identify Robinson as her assailant, but police obtained a palm print in the room that coincided with that of Robinson.

The girl told of waking about 4 a. m. and finding a man in her bed who tried to subdue her by scratching and striking her. She picked up a small fan from a table near the bed, she said, and pushed it into the attacker's face. He fled, with the girl brandishing a chair at his heels. When he escaped through a window and started down one of the posts supporting the porch, she hurled the chair at him.

Police later followed a trail of blood that led for more than a block from the house.

Blick told Turnage that when Robinson was arrested his head was bandaged, and that Robinson said he had received the injuries in an argument in New York's Harlem section.

Dinner Honors Lt. Com. Roberts

Lieut. Comdr. Osgood Roberts, U. S. N., was guest of honor at a buffet supper at the Mayflower last night.

In the gathering were Admiral William Brent Young, paymaster-general of the Navy, to whose office Commander Roberts is assigned; District Commissioner J. Russell Young, members of the White House Correspondents' Association, and other Washington newspapermen and friends of Commander Roberts.

Until he resigned last week to enter the Navy, Commander Roberts was director of public relations of the Mayflower Hotel.

'March of Time' to Pay Bluejacket His Just Due

Next Issue Dedicated to "Men of the Fleet;" Paramount Rolls Out Its Heavy Backlog; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

NOBODY NEEDS TO BE TOLD that the United States Navy today faces the grimmest and most gigantic task in its history. Neither does anybody need to be told that service aboard the limited quarters of a battleship calls for the perfect coordination and cooperation of highly trained specialists functioning at top speed and efficiency.

BING CROSBY

What many may not know is precisely what these specialized services are and how men are trained to perform them and carry out their duties aboard ship.

So, the latest issue of "March of Time" has been devoted to "Men of the Fleet" and the contribution the bluejacket is making to the common war effort. It will show that there is not a modern advance in engineering, logistics, medicine or military science that is not being utilized by today's streamlined fleet. Perhaps more important, it will make clear that so urgent is the cry for ever-increasing enrollment of skilled man power that for the first time in the memory of Navy men the possibility of extensive drafting of personnel for this branch is being given serious consideration.

There should be high drama here, as well as enlightenment for the layman landlubber and a sharp prod to patriotism. Should be coming along to the screen at RKO-Keith's reasonably soon.

Coming ashore from the battlewagons and taking on with the land forces it seems that tricks of Indian ambush and gangster warfare are now basic training in the American Army. The point will be made clear in the new war-short—and one wishes that might be reversed into short-war—"New Soldiers Are Tough," which presents guerilla warfare in its every guise, as filmed by newsreel cameramen throughout the world. This one will be coming along to the Trans-Lux on Friday, July 31, according to the moment's most reliable information.

Salvaged from the Cutting-Room Floor

Our Mr. Ernie Schier would be glad to have it known that in reviewing Tuesday night's opening of "Ten Nights in a Barroom," on the Willard Roof, he was not indifferent to aspects of the performance other than those which found their way into print. It was only that Mr. Schier's piece fell victim to the midnight demands of space rationing.

One of the things that seemed to impress him most was the astonishment of the capacity audience when, at the sibilant height of its hissing, the impudent Dick Midgley, cast as the villain of the piece, turned around and hissed right back at them!

Another was that the olio acts almost superseded the show itself in audience popularity. This, he feels, was "due to the presence of that little bit of T. N. T. from Washington, Miss Bibi Osterwald, whose interpretation of 'Frankie and Johnny' would put Mae West to shame."

There was, too, the item of beer and pretzels, but why bring that up?

Paramount is bragging again. And no wonder, if what they say is true—as it probably is. Some bright mind, wandering through the company's vaults out in Hollywood with an inventory sheet and a pencil, has come up with the startling discovery that completed features now on hand will provide releases through the summer and fall and into the winter months, without regard to the major pictures now in production or scheduled for early start. With the final editing and scoring of six recently completed feature films, Paramount finds itself ready to go with 30 features, with 4 in work and 10 ticketed to start within the next few weeks. This gives Paramount not only the biggest backlog of finished product in the history of the company, but one which they claim sets an all-time high in the history of the industry.

This stockpile, of course, includes "Holiday Inn," the Irving Berlin musical, costarring Bing Crosby and Fred Astaire, produced and directed by Mark Sandrich, already previewed and enthusiastically touted by the local drama desks. If you have been wondering when this unique number will be publicly broken out here, it probably won't be for a few weeks yet. The New York premiere is scheduled for the Paramount Theater on August 4, with a special, reserved-seat opening, entire proceeds to be turned over to the Navy Relief Society.

Starlets At the Seashore

Two demure girl starlets from Washington, D. C., are featured in the current Little Theater production on the Steel Pier, in Atlantic City, says a bulletin just to hand. They are Mary Jane Owens, 14, of 718 Chesapeake Street, Silver Spring, and Eleanor Johnston, 16, of 6 Marlin Green Southwest. The hometown gals, billed as Owens & Johnston, step completely out of natural character to present their inimitable hill-billy dialogue and songs in "Camp Carefree," says the inimitable pier stentor. The Little Theater, by the way, was opened on the Steel Pier 12 years ago to afford opportunity for talented youngsters to gain stage experience against a later professional career. Mary Jane and Eleanor seem to be on their way.

Fancy parchments are out bidding the lucky to an advance screening of Columbia's "The Talk of the Town," costarring Cary Grant, Jean Arthur and Ronald Colman, in Paramount's plushy projection room, next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, followed by cocktails and buffet at the Variety Club in the Willard, from 4:30 until Mr. Galanty siphons you out. "A George Stevens Production," if you care.

HEDDA HOPPER

Bands Will Play, Trumpets Blair!

Hollywood, Calif., July 22. Max Gordon is trying to borrow Janet Blair for a Broadway musical next winter called "It's June Again." This makes three productions. Max has lined up—"Franklin Street" and a revival of "Yellow Jacket" with Harpo Marx. Janet was a singer with Hal Kemp's band before she came to pictures, but never appeared on the stage. After Max saw her in "My Sister Eileen" he decided he wanted her for his show.

FRED ALLEN

He's not the only one doing a nip-up over her. Rosalind Russell, who's taken Janet under her wing, has asked Columbia to give her equal billing with herself, and Brian Aherne—Janet's that good. Which is some compliment, if I ever heard one.

Yes, it's a lucky week for Janet. She wasn't born near the "Horseshoe Bend" for nothing—she's just wearing it around her neck.

Metro's bought "No Surrender," a story of an American girl who found herself in the beseiged countries just after the outbreak of the war, as a little something for the French actor, Jean Pierre Aumont, who, they hope, will have the same direct action on women that Charles Boyer has.

William Fadiman (brother of Clifton), who is Kenneth MacGowan's assistant at Metro, certainly wasted no time. He and his wife arrived Saturday. Kenneth phoned Monday morning, asked if he could stop by and take him to the studio.

Bill said, "Heck, no! I bought a car yesterday morning and spent the afternoon finding my own way out to Culver City—thanks just the same!"

Astrologist Nella Webb, friend and adviser of the late Marie Dressler, has become a one-woman blitz to have Marjorie Rambeau play Marie's life on the screen. And wouldn't she be excellent!

When Fred Allen was asked what he knew about music, he said, "Well, I know Toscanini plays louder than Guy Lombardo."

"I wonder what he'd have thought of Jack Benny and Jascha Heifetz playing together for "Command Performance," which is shortwaved to all our boys in service. And it wasn't "The Bee," either.

It was "To a Wild Rose"—a fragrant piece, and so was their performance!

When Carmen Miranda was in Brazil she kept 10 songwriters busy writing songs for her, and since she's been in the United States she's kept seven of them under retainer fee.

In "Springtime in the Rockies" she'll do one of their songs titled "Tic Tac Do Meu Caracao" —which means "You make my heart go tick tock."

When Columbia officials sent John Beal (who will soon be with Uncle Sam) over to be voice tested so they could find a double to sing for him in "Shall We Tell 'Em?" they found out he had a good voice. The director said, "Let Beal do it," then learned John had sung on Broadway in "She Loves Me Not."

Jaro Churian of Warner's music department witnessed the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand in 1914, which set off the fireworks of the Fir. World War. Churian was then a captain in the Austrian army. After the war he went to Czech -Slovakia as a diplomat. Later he came to America, and within 24 hours after landing made application for citizenship.

And just think how many foreigners have been here for lo, these many years who've never even thought of doing that.

Marjorie Manners, who's doing the lead in "From Texas to Bataan," the first flag-waving Western, is entitled to do a little flag-waving herself. She's a descendant of Betsy Ross.

First studio visited by Nurse Kenny of infantile paralysis cure fame, was Metro. Her No. 1 hero is Wallace Beery, and then Lionel Barrymore, because he played Dr. Gillespie in the Kildare series.

She had quite a talk with Joan Crawford and siad, "You don't know how lucky you picture people are, and what good you do. After my hardest days I go to se pictures and relax completely."

She's a huge woman, looks like a Valkyrie—and ploughed through a luncheon that had the men envious. Guess she's never heard of adiet.

An Imposing Russian Film At the Little

Another page of Russian history, hitherto unfamiliar to American moviegoers, is now showing at the Little Theater. The saga of Peter the Great, who defeated the Swedes at Neva and founded the great seaport of St. Petersburg, is told with vividness and power in a Russian-made film which bears the title of that monarch.

Adapted from the book by Alex Tolstoy, the picture presents Peter without any attempt at whitewash. None of his faults have been overlooked and his essential character, that of a strong man who fought for modern ways in a backward country, remains.

After his defeat at the hands of the Swedish army at Narva in 1700, Peter retired to Moscow to raise money to build a fleet and replace his lost artillery. When he orders the destruction of all church bells to make cannon, the religious groups turn against him and place their hope in his weak-minded son.

But Peter is determined to bring progress to Russia and, after he drives out the Swedish invaders, he sets about tearing down old customs and building new and better ones. Young men are sent to England, Germany and Holland to study science, navigation and architecture. The end of the picture comes with Peter recovering from a near-fatal illness in time to celebrate the birth of a new heir to the throne.

Russia's Most Pretentious

"Peter I," is probably one of the most pretentious Russian films ever made. The huge mobs, which appear frequently, are handled with a maximum of effectiveness and all assume a definite mood and character. Still a little weak and limited in the technical aspects of picture making, Russia's outstanding contribution to films is the tremendously truthful and convincing portrayals which so consistently mark her cinema efforts.

In the hands of Nikolai Simonov, Peter the First becomes entirely human. A man with an ambition, who maintains the long-range view despite the hurt and opposition that comes with it. A man human enough to get down in the ditches with a shovel and help build St. Petersburg. Second honors go to M. Zharov, who plays Menshikov, aide to the Czar. A warm and faithful servant who knows when to follow and when to lead. Nikolai Cherkassov is seen as the Czarevitch and Alla Tarasova as the German serving girl, who become wife of the ruler of Russia.

Stars Have Laugh On Their Director

Director William Keighley was the victim of a piece of trickery on the set of Warner Bros.' "George Washington Slept Here," with costars Ann Sheridan and Jack Benny the perpetrators.

Ann and Jack left the lot at noon and had lunch at a nearby restaurant owned by Keighley and his wife, Genevieve Tobin. After lunch, Benny told the director that Ann was ill, in her dressing room.

Much concerned, Keighley hurried to his feminine star, and found her doubled up, moaning. "Indigestion," she said.

"What did you have for lunch?" Keighley inquired.

"I don't remember," wailed Ann, "but whatever it was, I ate it at your restaurant."

Her Typing Not City Room Kind

Brenda Marshall's stenography course at Texas State Teachers' College almost proved too much of a good thing.

Miss Marshall is playing the role of a newspaper woman in Warner Bros.' "You Can't Escape Forever." She was operating a typewriter for a scene in the city room of a metropolitan newspaper.

"Here, here," interrupted Director Jo Graham, "you can't type like that, Brenda. That's the 'touch' system. Did you ever see a newspaper reporter who typed like an expert? Most of them use their own hunt-and-peck system and you'd better do the same."

Early Start

Mabel Paige, New York actress who makes her film debut in Paramount's "Young and Willing," spoke her first lines in the theater at the age of 4.

LEONARD LYONS

New York, July 22.

ATTORNEY GENERAL BIDDLE: Despite the fact that you ruled for his deportation, Harry Bridges is proceeding with his projects for the war program. The union leader is organizing a longshoremen's battalion—experts who will accompany the troops overseas and help unload their cargoes. These men will be commissioned . . . HARRY HOPKINS: Your friends report that the reason you and Louise Macy selected July 30 as the wedding day was because that was the only date Eleanor Roosevelt had open . . . CLAUDE WICKARD: Robert Hinckley, who just resigned as your Assistant Secretary of Commerce, now is the assistant to the president of Sperry Corporation.

CLARK GABLE

GROVER WHALEN: You forgot one thing in planning the recent "New York at War Parade"—the longest parade in American history. Grandstand seats were sold—some at $5 each—but the Federal tax wasn't provided for. The United States Treasury now wants that tax. And there's no record of the amount due, because all the ticket stubs have been destroyed . . . M. LITVINOFF: New York Russians, who received mail from Moscow last week, learned that Shostakovich—whose "Seventh Symphony" was premiered by Toscanini—tried to enlist in the army. The officials ordered him not to enlist under threat of arrest . . . CLARK GABLE: Has the Air Corps said no?

EQUITY: The principal role in Saroyan's "Across the Board on Tomorrow Morning" will be played by Carl Vierag, the veteran captain of waiters at the 21 Club . . . GENERAL MARSHALL: Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army" grossed over $47,000 last week—a profit of $42,600 to Army Emergency Relief. And if the War Department approves, "This Is the Army" will become a weekly half-hour radio show, for which a sponsor will pay $18,000 a week, for 40 weeks . . . KEENAN WYNN: When your father, Ed Wynn, learned that your 2-year-old son was working in a picture, he offered this one bit of advice to the boy: "To you, the fourth generation of actors in our family—keep it clean."

CORDELL HULL: Patrick Dowling, Adolf Hitler's nephew, who came here 2 years ago, said last week: "They are now calling me the white sheep of my family" . . . CARMEN MIRANDA: That Winter Garden show for which you're being signed will have Milton Berle for its star . . . GOVERNOR HURLEY: When Harry Hopkins and Louise Macy were discussing their wedding plans, the groom-to-be said she could select their honeymoon place—London, Moscow, Rio, Chungking. Mrs. Macy rejected all these places. "It wouldn't be a honeymoon in any of those cities, because we wouldn't be alone," she ruled. "So we're going to spend a week in Connecticut."

HAROLD ROSS: Peter Arno, the cartoonist, is writing and producing a musical, which will be brought to Broadway in September. It will be based upon the characters in his New Yorker cartoons . . . JOHN FORD: Russian cameramen also go into action. The pictures of Marshal Timoshenko at the front, which appear in the short, "Inside Fighting Russia," were taken by a newsreel cameraman doubling as navigator of a Russian bomber . . . JIM FARLEY: This was the Washington consensus, last week end: Unless the President speaks out, directly, within the next few days, your gubernatorial candidate, John Bennett, will get the nomination.

EXPLORERS CLUB: Lawrence Copley Thaw, who traveled through the African jungle in an air-conditioned trailer, has been commissioned as a captain in the Signal Corps . . . ELEANOR POWELL: Eleanor Whitney, who is getting screen offers, was told by a movie agent: "You want me to tell you something? I remember when it was a close race as to which was the better dancer—you or Eleanor Powell." "You want me to tell you something?" Miss Whitney confessed. "She won." . . . ASSOCIATED AMERICAN ARTISTS: Pablo Picasso, whose paintings were banned in Germany for being "degenerative," now finds that his best customers in Paris are the Nazis.

GENERAL HERSHEY: The story is being told of a draftee, examined by a psychiatrist who okayed him. "Is there anything else you think I ought to know?" was the psychiatrist's final question. "Well, my mother was frightened by a broken juke box," confessed the draftee, "and I'm not exactly, not exactly, not exactly, not exactly" . . . GILBERT MILLER: Michael Todd, producer of the current Gypsy Rose Lee-Bobby Clark show, "Star and Garter," now is swinging to the other side of the field. He'll produce Ferenc Molnar's new play . . . MAYOR LAGUARDIA: Norman Bel Geddes went to sea, to inspect the New York dimout effect and will try to design an improvement.

A Bit Unusual, but Maybe Okay!

poses a problem for the gatekeeper at Twentieth Century-Fox by doing something practical about the gas and tire shortage. The horse-drawn jaunting-car struck all concerned as just a mite out of this world, but it got her to the "The Loves of Edgar Allan Poe" set—and presumably back home again—on time, at that. Does look odd, doesn't it?

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Gabin Back to Sea

Hollywood, July 22 (INS).—One brand new Hollywood rumor I find hard to believe is that Marlene Dietrich isn't exerting as much influence on the career of her friend, Jean Gabin, as she did when he was making "Moontide." It is an open secret that when Gabin was making his American debut movie, Marlene had plenty to say about the script and even advised him about his publicity campaign. Her advice must have been good—for Gabin "went over" very well. If Jean isn't listening to Marlene professionally, he's still plenty interested in what she has to say on other matters, for they are together constantly.

MARLENE DIETRICH

The life story of Pierre la Sally has been called off for him because the location backgrounds and distances are too involved. So the French actor goes back to the sea for an opus by Ladislas Fedor, "Tampico." It's about a captain on a tanker, and when his boat is torpedoed he realizes that only two people in the world could be responsible for the "leak"—his sweetheart or his best friend.

Irene Dunne, who has had to go out to dinner, to the theater and everywhere alone for months, while her husband, Dr. Francis Griffin, has been doing a job for Uncle Sam at Las Vegas, is discussing what I consider a most interesting idea.

Mind you, it wasn't settled before she left for the East, but Columbia is interested in having her star in "Gaslight," the play from which the highly successful "Angel Street," a Broadway hit, was taken.

A unique arrangement has been made by M.G.-M. with RKO. Out at Metro, they are making a picture called "Bataan Patrol," and because so many of the situations in the picture are similar to RKO's famed "The Lost Patrol," Leo the Lion is agreeing to pay for any similarity in story; that's what I call being honest, coming right out before a picture is filmed and saying: "Here is your pound of flesh, boys."

After starring in "The Palm Beach Story," all about sunshine, Claudette Colbert vacationed in Sun Valley, land of snow and ice.

VIRGINIA LEE

the more pulchritudinous half of the team of Lathrop and Lee, to be featured on next week's stage bill, opening Friday, at the Earle Theater

President Portrayed

Novis Is Heard Unseen, in 'Bambi'

Girls who have listened entranced by phonograph and radio as Donald Novis' liquid tenor voice floated out to them in romantic love songs will have a chance to become twitterpated again when they see Walt Disney's "Bambi," for he introduces "Love Is a Song That Never Ends," theme song of the film.

Novis is not seen, but the song, expected to become a popular favorite, is heard six times during the colorful feature.

Prophetic

When Paramount set the cameras rolling on "Priorities On Parade" a few months ago, extolling women as defense workers, events to come were being prophesied. Since then, the U. S. Government has released orders to aircraft plants to replace 2,000,000 men by women this coming year.

Veteran Gets Important Role

Charles Dingle has been added to the cast of "The Man On America's Conscience," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's historical drama featuring Van Heflin, Lionel Barrymore and Ruth Hussey.

Dingle, a veteran character actor, is best known for his portrayal of the avaricious older brother in "The Little Foxes." He played in both the stage and screen versions. He has also had featured roles in "Calling Dr. Gillespie" and "Somewhere I'll Find You."

Red, White and Blue

Jean Rogers has a new decoration for her home.

Noting that 30 national magazines used the American flag for their cover pages this month, she bought them all, and used the pages, varnished after being pasted on, to cover a screen for her bedroom.

One's' Good Luck Aids Three More

The good luck chain started by Jane Randolph when she won the top feminine role in RKO-Radio's "Highways by Night" hasn't been broken. Four thus far have profited.

Latest is Charlotte Lawrence, who succeeded Jane in the feminine lead in Max Reinhardt's Workshop production of "Dangerous Corner," when Jane went to RKO-Radio. Charlotte's work in this part brought her a Warner Bros. screen test.

Others who benefited in the progression are Sally Wadsworth, who took a smaller role for which Jane had been tested, and Mary Halsey, who won a part originally scheduled for Sally.

Actors Taste Luscious Pie

It took a movie scene to do it, but Jean Parker proved she is one of Hollywood's best cooks.

The scene was a party for Paramount's "Wrecking Crew," thirty-five players in the sequence, including stars Richard Arlen and Chester Morris.

It was Jean's day off and she spent the entire morning in her kitchen, baking apple pies, and then drove on the lot and supplied the players with her product.

Ship Sinkings

From time to time during recent months we have been assured by Navy spokesmen that the submarine menace in the Western Atlantic was about to be licked. Last spring, for instance, the people were told that by July 1 the tide of ship sinkings would definitely begin to take a turn for the better. Unfortunately it has not worked out that way at all. According to the War Shipping Administration, shipping losses during the week of July 12 reached the highest level since the beginning of the war. Nor is the rapidly rising output from our shipyards and the shipyards of Allied nations even beginning to make good these losses. Such sinkings, the War Shipping Administration bluntly declares, "have greatly exceeded new construction."

It is evident that we shall have to do far more in the direction of combating the U-boat menace than we have done if the situation is not to get any worse. For the bald fact of the matter is that we are losing the vital Battle of the Atlantic. The sinkings of ships means more than the destruction of bottoms. It also means a steady drain on the personnel of our merchant marine and the loss of valuable cargoes. It is reassuring to note, of course, that through restrictions on export and import space, "no essential military cargoes have been left on piers because of lack of ships."

But such measures, while undoubtedly useful, do not begin to get at the heart of the issue. Nor is it an entirely satisfactory explanation of the situation to be told that our failure to make progress in ridding nearby waters of lurking enemy undersea craft is purely the result of lack of adequate means to combat the U-boat. In time we may be able to employ an adequate number of scouting planes, blimps and patrol boats to make submarine operations on this side of the Atlantic increasingly hazardous. We must recognize, however, that the German construction of U-boats is going steadily ahead, and that the Gulf, the Caribbean and the waters off our eastern seaboard are becoming more rather than less infested with these lethal craft.

It is apparent, therefore, that bold measures must be taken to grapple with a danger that is threatening our war effort at a singularly crucial point. Some day—and we can only hope that that day is not distant—we may be able to relieve the pressure on shipping by employing an ever-increasing number of air freight carriers and transports. In the meantime the submarine must be fought to a standstill if we are to keep the flow of essential supplies moving into this country and the flow of supplies to our Allies and to our far-flung fighting fronts uninterrupted and unimpeded.

Cholly Knickerbocker

It was mainly the late Ward McAllister and the somewhat later Harry Lehr who established Society (with the S writ large) into a profitable American industry with its own special trade jargon and its own trade journals. Cholly Knickerbocker (christened in neat dactyls Maury Henry Biddle Paul) owed a good deal to these—er—pioneers; though of course he was neither a fastidious amateur like McAllister nor a professional exquisite like Lehr. He was simply a highly specialized kind of journalist, and for a generation or so he was indubitably the top practitioner of his specialty. If you want to know the esteem in which his colleagues held him (always a good test in such matters), just read some of the tributes which his recent death has evoked from them.

Part of Cholly's professional equipment was of course inherited. That is to say, he came of an old Philadelphia family, was connected with the Biddles, no less, had gone to the right schools, knew all the wheels within the wheels, all the subtle nuances which distinguish blue blood from various pastel imitations. If, as a matter of taste or something, he wrote not under his own name but rather under the kind of name the ingenuous masses might suppose an aristocrat to wear, there was no inhibition about using his hereditary instincts and the essentially parochial judgments of his childhood milieu.

The significant thing, however, is that Cholly Knickerbocker wrote not for the benefit of Society but for the masses. His great success came when he transferred his column to a newspaper, expertly edited to strike what was then considered the lowest common denominator of intelligence and taste. It was the nonfamiliar trick of "talking Fifth Avenue to sell to Sixth," afterward imitated so profitably by the advertising agencies. Cholly's column was no doubt read avidly enough by the people whose names appeared in it, but the total of these was scarce enough to impress a circulation manager. What made the thing profitable was the fact that Cholly was daily devoured by those who liked to dream that they dwelt in marble halls.

Tydings Report

When the furore over decentralization plans entailing removal of Federal employes from the National Capital was at its height, congressional probing led to the discovery that nobody really knew how much vacant space could be made available for office use in the District. In some instances, indeed, no survey of housing and office facilities had been undertaken in the cities to which removals of Government agencies were contemplated. Thanks very largely to the searching questions asked by Senator Tydings in the course of public hearings on decentralization proposals, the Senate authorized an inquiry to determine the numbers of Government employes who could be transferred from their present positions to war agencies "with a view to expediting and intensifying the war effort, reducing Governmental expenses and improving the serious situation with respect to housing facilities and office accommodations."

A subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, headed by Senator Tydings, has now published the results of this inquiry. Its findings, admittedly provisional and imperfect, are nevertheless extremely valuable. The committee uncovered innumerable instances of duplication and overlapping of functions—instances which give weight to its withering criticism of the "nature of so-called reorganizations during recent years." Organizational changes, it charges, have "led to an unbelievable inflation of administrative personnel," due to the practice of simply adding "another organizational level on top of the constituent organizations brought together." An outstanding illustration of this worse than ineffective type of reorganization and consolidation is afforded by the new housing setup. The committee affirms that four months after creation of the National Housing Agency, the consolidated organizations were, with one exception, carrying on the same operations as before.

It is further charged that many old-line Government organizations, the scope of whose operations has been severely restricted by the war, continue to carry a full complement of employes. For correction of this situation the committee recommends that the Civil Service Commission be given the power to effect mandatory transfers of employes to war agencies. The commission is reluctant to assume such authority until similar powers of mandatory transfer are applied to war industries. Nevertheless, it admits that use of the transfer power would furnish greatly needed, experienced personnel to the war agencies.

Of particular interest is the inquiry into the scope of the publicity and research organizations of the Government. The committee rightly maintains that it is "unnecessary and improper" for Government agencies to distribute material designed to spread controversial theories. In particular it objects to the publication of articles in advocacy of deficit financing. Indeed, the Budget Bureau is charged with harboring influential economists whose adherence to such heretical theories are regarded as responsible in good part for the failure of the bureau to save money by streamlining the Government establishment. This is perhaps, the least convincing part of the report. The Budget Bureau is subject to control by the President, and could make little headway in effecting economies without his support. On the other hand, if the Budget Bureau were made responsible solely to Congress—a possibility mentioned by the committee—it would be a move for the worse. The suggested maintenance of a small staff of expert budget analysts by the Senate Committee on Appropriations might, however, constitute a salutary check upon the Budget Bureau and stimulate it to greater saving endeavors.

In addition to launching an attack on the Budget Bureau, the Tydings Committee unearthed some startling facts having a very direct and immediate bearing on the question of office space. For it found that, after making liberal per capita allowances for occupancy, the office space in excess of such standard allowances utilized by 34 Government departments and agencies would accommodate over 15,500 additional employes. Vacant space in the Metropolitan area together with the space occupied by dead files, would take care of another 4500 employes. Disclosures of this sort are not merely startling—they are proof of a deplorable lack of system in executive agencies charged with responsibility for making the best possible use of employes, plant, and equipment in the existing war emergency.

Admiral Leahy

The most heartening thing about the appointment of Rear Admiral William D. Leahy as Chief of Staff to the Commander in Chief is that it will relieve the President of much of the detail involved in supervising the military side of the war effort. Foch said that the wise commander in chief had no more than half a dozen men reporting to him. Our Commander in Chief must have many times that number. In part this is because Mr. Roosevelt happens to be both President and Commander in Chief, and sometimes it is difficult in wartime to know where one role ends and the other begins. In part it is due to Mr. Roosevelt's congenital desire to keep a finger in every pie. That he has at last decided to shelve some of the work attached to his military job is cause for satisfaction, for, in the trying times ahead, the entire world, let alone this country, is dependent upon a clear head in the White House.

But, beyond taking some of the detail work off Mr. Roosevelt's shoulders, it is difficult to see exactly Admiral Leahy's place in the high command. He seems to be a sort of Harry Hopkins in naval uniform. And that would make him shadowy and nebulous. Hitherto the President has had an unhappy faculty of making appointments which have not jelled in the existing scheme of things. Admiral King's appointment as Commander in Chief of the Fleet was a case in point. The relation between Admiral King and the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Stark, was never clear even to the two admirals, and the ambiguity bedeviled the naval command till Admiral Stark was removed to London, and Admiral King stepped into both his shoes.

Perhaps, as the alter ego of the President, Admiral Leahy will have no such difficulty. The closest analogy to his role is Gen. Sir Hastings Ismay as chief of staff to the Minister of Defense in London. General Ismay sits with the Chiefs of Staffs Committee in London as the representative of Mr. Churchill, who is minister of defense as well as Prime Minister. It is to be hoped that Admiral Leahy will carry the same authority, and more. He ought to outrank the heads of the fighting services, so that he can formalize and improve the liaison between them on our joint staff committee. The lesson of this war is that our fighting services must plan and fight as one.

In The Aleutians

The continued attrition of Japanese strength in the Aleutians is encouraging. But the very extent of Japanese losses suggests how dangerously complacent our naval authorities were when, after the Japanese began to move into the islands, this action was dismissed as of "no strategic importance." Such informed laymen as Anthony J. Dimond, the delegate from Alaska, have from the first refused to take so easy-going a view. No one can say whether Mr. Dimond is correct in estimating that 25,000 Japanese have landed on the captured islands. But it is evident from the size of the forces the enemy has employed in the Aleutians that this estimate may not be far wrong.

It is also evident that the Japanese regard the retention of the islands as of such importance in their strategy that they are prepared to risk much to hold them. Nor is it any wonder. If they are allowed to stay on in the Aleutians, they will be in a position to transform them into powerful naval and air bases from which to cut communications between the American mainland and Siberia, and, in the long run, to make our position in Alaska difficult as well. The fact of the matter is that Attu and Kiska and the other islands which the Japanese have taken over provide them with a strategic jumping-off point from which they can move either east or west and possibly in both directions at once. It is an elementary matter of self-defense, therefore, to drive them out as soon as possible.

ALWAYS FERNS

Up through the leaf mold:
Fern fist, fawn grey,
Curled close, high, higher,
Fan spread to wood's day.
All through the oak wood
Deep into May-leaf light,
Cool, cool,
Rain dipped, dew sprung;
Hill, bank, marsh, pool,
All hold fern world.

Never a month, never a day—
Heat crisped, frost curled,
Rock tipped, root swirled,
Somehow, somewhere, fern fronds
Or live core
Of green fingers in earth's lap
Busy, busy, busy with growing;
Or waiting, waiting, for spring sap;
Locked bronze or brave green,
Winter quiet in earth's lap.

Children's War

Is patriotism merely limited to adults? Here is an interesting story of a group of grade school boys from a little coal-mining town called Freeland, in Pennsylvania.

Reading of various maneuvers, and seeing pictures of our United States Army in action, 10 or 11 youngsters decided to get together and try to get some knowledge of military life and at the same time develop their bodies. Each day at specified times, drills are held "sham" battles fought with wooden guns, various exercises practiced and long hikes held. These daily routine exercises not only develop their young bodies, but most of all instill in them the true American spirit of preserving liberty.

It rather amazed me to hear of their fine spirit and I hope that other youngsters will get the same idea and use their spare time in this beneficial way.

Slam From The West

Please generate more enthusiasm for slamming Hitler from the west. Now, when the adversaries in Russia are evenly matched, when the lines sway back and forth, is the safest time for action. To wait is to gamble with the Devil's winning a partial victory that would enable him to freight back to the Atlantic a million of his uniformed swine. Then, indeed, would many mothers, including mine, have cause to tremble for their soldier sons.

Now is the expedient time, now the honorable time.

Wants Plain Truth

We want the plain and unvarnished truth about our own and our fine Allies' successes and failures in the war. We want nothing to be printed which will aid those who are killing and wounding us. We want to be treated to a fair statement of fact and opinion in our newspaper, radios and movies.

It is an insult to our faith, patriotism and native intelligence to have crammed down our throats some of the blatant and strictly canned patriotism which has been vomited forth at the so-called psychological moment, and to have our defeats and reverses clouded over and rushed out of the news by some heroic act of several months ago. More power to our heroes but let them remain in our hearts as the grand fellow Americans they are and not as confused and embarrassed public exhibits.

So much psychological hogwash is being fed to the public by book-read public relations men that the smell can even be noticed in Washington.

We can take it. We're not on the verge of collapse. Our sons, fathers, mothers and daughters are all sacrificing and will sacrifice to the final degree to win this war. Life, death, freedom and love are the stern realities we face and trickiness, deceit, false security and clever politics have no part in this life.

Please give it to us straight.

Letdown

Some men have a flair for folly, showing absence of sensible judgment. Some of our defense agencies display a similar lack of judgment, thereby advertising their folly.

A few weeks ago America was thrilled by the great shipbuilder from the South whose accomplishments in turning out the vessels we need for winning the war got him front page stories on many principal papers and magazines.

A great contract, 65 million dollars, had been awarded to the shipbuilder to build additional ways from which he could build 200 ships necessary for whipping Hitler.

Then came the shock, the Maritime Commission canceled the contract to build the ways, because forsooth, they feared that the steel required in building the ways might interfere with other ship construction at yards already equipped with the ways.

This is the same commission which last October boasted to the world that we were going to route all our shipments of military supplies from one Atlantic port bound for Archangel. The President fumed, the State Department raved, and the joint infuriation brought a sharp reprimand to the Maritime Commission which, one would have thought, was sufficient.

This latest blunder, shall I say last, is even more egregious, as it can be taken as a public confession that we cannot carry out our boasted program of building ships faster than the Hun can sink them, due to shortage of materials.

Some time ago the Executive hint was given to Cabinet officers, "No more speeches on policy unless cleared through the White House." This may be a good time to censor publication of "big" contracts until we find out whether or not we can go through with them.

Socrates' Patriotism

Just 2300 years ago Socrates died as one of the great martyrs to the cause of truth. In his last message he gave his friend, Crito, a definition of patriotism which is still timely after the passage of 23 centuries. Prof. Lane Cooper has translated the words thus:

"Yes, one must reverence the fatherland, and yield and soften more to it when it is harsh to one's father, and either win it to one's side or do what it commands, and suffer quietly when it enjoins, whether that means to be put in chains, or to be led to war and there be wounded or slain. One must do it all, for that is what justice demands. One must not weaken, nor flinch, nor leave one's post, but in war, in court, and everywhere one must do what the fatherland enjoins, or else win her over by means that are by nature right."

On the following day Socrates went to his death. So high was his concept of patriotism that he declined to escape from prison, for by so doing he would have been breaking the laws of Athens.

Pearl Harbor Memorial

There should be a memorial to the boys who sacrificed their lives at Pearl Harbor.

It should have the hallowed air that the Lincoln Memorial has, and should be of the same motif, fashioned in great dignity. The memory of this military sacrifice should be inshrined in marble to remind us of the debt we owe to America's soldier-martyrs there. READER.

Court Stenographers For All

I read with interest an article in your newspaper by Mr. Huff, superintendent of the penal institutions of the District of Columbia. This article deals with criminal cases in the District of Columbia.

I practiced law a number of years in a western State before coming to Washington. As a practicing attorney here I was amazed at the procedure in the local courts. They were actually practicing law in the District much the same as our great-great-grandfathers had at the inception of the Republic. Since that time the New Rules of Civil Procedure has changed the pleadings, etc., but the District Code is now so antiquated that personal property exemptions still mention a team of oxen. Common law pleadings were only abolished by the new rules.

But the most amazing thing of all was the fact that although the Justices proudly wore their robes of office, their courts did not follow the modern practice of having a court stenographer to take the testimony of the witnesses.

I had in my time tried cases in vacant business houses, abandoned barrooms, schoolhouses, and other places, where perhaps a rough pine table served both for counsel and the court, and simple wooden chairs were places of comfort and repose for the members of the jury. At all trials there was a court stenographer to take down the testimony, whether the client was rich or poor, and whether it was a criminal or a civil case, regardless of the amount involved, so long as the court had jurisdiction.

Like many others who had practiced in so-called code States, I was amazed to find that if you wanted a stenographer in any case, the litigant must pay the expense, and if you did not, you had no written record of the testimony adduced at the trial. I was further amazed to find that this situation existed in the criminal courts. Though the charge be a felony there is no written evidence of the record except possibly in capital cases. This situation practically forecloses the right of an appeal by a defendant. The testimony embraced in the record must be made up from the memory of the attorneys, much the same as an appeal in George Washington's time. It is difficult to make any lawyer outside of the District of Columbia believe that this antiquated procedure exists here.

Every court of record should have its stenographer reporting both civil and criminal cases. The failure to do so results in two kinds of justice, one for the rich client, the other for the poor. The person who can afford to hire a stenographer gets his rights fully protected, the poor person may get his rights protected depending upon the integrity of counsel, and the memory of the court.

If you are interested in seeing that poor persons obtain justice, the first step is to see that a proper record is made in each case. In my opinion there should be a court stenographer in all criminal cases where a felony is charged, or in civil actions where the amount involved exceeds $500.

In this connection I invite your attention to the case of Reed v. United States just decided by the Court of Appeals (128 Fed. (2) 325) in which the Court of Appeals stated that in view of the record, and the fact that the evidence for the Government was not stenographically reported, and was not contained in the record, the court had no alternative except to affirm the judgment. I have no idea of what the evidence would have shown had it been before the Court of Appeals, but the point is that if the criminal procedure in the District of Columbia had been brought up to a point where it was at least 50 years ago in western States, the record would have been before the Court of Appeals for determination of the questions involved. The Reed case involved a felony. It is hoped that through the cooperation of your newspaper this situation may be cured.

The Post Impressionist

The Other Half

Strange as it may seem, there are still plenty of people who have never visited Washington, either as high school senior, honeymooner, or job seeker with the Government. "What is Washington like?" they will ask, "Have you ever seen the President? Have you ever seen Senator So-and-so? Have you seen this or that notable?" Well, yes, I have. But while those are the people who officially make the wheels go around, it's the "other half" of the population which make you put on the brakes, metaphorically speaking, and look back. There are plenty of sights here that bring the casual stroller to a full stop and leave him staring bug-eyed. Maybe it would be the old apparition of the past who used to ramble down Connecticut Avenue a few years ago, driving a fat old gobble turkey ahead of him with a stick. He looked like Daniel Boone with his coonskin cap and his woodsman clothes, and there was nothing exactly suave or city-fied about the turkey, either, but they'd go ambling down the sidewalk and through the traffic as much at ease as though in their own barnyard. I knew they were there all right for everybody else turned and looked back, too.

And one of the most interesting elements of the "other half" is the cab-driver. Whatever part of the country they come from they are bound, sooner or later, to fall into the established Washington mold. They tell you of their hopes and fears their pasts and intended futures, of the pasengers that preceded you, how "one lady had a baby in my cab, yesterday, Lady. Right there on the seat where you are sitting!"

Or, as one earnest driver declared to me with great fervor, "I tell you, Madam, people can't stand the pace they go nowadays. I tell you, Madam, it eats into your longevity!"

"That," said one taxi driver, pointing out the sights to a newcomer, "is the Government Archives Building where all the Government archietecks live!" They're always ready to do a good turn, too. Take, for example, the one who drove two cultured ladies of my acquaintance downtown one day. The ladies, finding it necessary to discuss some personal affair of importance, decided it was best to conduct their conversation in French, since even the taxi-driver must not be allowed to overhear what they were saying. Suddenly, the driver turned in his seat and courteously interrupted them. "Pardon me, Lady," he volunteered helpfully, "but that is not the way you say it in French. You say it this way . . ."

The policemen, too, are a type not seen in other cities. I've heard it said—though I've never verified it—that 90 per cent of them are law school graduates. After all, the tens of thousands of Washington law school graduates must go somewhere! But college graduates or no, occasionally even the best policeman meets his Waterloo. Years ago I worked with an icthyologist and I still recall how he returned from lunch one noon greatly amused. He had been in a traffic accident, and the cop, taking his name and whatever other data necessary, asked: "What's your occupation?" "I am an icthyologist." "You're a what?" "An icthyologist." The policeman held his pencil poised uncertainly for a long minute over his pad, then "Oh, hell!" he said, "I'm just going to put you down as a clerk."

There are also the small tragedies of the "other half," which are as compelling as its lighter side. And not the least of them had to do with the colored janitor of a rooming house where I once lived. The janitor's wife checked out and, for no good reason, he erroneously decided she had left town with an eminent colored orchestra leader. Accordingly, he decided to end it all. He went down in the basement, turned on the gas and stretched out to await the end. Fortunately, the landlady's son entered the basement and investigated the source of the tell-tale odor, rudely disturbing the would-be last sleep. The janitor's hand revealed a clenched scrap of paper wrapped around 40 cents. The paper read: "Here is the money to pay for the gas I use." And, incidentally, knowing the landlady, I wouldn't doubt that she took the money. I wouldn't doubt it a bit! What price suicide?

Once, leaving Washington via Greyhound bus, the lady sitting in the seat beside me exhibited a strong desire to make conversation. I closed my eyes and turned my head away, feigning sleep. I soon learned that nobody could play 'possum with her and get away with it. She chatted on and on in loud, clear tones. At length she began to describe an illness she once suffered when aboard a bus. It was, she hinted darkly, a sort of paralytic stroke, and she began with the first symptom and continued to the end, no sensation left unexploited that would build up the heart-rending climax to be. So harrowing did the tale become that it was difficult not to ask, "And did you die?" when the climax appeared. . . . "And just then," she went on, "just then as the gentleman sitting behind me leaned over and said 'Lady, do you know how ill you've really been?' the bus drew up at a rest stop and I managed somehow or other—I don't know now how I ever did—to drag myself from the bus and inside the station and up to the lunch counter and sank down on a stool, and when the waitress said 'What is your order?' I am telling you it was just all I could do to finally manage to gasp out the word PIE!"

On the same bus that night were a couple of sailors. They sat in the seat behind me and I could not only hear the seductive clink and gurgle as they passed the bottle, but I could also hear their conversation. By the time we'd reached Philadelphia, conversation was increasingly difficult but still interesting. On a curbside vegetable stand were some particularly small potatoes. "Whad yuh do," asked one sailor of the other, "if yuh hadda dig a field o' spuds that size?" His friend regarded the potatoes gravely, pondered the matter awhile, then, "I'd just ignore 'em!" he said.

SALLY RUSSELL.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Admiral Leahy's Appointment

IT IS evident that the power of Admiral Leahy will be what Mr. Roosevelt and he make it. Admiral Leahy has no command. But the President is the commander-in-chief—and Admiral Leahy, lacking any personal authority of his own, will have more direct, continual, and close relation than any one else with the source of all military authority. So everything depends on the personalities and the personal relationship of the two men, and in this context the appointment has great potentialities.

LIPPMANN

FOR THE OFFICE of commander-in-chief is indispensable in a global and three-dimensional war on so many scattered fronts. Yet no man could hope to fill the office if he does not have a staff standing between him and the separate services, between him and the pressure of our many Allies. For the initial problem of the commander-in-chief is to make hard choices which confront him because the total needs of all the fronts is much greater than the military forces available. Only a staff, working coolly and methodically, can see to it that he is protected against making his decisions on the ground of sentiment and accident, or because of weariness in saying no.

The greater problem of the commander-in-chief is how and when to seize the strategical initiative: whenever this is done at any one point on the globe it will call for enormous risks and sacrifices elsewhere. So grave a decision cannot be taken properly unless the commander-in-chief himself has a staff specially devoted to judging the plan by considerations that are much wider—because they include vast political and social factors—than the operational staffs can be expected to pass upon finally.

For this particular post Admiral Leahy has long been much the most available man, so much so that many have begrudged the time he spent in Vichy when he was so obviously needed in Washington.

THE OFFICE of commander-in-chief is what the man who is President makes it. Mr. Roosevelt, like Lincoln before him in the earlier years of his war, has shown a strong disposition, at least as regards the Navy, to decide too many things that the commander-in-chief should not have to decide. He has tried to do a great many things that ought to be done by the Secretary of the Navy and the Chief of Naval Operations. This is humanly understandable. The temptation must have been great: Mr. Roosevelt is a former Assistant Secretary of the Navy who became President. Every one knows that civilian secretaries have never had much to say in the presence of the admirals; having become President, Mr. Roosevelt has enjoyed having his say, has enjoyed being the kind of Secretary of the Navy that no civilian can be unless he is President.

BUT of course he does not have time to be Secretary of the Navy. He has time only to dabble in being Secretary of the Navy. The effects have been deplorable, not at all in the sense that Mr. Roosevelt has mismanaged the Navy but in the sense that his hovering presence at the White House has deprived the Navy of the kind of civilian direction which the highly professionalized Navy needs.

The lack of effective civilian control, such as the Army does have, has been made manifest in many ways: in the West Point-Annapolis rivalry which did not end with the disaster at Pearl Harbor and is not wholly ended yet; in the grave deficiencies of naval planning which are the cause of our not having enough escorts to deal with the submarine; in the slowness with which the Navy Department roused itself to the seriousness of the submarine war, and in the patent personal inadequacy of some of the officers charged with commanding the campaign. These are examples of the kind of thing that a civilian Secretary of the Navy should be able to deal with. They have not been dealt with because the only Secretary of the Navy we have is Mr. Roosevelt, acting now and then on tidbits of information and his intuitions. With Admiral Leahy at his right hand, we may hope for better days.

THERE ARE many who feel that besides greater unity in the American command, there should be greater unity of command among the Allies. It is difficult for the outsider to form any practical judgment on how the Allied strategy could be better concerted, whether in fact Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill and the combined chiefs of staff are surmounting the difficulties which have plagued every coalition in the history of war. For as one slightly depressed statesman said the other day: "I no longer think Napoleon was as great a man as I used to think he was. I realize now that he was fighting a coalition."

It is evident, however, that as the over-all command of the American forces becomes more lucid, more methodical, and more salient, the United Nations' strategy in the West and in the Pacific will become more coherent. For coalitions have to be led. They cannot be commanded, and leadership will gravitate wherever there is force and the clearest conception of how to use it.

Austrian Underground

Unrecognized Ally

ALTHOUGH AUSTRIA is not very often mentioned in the news, enough significant items have been reported during the last weeks and months to reveal Austria as one of the chief troublemakers in Hitler's uneasy European order. These reports prove that the opposition in Austria—like that of Norway or Czecho-Slovakia—is not of a merely individual but of a national kind, and involves practically the entire population. The German censorship is naturally extremely careful in its attempts to veil a fact so contrary to its original annexation propaganda. But now, even the Germans have started to admit the existence of an Austrian resistence far beyond the scale generally realized in the Allied countries. By designating Austrian villages and cities as German, however, they are still able to create a wrong impression among their readers and listeners abroad who are usually not following up their information with a study of maps.

The following instances will give an indication as to the true position of Austria in the struggle against Hitler in which it occupies an important place:

As far back as May, 1941, the late Heydrich wrote in the official German monthly review "Bohemia and Moravia" that Hitler had entrusted him with the policing measures to be taken against "England's vassals, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland," and Himmler made it a special point in his speech at Heydrich's funeral to praise the energy with which he had prosecuted the opposition in Austria and Czecho-Slovakia.

IN FEBRUARY, 1942, the "Angriff," the official organ of the SS, attacked the Austrian peasants for "deliberately sabotaging the work of the Fuehrer." A dispatch of the same month announces the creation of a special Alpine brigade for the purpose to persue oppositional elements in the Ostmark (Nazi name for Austria) to their hide outs in the inaccessible mountains.

Another rrecent incident was the demand of 61,000 of the 300,000 German evacuess from territories destroyed by the R. A. F. to be returned from Austria to the Reich proper because of the bad treatment they received at the hands of the Austrian population.

One of the most severe orders, directed not against the entire Reich (as was interpreted in the press) but primarily against Austria, was the recent threat to purge the "querrulous," "lazy" elements who are not capable to adapt themselves to the needs of the "new national community." This order was issued in Vienna and not in Berlin as would be the case with a general order applying to the entire Reich, and one has only to translate the not very complimentary description in the proper terms to recognize the typical Austrian as the order's objective. "Querrulous" is the Austrian attitude toward the German conquerors, "lazy" refers to the world-famous Austrian "Gemuetlichkeit" which is highly productive from a cultural and artistic but not from a materialistic point of view and, therefore, of no value for the German war effort. And treason to the "new national community" is nothing but patriotism to an Austrian, who has never accepted this community.

Two groups are particularily active in the mountainous parts of the country: the "Andreas Hofer" group in the Tyrol, and the "Kaiserjaeger," named after the famous regiment of Imperial Austria, in Carynthia. These groups were responsible for the annihilation of a German armored train in the mountains near Koessen in the Tyrol, in August, 1941. In September of the same year they destroyed the railway near Amras, killing two German officers the following day, who were sent out to search for those responsible. In October, 1941, they dynamited the railway near Launsdorf in Carinthia, delaying German transports on their way to the Balcans.

ONE of their most daring feats was the burning on December 14, 1941, of a huge fire on top of the mountain, "Frau Hitt," overlooking the city of Innsbruck, flaming the letter "R" into the sky in honor of President Roosevelt and the entry of the United States into the war.

On February 2, 1942, this group clashed with members of the German SS near Mariazell in Styria, killing three SS men. March 10, 1942, three members of the German military police searching for deserters were killed near Rosshaag in the Zemm Valley.

Countless also are the acts of sabotage committed in the factories by the workers who have their own, peculiarily Austrian ways to displease the German masters, even at the risk of death. Numerous recent dispatches prove this though—as already mentioned—their Pan-German wording often veil the fact that they deal with the organized Austrian resistence. How generally these few examples reflect the true Austrian attitude was again high-lighted by a Tass report from Moscow, sent from Geneva on July 5, saying that "many Austrians have been executed during the last two month on charge of anti-Reich activities." After the assassination of Heydrich hundreds of persons were arrested and charged "with sympathy with the Czechs and disloyalty to the German Empire."

Austrian underground work, which has received a new spur by America's entry into the war, is efficiently organized in the so-called Austrian Common Front (oesterreichische Einheitsfront), in which the three most important groups, Monarchists Catholic peasants, and workers collaborate. These groups represent 85 per cent of the Austrian population and their work is so synchronized that it is often impossible to know which of the three groups is responsible for the various achievements. They distribute leaflets, organize listening posts to Swiss and Russian broadcasts, arrange whispering campaigns, etc. The monarchists edit an irregular paper "Der Oesterreicher" with much space for news and jokes, as a particularily Austrian feature. The different forms of print suggest that it is probably printed at a variety of places to avoid discovery.

The Austrian Common Front has no program as to the future form of state, whether Austria should be organized on a republican or monarchical basis. The workers have declared themselves neutral in the question while the other two groups favor the establishment of a constitutional monarchy. They all are very definitely set, however, on the re-establishment of parliamentary democracy and on the restoration of all democratic freedoms to the workers. Externally they desire a close collaboration with the other Danubian nations especially with the Czechs, the Slovaks, the Hungarians and the Croats.

Thus, the United Nations have a potential, active and loyal ally in the people of Austria, and nothing should prevent them from accepting them unreservedly with their sympathy and recognition, since their resistence to Hitler is such an undisputed reality. Though it is greatly and gratefully appreciated that the United States Department of Justice has granted the Austrians the status of friendly neutrals, the United States State Department still considers them as enemy aliens. Only a wholehearted recognition and their full acceptance in the great community of the United Nations will do justice to the effort of the Austrian people, who bleed and sacrifice and suffer for their convictions in the same way and measure as the other suppressed nations. To continue to discriminate against them is a last remnant of the period of appeasement which used to take history at Hitler's evaluation, and the only purpose it could conceivably serve is to provide Goebbels with arguments against the pro-allied sympathies of Austria.

A recognition, as allies, on the other hand, will not only bring the principles in line with the facts. It will also assure valuable assistance in the heart of Europe after the opening of a second front.

The Opium Problem

By An Opium Observer

America's Role In Combating It

THE OPIUM question is a tiresome question and has bothered the conscience of the world for a long time. It has caused wars between nations, and the drug itself has taken the toll of millions of lives. A little book dealing with the opium question has recently been published, entitled "Japan and the Opium Menace," by Frederick T. Merrill. To the casual reader the subject is dull and, save for the title, it is a question if this volume would be of interest to the public; but anything dealing with Japan and her iniquities is likely to arouse some attention at this time.

The opium question, however, is in itself an important question, and the publication of this book comes at an opportune moment, if only to remind the public of the valiant attempt of the United States to solve a vicious problem and to give to a distracted world a promise of the spirit in which America is likely to approach the incredible problems which an exhausted world must face for solution at the termination of the present conflict.

PARADOXICALLY enough, the value of Mr. Merrill's volume lies not so much in the story it tells, but in the story it minimizes or ignores. While the title of the book may attract attention, it greatly overemphasizes Japan's place in the opium picture. That country is playing a very unscrupulous part today and has for many years past. But it should be remembered that other nations were plying the opium trade in the East for scores of years, if not generations, before Japan's doors were opened to world trade.

If it was the intention of the author to give an historical and true picture of the opium problem it is difficult to understand why so little space has been given to the part played by his own Government. It was the United States that dragged the centuries-old opium evil from its hiding place in the East and placed it on the international stage for solution, first at the Shanghai commission of 1909 and later at three international conferences at The Hague. Theodore Roosevelt's name is not even mentioned and yet it was because of America's entry into the Philippines and Roosevelt's discovery of the iniquitous opium dens and his bitter denunciation of the Government opium monopoly system we had inherited from Spain, that the question is before the world today. There can be no doubt that President Roosevelt's immediate condemnation of a system that would procure revenue based on the demoralization of peoples under Western protection, was a definite factor in the drawing up of the so-called "Ten-Year Agreement," by which the Indian Government consented to cease her exportation of opium to China. There was also the far-reaching power of the American press.

These are facts that well might have been alluded to—and facts of immense significance that will play their part in the future destiny of Asia. If that great continent is to be rescued from the brutal domination of Japan and any semblance of Western influence in the East is to be restored, it can only be established along the lines of America's conception of what is due Eastern peoples under the temporary protection and tutelage of Western nations—with a view to their ultimate independence. The ruthless order of Japan will pass. The old European order has already gone. But the first note of a new order, and the only order that can endure, was struck by the United States when it freed the Filipino peoples from the menace of a drug that had demoralized and sapped the strength of their Eastern neighbors for generations. It is worth noting that the first step taken by Japan in assuming control of the Philippines was to reestablish the opium dens abolished by America some 40 years before.

It should not be forgotten that without design or desire on its part the United States was projected across the wide Pacific into the Philippine Islands and thus into close contact with the peoples and problems of ancient Asia. To those who believe in predestination it would almost seem that a definite role had been assigned to the United States to play in the yet undecipherable future of Asia. This much we know, save for the appearance of America in the East the opium evil would have continued along its path of destruction unheeded and unassailed.

IN REVIEWING the history of opium, it is strange that Mr. Merrill should not have emphasized the new spirit injected into this age-old problem by the United States. The same note was struck again by America at the Opium Conference at Geneva. Once more the United States demanded fair play for the peoples of Asia. In criticizing the first or preliminary conference dealing with the question of smoking opium, Bishop Brent of the American delegation declared bitterly that "unless something is done, colour will be given to the charge that western nations having eastern possessions are callous to the vital interests of the very people upon whom the welfare of such possessions depends and to the further charge that we of the West have a law of self-protection for ourselves and a law of exploitation for those who ought to be counted our friends when they are not our wards." There is no reference in the book to the strong stand taken by the United States at Geneva. Nor is it stated that the United States withdraw its degeation because of unwillingness of the Conference to approach the eastern angle of the problem or to allow discussion of the American proposal to strike the opium evil at its source and restrict the cultivation of the poppy to its legitimate medicinal need. This is not the picture Mr. Merrill gives of the Geneva Opium Conference.

Nor is there any reference in the book to the very practical proposal made by the American delegation to send a commission of experts to the poppy-producing countries and in cooperation with their Governments to devise ways and means by which poppy cultivation could be restricted to its medicinal need and of gradually replacing the over-production of the drug by legitimate substitutes without unduly disturbing the financial equilibrium of the countries concerned. There is no mention of this constructive suggestion on the part of the United States nor the fact that such a commission actually visited the great poppy-growing country of Persia, and on the termination of its study presented the League of Nations with a most valuable report—which must form the basis of any real attempt to curb the opium menace.

IT WOULD also have been of interest to the reader to learn that the opium-producing countries were the first to express their willingness to cooperate with the United States and that Gandhi added his name to the message sent by the Indian Congress to the conference in Geneva approving the measures proposed by the United States to check the opium evil.

A great deal of material was at the disposal of the author in preparing his story of opium. He has reviewed its history from the start, but has omitted many points most pertinent to the picture. In referring to the activities of the Opium Advisory Committee in Geneva he might well have drawn attention to the views of one of its outstanding members. It was the opinion of Sir John Jordan, one of the assessors and former British Minister to China, repeatedly expressed, that the traffic in opium could not be stopped by restricting manufacture or by pursuing the smuggler. He insisted it could only be stopped at the source, which was the cultivation of the poppy plant. He criticized the committee and later the Geneva conference with being principally concerned with narcotics, and contended that "the question of the control of narcotics in the West is not the opium problem — that whatever the amount of opium produced it will all be consumed." This was also the opinion of the United States, which the Geneva conference barred from discussion.

The book deals at great length with the chaotic conditions that have existed in China for the past score of years. But those who know the fundamental character of the Chinese know that when the shadow of the present conflict lifts, and order and authority are once more restored, that China will prohibit for all times the pernicious poison that has undermined her people. In devoting so much space to China Mr. Merrill might well have alluded to the fact that one of the compelling motives that prompted the United States to take up the cudgels against the opium evil was the desire to free China from the drug so long imposed upon her people.

The long list of Japanese offenses are but too true, beginning with Japan's attempt to weaken the resistance of China by establishing drug factories in conquered Chinese territory and practically feeding the Chinese opium and the still more pernicious heroin. There are as well many pages devoted to the pusuit of the smuggler, and to the intrigues and underhand methods associated with the opium traffic. But none of this points to a solution of the problem. It was the strenuous attempt of the United States to check the evil at its source that would seem to have been of greater value and of more interest to the reader. But to this angle of the story little if any space has been given. And yet it was the spirit in which the United States approached one of her earliest international adventures that was of greatest significance in the long history of opium—and significant in its relation to the acute problems which the United States with the rest of the world must eventually face for solution. Out of the incredible suffering and chaos of the present conflict this new order and new spirit will be born—or our western civilization with its hypocritical preachings of Christianity is doomed to perish.

Checking New Dealism In New York

ANY WAY you figure it, it would appear that New Dealism and the White House influence over the government of New York State will be checked this year if Jim Farley is able to nominate his man, John Bennett, for Governor on the Democratic ticket. Farley is confident that he can do this notwithstanding President Roosevelt's attempts to dictate the nomination of Senator James Mead.

PEGLER

Of course, Bennett is not emphasizing the fact, but it is a fact nevertheless that he is not a New Dealer and is of much the same mind on the New Deal as Farley, who finally got chocked up on the policies and personalities of the Administration. Thus, if Farley nominates Bennett and if Tom Dewey is the Republican nominee, as he probably will be, there will be a reaction against the Socialistic and Communistic influences in the State and, probably, also, a reaction against the arrogance of the bosses of the labor unions.

Friends of Bennett who are in a position to explain his attitude, lead off with assurances that he is not a New Dealer, and one of the most influential Democratic politicians in the State, a man who is fighting hard for Bennett, has said that Bennett's crowd do not give a damn what the so-called American Labor Party decided to do. This group has a presumptuous label, but is not a labor party at all. It is a Social-Democratic Party on the right wing and straight communistic on the left wing. It calls itself the Labor Party in a pretense that it speaks for the workers, as though all workers were either Socialists or Communists.

IT IS largely a foreign group and like all such European radical elements is deviled by ismatic fights within its ranks, for the Socialists and Communists hate each other. Bennett and Farley, of course, are strictly anti-Communist, and Farley is one first-rank political leader in the Democratic Party who is never to be found among those present at any of the Communist rallies on any of the war pretexts which are now being used to draw non-Communist dignitaries to gatherings where they may be photographed smiling under the hammer and sickle.

The socalled American Labor Party, recognizing the fact that Bennett is not a New Dealer and might fairly be called an anti-New Dealer, has threatened to nominate its own candidate if Farley puts him over for the Democratic nomination. This would be a nice help to Dewey and the State would be assured a period of reaction and reform under an able Governor who would delight to tear into the New Deal machine and the crooked unioneers. As prosecutor in New York, Dewey was restricted to one county but his investigations naturally gave him information on many rascals operating under the eyes of negligent or tolerant district attorneys in other counties.

AS A GOOD politician and loyal party man, Farley has kept a still tongue in his head about his break with President Roosevelt, but they did break and, moreover, Farley has remained in politics, refusing to withdraw in deference to the President. He never was very happy in the company of the political queeries with whom he found himself thrown into association during his years in Washington, but his spirits have revived markedly since he got out, and in the present contest with the President he is politely by very firmly standing his ground for Bennett. He never shows the slightest disrespect for the President's office or for Mr. Roosevelt personally, but in this political matter the President has sought a fight and Farley, who didn't seek one, is standing by his man.

So if the rivals in this election are Dewey and Bennett, the European vote, largely concentrated in New York City, may be subtracted from Bennett's total and thus may put Dewey across; but, whoever wins, the new Governor will not be a member of the New Deal machine but a strong man in his own right, with an independent future before him.

There is actually no such thing as a labor vote, for practcially all adult Americans are workers and no group of union politicians can deliver them to anyone. The term "labor" in the political sense does not mean the great mass of American working men and women but a group of union bosses whose total enrollment is not more than 10 million persons, at least half of whom were driven into unions against their will and bitterly resent the loss of their freedom.

U. S. Cuts Bomber City's Size But Ford Still Opposes It

By the Associated Press

John E. Blandford, jr., director of the National Housing Agency, recommended yesterday prompt development of a sharply modified housing program for workers at Henry Ford's Willow Run, Mich., bomber plant.

He testified before a special Senate Defence Investigating Committee seeking to reconcile conflicting statements on the necessity for new houses in the vicinity of the plant.

Estimating that the program had been curtailed so that the cost would be $29,750,000, instead of 108 million dollars, Blanford said "the interests of production at the Willow Run plant and the interests of the country as a whole require that the program move ahead without delay."

George Meader, prosecuting attorney of Washtenaw County, Mich., and Henry R. Riggs, retired civil engineer at the University of Michigan, opposed the housing development, described by Ford spokesman as unnecessary and extravagant.

A revised program of the housing agency calls for 3000 dormitory units at Willow Run instead of 10,000; 2000 single dwelling units at Wayne and Inkster instead of 7100; 1000 light housekeeping units at Willow Run instead of 8000, and a new "bomber city" of 2500 permanent single dwellings in Superior Township instead of 6000.

Meader suggested there was some justification for construction other than the "bomber city" at the plant.

He declared it would be necessary to build from the ground up, including installation of all the usual municipal services, such as water mains, sewage disposal, shopping centers, educational, recreational, religious and hospital buildings.

He suggested there would be a great saving in materials if permanent dwellings were located in nearby areas where facilities already were available.

Blandford asserted that a water main to the site would cost three million dollars and that it would be needed in any event for private development. He said that the War Production Board now placed peak employment at the Willow Run plant at 60,000 contrasted with earlier estimates of 100,000.

The new program, he added, was intended to house 15,750 workers, and stated that a final decision on construction rested with the War Production Board which must determine the availability of materials.

Corporal Pig-tails, adopted "daughter" of an Air Forces squadron at Miami Beach Replacement Training Center this week became a Twentieth-Century parallel to Rudyard Kipling's immortal Wee Willie Winkie.

The little non-com with the blond tresses is Roberta Fyler, 10-year-old daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Fyler, a North Miami nurse, a widow whose husband was a real corporal in '17.

A month ago, soldiers drilling in front of their hotel barracks began to notice a little girl across the street. Seated under a palm tree, she watched from reveille 'til retreat, trying to catch on to the Army's way of doing things. Then, last week Roberta started putting that information to work. She "joined up" and soon became a drill instructor.

"It's uncanny," says Capt. Verne E. Kasson, commander of the little corporal's outfit, the 581st Technical School Squadron, "but she does everything right. She knows all the drill formations and snaps out orders like a veteran 'top-kick.'"

This explains Roberta's rapid promotion from buck private to "Corporal Pig-tails." And she wears the stripes too, on the sleeves of her own specially-tailored khaki uniform. Latest rumor around squadron headquarters has it that Corporal Pig-tails is up for a sergeancy. If she gets it she'll out-rank her big brother, who is a corporal stationed in Panama.

'Highroad to Britain'

'Ghost Pilot' Flies Bombers to Front

By Don Whitehead

An Air Base Somewhere in Newfoundland, July 22 (Wide World).—We called our big bomber the "Flying Dutchman" when we saw the slim, dapper pilot who was to sit at the controls of the 3000-mile flight from Canada to Britain . . . for in his homeland Hans is listed officially as dead. He is only a ghost pilot.

Hans is not his real name. It wouldn't be safe for the family he left in the Netherlands if the Germans knew he still was riding the skyways, piloting bombers to Britain.

There were 12 of us besides the crew of five who clambered up the hatchway into the belly of the bomber to crouch in the bomb bay.

Nine of the passengers were going all the way to Britain. Three of us—a uniformed young Newfoundland woman, Wide World Photographer George Hill of Boston, and myself—were stopping off at the Ferry Command Airdrome "somewhere in Newfoundland," a skyways stop through which the United States, Britain and Canada are pouring planes and air crew personnel to the fighting fronts.

A few hours before a young R. A. F. flight lieutenant had told us how to use the oxygen masks in case the pilot climbed into the thin air over 14,000 feet. They were to be plugged into oxygen vents in the walls of the ship.

Our "ghost pilot" taxied to the end of the long runway beside which dozens of bombers waited for crews to take them across, perhaps today, perhaps tomorrow.

Suddenly Hans awung the ship about. He had clearance orders. The four motors roared. The ship vibrated. Slowly it gathered speed, bumped slightly, lifted smoothly, and began its climb for the 1000-mile flight to Newfoundland.

'WARMING UP' FOR FLIGHT TO BRITAIN—At a Newfoundland airbase, passengers of an American Consolidated Liberator bomber don warm flying suits and boots for the 3000-mile flight across the Atlantic to Britain

Most of the ferry captains taking bombers to Britain are like Hans, a strange breed of men who have flocked into Canada from all parts of the world. There are Canadians, Norwegians, Poles, Belgians and Australians—but the majority of the civilian pilots are Americans.

It didn't take Hans long to get into the clear, cold atmosphere. The plane climbed to 5000 . . . 6000 . . . 80000 . . . and then leveled off at 9600 feet. The motors beat steadily. You felt the surge of power running through the ship.

Ice began forming on the wings and antenna wire. Occasionally it broke loose and peppered against the side of the cabin with a sound like dried beans rattling.

Hans started climbing to get above the level of moisture. The altimeter climbed to 11,000 and we were above the ice. It was cold up there. The outside temperature was 1 degree below zero. Our cabin was as cold as a drafty refrigerator room.

We huddled under blankets, coats and sweaters, shivering. No one had bothered to put on the heavy fleece-lined flying suits en route to Newfoundland because we hadn't expected to fly so high. They would be needed on the second leg of the flight when the plane might climb to 20,000 feet or more. The radio man gave his woolen mittens to the woman passenger.

Inching along the narrow catwalk to the end of the tail, you felt the bumps and the ship's vibrations more sharply. Through small side windows you could see the earth far below between cloud patches. And then we passed the eastern coast of Canada and headed across 400 miles of water, the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Soon the Flying Dutchman crossed the Newfoundland coast and headed over the desolate, glacier-gouged marshlands and rocklands dotted with lakes.

As we neared the airdrome, Hans began dropping the Liberator slowly. The radio operator signaled and gave identification. They take no chances on not being identified because of the antiaircraft guns and machine guns ringing the field.

Dead ahead was a magnificent airdrome carved from the wilderness, aviation's farthest Eastern airport on this side of the Atlantic. There was a gentle bump and the Liberator came to a stop.

It was only a short stop for Hans and the rest of his passengers. They climbed back into the plane, bundled in flying suits. Again the motor roared. Hans waved farewell. The Flying Dutchman roared into the sky and soon was a ghostly shadow on the horizon.

Next stop: England.

A far cry from the sailplane of the sportsman is the nine-place transport glider of the Army Air Forces. War-going gliders of this type will be the spearhead of projected aerial offensives against the enemy. The pilots at their controls will be the key-men when the "Commandos of the Air" go into action. Here's the cockpit (above) of the nine-place Waco training glider showing the instrument board and controls. A member of the experimental glider unit at Wright Field, is making a routine inspection. A view of the glider's nose, with the cockpit hood raised is shown at left. Note the landing skids. The regular gear is dropped after the glider is towed from the ground, and landings are made on the skids

New Transparent Sports Liquid Designed for Those Who Want to Get Their Vitamins the Sunshine Way

By Carolyn Abbott.
Post Beauty Editor

PATTY and her tennis partner are taking no chances with the discomforts of sunburn acquired while on the tennis courts. Above they are shown fortifying their skin with a new transparent sports liquid designed for those who love to get their vitamins and exercise the sunshine way.

Time has gone when men consider it "sissy" to do a little anointing with sun protectives before venturing into the sun for a bit of play. At first the men folk surreptitiously borrowed a dab of sister's or wife's sun oil. Now they come right out and ask, "What is the best skin protector to use?"

On the beaches, tennis courts, you can see the men blatantly applying the new transparent sports liquid. They're particularly keen to find one that isn't too obviously oily so that residue collects.

No longer does one need to look rough and weatherbeaten after hours in the sun on the golf course, tennis court, riding trails or tending victory gardens. Peeling, wind-burning and blistering of the skin has been outmoded by the creation of this cool, transparent, fresh-scented sports liquid which gives scientific protection and helps acquire a smooth golden tan.

Unlike the heavy, sticky sunburn oils of the past, this new liquid is so light and finely-blended that it is scarcely visible on the skin, yet it is iron-clad insurance against the drying, aging effects of over-exposure to strong wind and sun. This liquid also benefits the skin while it protects for it permits the sun rays to filter in and turn the skin an attractive tan without any of the usual discomforts of sun burning.

If you are tending your victory garden, going fishing, following the golf course or cantering on a horse in the hot sun, tuck a bottle of this liquid in your basket, pocket or knap sack. It will soothe hot flushed skin and keep you cool, comfortable and well-groomed.

For information concerning this sports liquid, call National 4200, Extension 259.

Socially Ambitious Mother's Arrogant Interference With Daughter's Long-Range Marriage Plans Causes Latter to Wonder if She Should Live Apart From Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 20 years old. For the past ten months I have been going with a boy (one year my senior), and we are very much in love. He has all the qualities I have always wanted in a husband. He is very considerate, unusually brilliant and ambitious, and has the highest morals. The only problem is my mother's attitude toward him. On two occasions, recently, she has called his home and told him that he must stop coming to see me; that he must not even telephone me.

Having seen that we are seriously in love, she is doing her best to break us up. The only reason she gives is that the boy belongs to a different religious faith. I know that religion is not her prime objection, though. She has always been ambitious for her children to marry chiefly for money and background, rather than for really happy companionship. It is true that the boy has nothing material to offer me now,—but he does give me more than money can buy. I mean true happiness.

Mother made the mistake of putting money and social position before anything else in her marriage, and consequently it ended in divorce. For this reason I cannot understand why she would have me make the same mistake. While I realize that a religious difference may cause serious trouble in marriage, I do not believe it would prove so in our case. We are both broadminded on the subject and often discuss it, in regard to children we hope to have some day.

The boy is studying medicine, so we have several years to wait before marriage. Certainly if two persons love each other for that length of time (and I know we will), nobody should try to come between them. I love my mother very much and now that I am working, I want to help her as much as I can. However, I cannot continue to live under such strain. She wants to dictate to me absolutely about my actions and choice of friends. I have had two years in college and I had hoped to finish, but now I am afraid to give up my job independence, and no doubt be forced to stop seeing this boy.

My question is not whether to give up the boy; but what attitude to take concerning my mother. Should I try living apart from her, at the same time trying to help her financially as much as I can? It is not my wish to live apart from her. But no matter how much I try to reason with her, I find it cannot be done. What should I do? R. B. S.

While the hand-to-hand conflict that wages on the home front is severely trying (largely because it lacks rhyme or reason), you will probably fare better in the long run by standing your ground and coping with it than you would if you tried to duck out from under. The thing to do, I believe, is to issue your declaration of independence on the spot, by serving notice on your mother (1) that, come hell or high water, you mean to marry this boy, provided he still wants you when he is ready to take a wife; (2) that no interfering action she may take can alter your intention, but only progressively destroy your respect and affection for her, and (3) that you have been thinking seriously of leaving home, fully aware of the risks involved, in the event she does not change her hateful attitude.

Better Take Stand On Home Front

DEAR R. B. S.: Considering your age, economic status and judicious temperament, it is my opinion that your mother's ruthless interference in your purely personal affairs—for the sole purpose of serving her own socially ambitious schemes—affords full justification for living apart from her. However, before acting upon that justification, you should weigh well the question of whether you might be leaping from the frying pan into the fire, in trying (on your perhaps modest earnings) to establish yourself elsewhere. It is extremely doubtful that you could give your mother much (if any) financial help, in the event you became fully self-supporting—at prevailing wages and disproportionately high living costs. More likely, you would find it hard sledding just to pay your own way and keep out of debt, while maintaining anything like the standard of living to which you have been accustomed.

There is also the possibility that in breaking home ties (even though justifiably) you would thereafter experience a forlorn sense of loneliness as a result of being definitely estranged from your mother (whom you love deeply despite her intolerable behavior),—and that this heavy-heartedness would have an insidiously spoiling effect upon your relationship with the young man. The psychological effect of "hall bedroom" living, of being cut off from the free give-and-take of family life (however discordant), might prove to be emotionally depressing.

It might impel you unconsciously to place undue or anxious dependence upon the young man's devotion; or cause you to be vaguely fretful in general. Your craving for affectional compensation might cause you to relax discretion, thus taking the fine edge off his homage. Indeed, the situation could conspire in many ways to subtly blight the romance. It might not, of course. But still, it is a possibility to be weighed in advance and guarded against. On the other hand, if you remain at home, with your mother militantly opposed to the boy's courtship, her obstructionist activities are bound to add fuel to the flame of his interest, keeping it at high pitch and in single focus, during the years he must wait before making you his wife.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

War Fashions Include Proteins

Everybody is accustomed to the idea of proteins as something one should eat every day. This year we are going to wear proteins as well. One of the most outstanding of the war substitute fibers is aralac, the casein fiber made from milk.

This pretty protein is designed to make a little wool go a long way, and is often combined with rayon as well as wool to create all kinds of miracle fabrics from slick, tailored gabardines to dressy black bengalines. Most of the protein-content fabrics contain from 15 per cent to 30 per cent of the new fibers, and some as much as 40 per cent. This means that the dry cleaning methods formerly used on all-wools must be revised to meet the demands of new and special blends.

All over the country leading dry cleanares are already studying and creating new techniques to meet the war fashions soon to pass over their counters. As soon as your wardrobe boasts even one of the victory fabrics, be sure that you trust it only to a quality dry cleaner who keeps abreast of new textile developments.

What Do You Actually Know About Vitamins? Have a Quiz

By Ida Jean Kain

WHEN those surveys come out with the statement that "thousands of women were asked . . . ," don't you wonder what women? Do they ever ask you? They never ask me. But maybe we don't happen to be home when they ring our doorbells.

At any rate, 3000 housewives were questioned recently in a survey conducted by the consumer service departments of a national food corporation to find out how nutrition is "taking." From their answers, it is "taking" very slowly. I am just optimistic enough to think you might do right well on this subject. But put yourself in the shoes of a quizee and see.

Have you ever heard of vitamin A? What does it do? And what colors in vegetables indicate it? Almost all questioned in the survey had heard of vitamin A, but less than one-third knew the other answers. Of course, you know them! Vitamin A is the one that builds resistance to infection and protects against colds. It is necessary to the health of skin, teeth and hair, and is extremely important to the eyes. Green and yellow are its colors in vegetables and the deeper the hue the better. Other rich sources are dairy products, liver and codliver oil.

Morale Vitamin

Almost all the women had heard of vitamin B1, but they didn't know what it does or how to get it. If you are up on your nutrition, you recognize this as the morale vitamin, highly important to healthy nerves. It promotes energy and regulates the appetite. You get it in whole grain and enriched breads and cereals and in glandular meats. Specialty sources are yeast, wheat germ and thiamin concentrates.

As for vitamin C, 87 per cent had heard of it, but 71 per cent could not say what it does for you. However, that is not so bad, because, in spite of not knowing why, they are using far more citrus fruits and juices and tomato juice than ever before. Vitamin C helps you to have that exuberently healthy "lick the world" feeling. It is necessary to the health of teeth and gums and staves off rheumatism.

Sunshine Vitamin

Vitamin D is supposedly the best known of all vitamins. But 75 per cent said they had never heard of it! That, again, is not as bad as it sounds, for there has been a tremendous increase in the use of codliver oil over the past 20 years. As you know, this is the vitamin that helps prevent rickets. It is called the sunshine vitamin. You need more codliver oil in winter.

Least known was riboflavin, also called vitamin G and vitamin B2. Riboflavin ought to be easy to remember, because it figures in the extension of the prime of life, good eyesight and health of skin and hair. Sources are meat organs, milk and green and leafy vegetables.

Guess what they think nicotine acid is? Tobacco! Well, it's a vitamin. To avoid this confusion, it has been renamed niacin. This is the pellegra-preventive and you get it from liver, kidneys, muscle meats, fish, milk, evaporated milk, green leafy vegetables and yeast. A well-balanced diet contains adequate amounts.

How well did you do? Maybe you're glad you were not home for this survey!

"Spotters" . . . In The Capital Spotlight

AWVS Course Trains For Home-Line Defense

By Elizabeth Henney

A small, bare, raftered room high under the eaves of an old stable . . . an attentive group of listeners (all sizes, shades, shapes and ages included) seated on hard folding chairs, taking notes from time to time . . . a small, chic woman in black at one end of the room, drawing rapidly on a blackboard and saying in clear, carrying tones as she draws—"This is the fuselage, these are the wings——." There you have a picture of Mrs. Blanche Noyes, C. A. A. Airmark Specialist, and her class of aircraft spotters.

"Remember," said Mrs. Noyes, who began her series of lectures on Monday at the AWVS headquarters, 'that you are taking on one of the most unglamourous, uncomfortable, uninspiring, but most important jobs in the entire war effort. You are the first line of defense on the home front." Particularly pleasing to Mrs. Noyes has been the fact that none of the group has dropped out, and that all seem conscientiously doing their best for victory.

From all over the countryside have come the members of that class; from grayhaired, grandmotherly Mrs. John Nuzum of Laurel, Md., who has been on duty as a spotter every since Pearl Harbor and who climbs 70 steps to her post—to Mrs. Frank E. Beatty and her 14-year-old son, Hugh E. Beatty, who do a mother-and-son combination shift at "The Tower" observation post in Arlington, Va. Mrs. Beatty's husband, by the way, a captain in the Navy, is aide to Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox.

But back to the instructor, whose lecture was momentarily disrupted by a news photographer. Stalking across the room toward a uniformed woman, he said, "Mrs. Noyes, I presume." He was corrected and his attention directed toward the figure at the blackboard. "Blank!" muttered the photographer. "She doesn't look like a flier!"

And he was right. Blanche Noyes is not what one would picture as the first woman ever to win the Bendix cross-country air race, which she did in 1936.

As a matter of fact, practically "her man" wanted to go, and every time she finishes a lecture, members of the audience (who have listened to a well-delivered talk, given by a perfectly poised woman) step up to the platform to say "You've missed your calling, you really should have been an actress." To which she just smiles and thanks them.

Few of them, of course, remember she was exactly that. As Blanche Wilcox she was leading lady of "White Cargo" on Broadway, when she met her husband. She has been a featured star for United Artists in Hollywood, and has had for her leading men such luminaries as George Brent, Roger Pryor and Jerome Cowan.

And how did she get into aviation? Well, in 1929, her husband (Dewey L. Noyes, an air-mail pilot to whom she was married in 1928) decided that she should learn to fly. He felt that the best way to further the cause of aviation, was to show that women could fly as well as men. So she learned, and, since her husband was interested in racing and hadn't time to spare from his job as pilot and tester for the Beechcraft Corporation, she became the racer of the family.

She insists it was her husband's good teaching which instilled such confidence in her that she has no fear of the air. She is not, apparently, aware that her steady nerves betray the type of courage that sent the pioneer woman into the wilderness unafraid because where he went, she followed.

Nor will Blanche Noyes offer the information that the year after her husband was killed (testing a plane) she took up the same type of plane to win with it the Bendix race; to show (as he would have wished), that it was not the type of plane that was at fault.

This Changing Whirl

by Hope Ridings Miller

"I'M HERE FOR A FEW DAYS, because the haying season is about over . . . and it's not quite time to start the plowing."

Above the buzz of voices and the general clatter in that beehive of activity—the canteen of the American Women's Voluntary Services—I wasn't quite sure I heard Mrs. Robert P. Patterson correctly . . . but certainly that's what I thought she said.

It was. No pink-tea farmerette is the wife of the Undersecretary of War. She pitches into the haying, the plowing and the general chores around her summer home at Stony Point, N. Y., like any other full-fledged farmhand, and knows plenty about planting, harvesting and crop rotation.

While her busy husband puts in time, and overtime, at his big desk down at the War Department, she's seeing that the farm in New York is run on a grade A business-as-usual basis.

"In the haying season, it's a 6 a. m. to 10 p. m. job," she said. "But I love it."

Yes, the current shortage of man power was partially responsible for the fact farming had filled most of her time in recent weeks. "Hands" are harder to get this year than formerly, for very obvious reasons. Running a farm, she feels, is one way she can make every minute count . . . "and besides," she added, twinkling, "it's good for my muscles."

So, within a few days, streamlined Mrs. Patterson, who doesn't have to depend on diets to keep that girlish figure, will be headed back to that New York farm once more. "It's about time to start the plowing. . . ."

Everybody "On Borrowed Time" . . .

At the same canteen table with Mrs. Patterson yesterday were several women who seemed to be there on borrowd time. All are involved in some kind of voluntary war service, and each one had to dash away as soon as she had finished her luncheon. Mrs. Ralph A. Bard, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, said one of her chief current interests (although she has many) is the activity of that young service-set contingent, "the Jangos," of which she is a sponsor.

Mrs. William A. Burden, also among those present yesterday, said she was working on a Red Cross hospital committee; while Mrs. Leonard Firestone is pinch hitting for her sister-in-law, Mrs. Roger Firestone, in the Women's Auxiliary Air Youth program.

That AWVS canteen, incidentally, is worth a story all its own . . . and I'll get to that another time. But anybody who thinks Washington women are dilly-dallying around in times like these would do well to drop by 2170 Florida Avenue just about any hour any day. The canteen is only one of many activities under way there.

Bullitt's New Home Ready; Waiting . . .

When Bill Bullitt gets back from London, his new Washington home will be completely furnished with his own effects, all arranged and waiting for him. For the past few days, van after van from Philadelphia have been pulling up to the door of 2447 Kalorama Road, the house he purchased recently. So many have come, in fact, that neighbors are beginning to wonder how any house, even a large one, can accommodate all the household possessions Mr. Bullitt seems to have. For the past year the home has been occupied by Lieut. and Mrs. George Strawbridge, who moved out a few weeks ago. Lieutenant Strawbridge (of the Strawbridge Clothiers family) is in remount division of the Army. His wife, the former Peggy Dorrance (Campbell's Soup clan), and their children are now in Bar Harbor, Me., for a few weeks.

PICKED UP IN PASSING: A Texas member of Congress, who, oddly enough, prefers to be off the record about it, reports that from all he can gather from back home no anecdote stemming from the current political campaign is half as good as the one that has been floating around the wide-open spaces since April. Seems, at that time, the British Ambassador, Lord Halifax, stopped at the Consolidated Aircraft plant in Fort Worth to address the workers. Mayor McCrary, who introduced him, seemed a bit confused as to just how he should refer to the titled envoy; but he managed to get through beautifully until the closing remark. Then he announced, "When the speech is over, if anyone wants to ask questions, the Lord will provide the answers."

And then there's the story one of Washington's wittiest women is telling around town. Says she, "When anybody asks me if I have any sons in the Army, I'm forced to say I haven't . . . but I always add, 'I've got a pair of binoculars in the Navy!' "

Dr. Lopez To Return Home Soon

Down from New York for a few days' stay at the Mayflower, Mrs. Thomas J. Watson brings the latest news from the President-elect of Colombia, Dr. Alfonso Lopez. He will be returning to his homeland at the end of the week.

She should know for she and her husband, who is here on business, entertained at a luncheon in honor of the soon-to-be-inaugurated South American leader at the River Club in New York on Tuesday.

Among the members of Dr. Lopez's official party at the luncheon were Dr. Gabriel Turbay, Colombian Ambassador; Dr. Alfonso Araujo, former Colombian minister of war and public works; Dr. Jose Camacho-Lorenzana, Second Secretary of the Embassy; Dr. Jorge Soto del Corral, former minister of foreign affairs and treasury; Dr. Alfredo Lozano-Agudelo, consul general in New York, and Eduardo Gamba, vice consul; Dr. Alberto Jaramillo-Sanchez, former minister of economics, and Dr. Palme Jaramillo-Arango, Colombian Minister in London.

Norman Armour Arrives Here

The United States Ambassador to the Argentine, Norman Armour, has arrived in town and is stopping at the Mayflower.

Mr. Armour, who has been at Hot Springs, Va., for a few days, is on leave of absence from his diplomatic duties. Before being sent to the Argentine he was Minister to Haiti.

Presenting: Former Teacher, Now Writing Book—But Not About Washington

Although she has turned down career offers that most women would consider tops, Mrs. Andrew Carey will admit that when confronted by a modern oven—she is somewhat befuddled.

At present Mrs. Carey and her husband—he is with the Army and Navy Munitions Board—are living in a home on Forty-third Street which they leased from Admiral and Mrs. Ernest King this spring. Mr. Carey was vice president of the Carey Machinery Co. and came to Washington to take over his new job some months ago.

Feminine to her very fingertips, with fair hair, gray eyes and a New Yorker's flair for dress, one would hardly suspect Mrs. Carey of ten years of professorship. As Jane Perry Clark (and even after she became Mrs. Carey this winter) she taught constitutional and administrative law at Barnard College, an adjunct of Columbia. "And it was loads of fun," she said. As a matter of fact, she found it so much fun, that she is hoping to manage some sort of commuter's schedule between here and New York so that she may go back to Barnard for teaching this fall. However, if this proves to be an impossible arrangement, Mrs. Carey is bound and determined to go to work in one capacity or another—and will probably take a war job here.

Besides her job at Barnard College, Mrs. Carey has many other teaching jobs to her credit. A graduate of Vassar, she taught social legislation at Mount Holyoke and English for several years at Bryn Mawr.

"Oh—I'm writing a book, too," this as an afterthought. Just to assure herself of plenty to do, Mrs. Carey has decided to add "author" to her list of accomplishments. The book concerns the relation of government to the individual and despite the rather frightening subject will undoubtedly be a lively and well written book—with plenty of reader appeal.

Born in Washington, Mrs. Carey is the daughter of Judge and Mrs. John C. Clark of New York, and has spent much time in the latter city. Until her marriage this winter, Mrs. Carey shied away from Washington. Now she admits that—given time—she may really get to like the World Capital as well as New York.

Dr., Mrs. Vargas Expected Here Soon

Planning to return to Washington in the near future are Dr. and Mrs. Luthero Vargas, son and daughter-in-law of the President of Brazil. They have been in this country for the past six months and have been visiting hospitals and medical research institutions.

Dr. and Mrs. Vargas were feted at a dinner party on Tuesday night when Miss Jane Watson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Watson, was hostess in the Viennese Room of the St. Regis. Guests included Ensign Stanley Reed, jr., son of Associate Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed; Lieut. and Mrs. I. Hayne Houston, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hamilton Coulter, Miss Anne Finch, Miss Nancy Watson, Miss Gloria Boucas, Lieut. Arnold Kustner, of the British Royal Navy; Joseph Moran and Gordon Scott, all of New York City.

'Country Life Like That Years Ago'—Mrs. Stettinius

People living in the country these days are living as people were 30 or 40 years ago, that, at least, is the opinion of Mrs. Edward R. Stettinius, jr., whose husband recently flew to England to study the British machinery for handling lease-lend supplies as well as that for the growing A. E. F. in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Stettinius, who is busily engaged at her place in Orange, Va., Horseshoe Farm, does not know when to expect her husband back. "Haven't any idea," she said.

For a number of years Mrs. Stettinius, who hails from Virginia, has spent her summers at Horseshoe Farm—"but never quite so completely." Although she keeps an apartment at the Shoreham, due to gas rationing she very rarely comes to Washington. "As a matter of fact I can't even get to Charlottesville," she laughed. Victory gardening is hardly the word to use in regard to the Stettinius place for they run a real farm.

"Country life is as it was years ago," said Mrs. Stettinius. "But I like it this way."

Mrs. Wilson to Make History At Saratoga

For the first time in history a former President's wife will be among those selling thoroughbred yearlings at the famed Saratoga Sales, when Mrs. Woodrow Wilson will be on hand at the Spa to put on the auction block a bay filly, Port Weather.

With Mrs. Daniel C. Sands of Middleburg and Mrs. Will Clayton, Mrs. Wilson will arrive in Saratoga on Wednesday evening, August 12, to see her filly sold. She will ship her yearling to New York along with a consignment of William H. Lipscomb's of Leesburg. He plans to sell on the same evening.

Mrs. Sands bred the filly now owned by Mrs. Wilson and sold it to the wife of the late President. Grand-dam of the horse, Weather Love, was bought by Mrs. Sands from the sale of the late Edward B. McLean at his estate, Belmont, near Leesburg.

'Elmer Davis' Of Venezuela Here for Visit

The "Elmer Davis" of Venezuela, Mariano Picon Salas has arrived here on his swing around the country and yesterday spent most of his time visiting the Pan American Union and the State Department.

Tall and dignified in appearance, Senator Salas has the ticklish job of director of information in Caracas. His pet project, a bi-lingual magazine, called Venezuela and written in both English and Spanish, has recently made its appearance, much to the delight of Senor Salas.

While touring this country Senor Salas plans to do a series of newspaper articles that will appear in about six Latin-American capitals. The subject will be "The U. S. at War." This is his third visit to the United States and he will leave Washington early next week for Boston, Chicago and Wisconsin. While in Wisconsin he will greet his cousin, Prof. Elesio, Vivas, who teaches philosophy at the University of Wisconsin. He plans to visit New Mexico where he is particularly interested in studying the education of the American Indian.

He was formerly director of the National Archives of Caracas and is known throughout the other American republics as an editor and critic. He is the author of the outstanding contemporary work on Venezuelan literary criticism, "The Formation and Development of Venezuelan Literature." He was educated at the University of Chile and was for many years professor of the history of art and general literature there. He also held the position of superintendent of education in Venezuela and was in charge of a diplomatic mission to Czecho-Slovakia.

Richard Smiths Will Visit Mrs. Knox

Washington friends of Richard Austin Smith, who enjoyed his first book, "The Sun Dial," will have a chance to greet him this weekend when he comes to Washington.

With Mrs. Smith, the former "Brownie" Knox, he will be the guest of her mother, Mrs. McCook Knox, at her Georgetown home. The Smiths are planning to come down from New York City, where they are making their home, on Friday. On Saturday afternoon Mrs. Knox will gather in a few of their friends for cocktails.

On Sunday the young author will appear on the radio at 1:30 o'clock. "The Sun Dial," which is his first novel, continues to be well received. It was a prize winner in a national contest run by the company that published it. Three hundred and fifty copies were recently purchased by the Navy.

Southerners Need No Hints On Doing Bit, Says One

She's New Adviser For Treasury's Saving Staff

By Patricia Grady

Harris & Ewing
Mrs. Joseph F. Robinson

"Down South, it's considered a disgrace to be drafted."

Mrs. Joseph F. Robinson spoke with true Mississippi pride of her section of the country where enlisting in the armed forces has been the order of the day since December 7. The newly appointed Southern regional advisor of the Women's Division of the Treasury Department's War Savings Staff has an explanation for why the South, as a region, has reacted so energetically to our participation in the war.

"Their roots are so deep," explained Mrs. Robinson, "that they know what they have at stake. Most Southern families have lived in the same community for many generations. Their sense of belonging to a way of life is terribly important to them and they can't visualize living under any other form of government. So, naturally, they want to do as much as they can."

Here for Regional Meeting

With a long history of humanitarian activities behind her—she serves on the local boards of the Red Cross, Y. W. C. A., Community Chest, Council of Social Agencies, U. S. O., and O. C. D.—Mrs. Robinson is for the first time entering into a national setup. Here for a two-day conference of the regional advisors of the Women's Division of the War Savings Staff, she has been sitting in conferences with chairman, Miss Harriet Elliot, and Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo from the West, Mrs. Helen Gans from the East, and Mrs. Dorothy Atkinson from the Middle West.

Sales of war bonds are picking up and the aim of this women's committee, working with a similar men's committee, is to keep up the quota of war bond sales on a voluntary basis, so that compulsory buying will not be necessary. "We want to do it in the traditional American way," says Mrs. Robinson.

"I came to the conference to listen and learn," states the Southern regional advisor. But on the basis of what she has accomplished in the past—every drive she has headed, and there have been many, has more than passed the quota—many women's organizers could take a leaf or two from her business-like notebook.

Women Anxious To Help

"Judging from the women I have worked with in the South," she declares, "the women of this country are terribly anxious to do any kind of work that will help the war effort. Many women don't know how or where they can be of help, but once a way is pointed out to them they are tireless workers."

Mrs. Robinson, who lives with her husband in Jackson, Miss., entrained for her home last night to take up the job of showing a lot of these women just how they can be of help. Until her new appointment was announced at the conference, she had been in charge of the women's war bond sale organizations in Hinds and Jackson counties in Mississipi.

Sen., Mrs. Johnson Have Guest From West

Here for a look at the Eastern States during her vacation from college is Miss Suzanne Harl, of Denver, Colo., who is the guest of Senator and Mrs. Edwin C. Johnson of Colorado.

Miss Harl, who has been here several days after spending a few weeks in Philadelphia, will leave today to return to the West. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maple Harl, she will start her sophomore year at the University of Colorado in the fall.

Yesterday Miss Louise McNutt, daughter of the Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, gathered in a few friends to meet her at luncheon at La Salle du Bois.

Mrs. S. A. Kimberly Vacationing in Virginia

Forsaking Washington for the cool of the Virginia mountains at Bluemont recently was Mrs. Samuel A. Kimberly, niece of the late Gen. and Mrs. John A. Logan of this city. She will spend several weeks with Miss Berta Cunningham at her home there overlooking Snickers Gap.

Mrs. Kimberly attended the school of politics at the University of Virginia early this month in Charlottesville where she was accompanied by her cousin, Mrs. Carson, widow of Col. Lawrence Carson, U. S. Army.

Four Generations At One Party

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Kiefer of Takoma Park, Md., gave a supper party last night at their home in honor of the latter's grandmother, Mrs. Sarah Anne Ferry of Washington.

The fete was in celebration of her eighty-eighth birthday. Four generations of the family attended.

Mrs. Valentine Hopes to Collect Fund In Latin America for U. S. Destroyer

IF HANDSOME, Venezuelan-born Maria Jose Valentine gets her way, soon a mighty destroyer built with funds collected in the 21 Latin-American Republics will be added to the United States Navy.

While the naming of the proposed destroyer will be left to the United States Government, Mrs. Valentine, originator of the idea, suggests that it be called the Franklin Delano Roosevelt in honor of the President. "That name is preferred," she said, "because Mr. Roosevelt is cherished throughout the Americas as the symbol of pure hemispheric democracy and unity and Mrs. Roosevelt as the symbol of unselfish feminine devotion to the same cause."

Mrs. Maria Jose Valentine

How will the money for the destroyer be collected? Well, Mrs. Valentine already has mapped out a plan for that, too.

She would have a women's delegation tour the Latin-American countries, spending one week in each country. The visit to each country would end with popular dances by public subscriptions with typical United States food, music, dances, customs and other entertainment featured.

Composing the delegation would be seven women, including both North and Latin Americans familiar with the United States. Each should be a specialist in one of the following fields: Defense, education, nutrition, political economics, culture and art, commerce, industry, finance or inter-American relations.

A tour of the various countries would be prearranged with the aid of United States diplomatic representatives and the Latin-American governments. One day would be devoted to each of the seven branches of practical work listed in the above paragraph. Not only would the ambitious program be carried to the Presidents of the Republics, their cabinets and officials but also straight to the masses.

Mrs. Valentine admits that her idea so far hasn't found substantial backing to make it work. But nothing daunted, she is working approximately 18 hours a day to see it through. In fact, no sooner had Mrs. Valentine moved to Washington about two months ago than she started an all-out effort to further and to cement the good-neighbor policy. However, since she knows both sides of the picture—she's Latin by birth, education and training but married to a New Yorker—her attitudes are realistic, not just visionary.

For example—she wants to enlist the Latin-American women in practical work covering defense, nutrition, politics. "They should get into action," she averred. "One way is to raise money for the destroyer that can be used against the Axis powers."

In order that the women of Latin America may have a clear idea and a definite program on which to start work to aid the Allies, Mrs. Valentine suggests that the seven-women delegation help to organize defense along the lines of the American Women's Voluntary Services. Nutrition—balanced diets, their production and preparation, hygiene as practiced in the United States but adapted to local conditions, should be stressed.

Before coming to Washington to live, Mrs. Valentine worked diligently in the United Women of the Americas in New York City. Last spring she designed a pin symbolizing hemispheric solidarity. This she presented to Mrs. Roosevelt a few months ago.

Talk to Mrs. Valentine five minutes; you'll see the crusading fever in her eyes. She's out to make the 21 Latin-American Republics and the United States true friends.

Clark Offers Bill to Restore Tax Exempt Status to Institutes

Senator Clark (Democrat) of Idaho yesterday introduced further legislation aimed at restoring the tax exempt status of numerous local religious, educational and charitable institutions, recently replaced on the tax roles by the Commissioners.

Clark introduced the bill at the request of Senate District Committee Chairman McCarran, who is still conducting a series of silver hearings in the West.

The measure is similar to one brought into the House last week by Representative Hunter (Democrat) of Ohio but replaces Hunter's broad rewritten exemption clause with a specific list of real property to be exempted.

Exempted, provided they are not operated in any way for private gain, are art galleries, libraries, hospitals, schools and colleges, cemeteries, churches and parsonages, and buildings used for "purposes of public charity" belonging to and operated by nonprofit institutions.

Property belonging to the Federal Government, the District and foreign legations is also excused from liability.

"Under construction by the District officials of certain provisions of existing law," Clark told the Senate in presenting the bill, "it has become necessary to return to the tax rolls certain benevolent and charitable institutions in the District. Some of these institutions, in the opinion of many, are performing such public charitable services as to warrant their exemption from taxation, and it is felt that the bill which I am now introducing will provide the vehicle to bring about a correction of existing inequalities. In some instances special legislation will probably be necessary to care for certain meritorious cases not provided for in this bill."

The bill also authorizes the Commissioners to refund taxes paid on property exempted by the legislation, where the levy was paid on the basis of an assessment made after January, 1941.

Evangelist Calls On 500 Listeners To Eschew Sin

Evangelist Walter "Happy Mac" MacDonald, once master of ceremonies with a top-flight name band, last night packed 'em in at a tent meeting at Thirteenth and K Streets Southeast.

"Since you are not married to this thing called sin, why not break away away from it?" he implored a crowd of more than 500 worshipers from neighborhood churches.

Just before several people walked the sawdust trail, "Happy Mac" asked the throng if the hour was getting too late for them. "No!" they chorused. "Well, you asked for it," shot back "Mac." "Breakfast is at 7."

"Mac," who claims to have been converted 17 years ago in the Pacific Garden Mission in Chicago, where William "Billy" Sunday was converted, is speaking daily through Sunday at 7:45 p. m., under the auspices of the Laymen's Evangelistic Association. He will tell his life story Saturday night.

Innertube Problem Is Solved—Motorist Just Does Without

By the Associated Press

Tulsa, Okla., July 22.—One tire on J. B. McGay's automobile is spinning along today as usual—but there's no innertube in it.

McGay, partner in a manufacturing concern now in defense work, hit upon the idea of a tubeless tire after recent punctures tore up two tubes.

"The idea could save a lot of rubber," he said. "I don't say that it's better than having an innertube in the tire, but it is better than not being able to use a tire at all."

He believes his idea will work on any drop center rim and any fairly good tire.

He reasoned that the tremendous pressure between the tire bead and the rim should make a perfect air seal. That left the hole in the rim from which the innertube valve stem normally protruded.

Into that hole, he sealed an old type valve stem, costing 20 cents, with a rubber washer and a lock nut. The tire, without tube, was mounted on the rim, with rubber cement used as a precautionary sealer. It was inflated and didn't leak. He mounted it on his car and has driven as fast as 50 miles an hour to test it.

McGay has four simple rules to be followed in trying out his tubeless casing:

Be sure the rim edge is true and clean and the bead of the tire is not gashed.

Paint the inside bead of the rim with rubber cement and mount the casing as usual, but press one side of casing against the rim, leaving the other side loose and hanging in the center well.

Apply air rapidly, pounding on the casing if necessary to get the air to force the loose side of the casing into place against the rim.

Alexandria Due to Try 8 Today As Violators of Blackout

Eight persons will face trial in Alexandria Police Court today at 10 a. m. on charges of violating the city's blackout ordinance.

Warrants were issued by Lieut. Russell A. Hawes, acting chief of the police department, on complaints filed by air raid wardens, auxiliary police and regular officers.

While all eight defendants are slated to appear before Judge James R. Duncan, the names of only three of the alleged violators were available last night. The others were being withheld by police pending an investigation to determine who should accept responsibility for violations reported in a number of business establishments.

Defendants listed by police were Sam Rubin and Louis Rosen, charged jointly with a violation reported at a meat market at 301 North Patrick Street; M. R. Greenland, said to be business agent for an office building at 101 South Washington Street, where hall lights were illuminated during the blackout, and Frank Parker, proprietor of a grocery store at 713 King Street.

Penalties provided for violation of the city's emergency blackout measure include fines ranging up to $300, a maximum jail sentence of 90 days, or both.

Defense Area Rent Office Names Staff

Personnel of the staff of the Montgomery-Prince Georges County defense rental area office at 216 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md., was announced yesterday by James W. Woogerd, area rent director.

Positions of attorney and an additional rental inspector have not yet been filled.

The rental examiners are A. D. Kiefer, 805 Takoma Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., and John M. Bolic, 1614 Lamont Street Northwest. F. Ralph Clements, 6108 Twenty-ninth Street Northwest, is a rental inspector. Other members of the staff are Ann Cherkassky, 509 Allison Street Northwest, secretary, and William Adams, typist, Washington.

Five college graduates, most of whom are teachers, have temporary positions in charge of registration of landlords in the five districts. They are Miss Frances Spiva, for Rockville; Mrs. Edward P. Horn, for Silver Spring; Mrs. Alice Cook, for Capitol Heights; Miss Pauline Phillips, for Hyattsville, and Miss Elizabeth Hamm, for Bethesda.

Woogerd appealed yesterday to landlords "not to wait until the last minute deadline" August 15 when all registeration is required by law to be completed.

Register and Vote Citizens Urged

Residents of Montgomery County who are eligible to vote in the general elections this fall were urged to register immediately by Allen H. Gardner, president of the County charter committee.

"The election this year," Gardner said, may well prove to be the most important to the county in recent years. It is the purpose of the Montgomery County Charter Committee to see that the voters have a chance to vote for the election of a non-partisan charter board to draft for future submission to the vote of the people such changes in the county government as will make for efficiency, economy, and a greater measure of home rule in local legislative matters."

Supplemental boards of registry will sit Tuesday through Friday at the County Service Building in Bethesda, at the Chevy Chase Firehouse August 3 and 4, and at the Westbrook School August 5. Prospective voters may register at the Rockville Courthouse until October 6.

Telephone Wife

Larsine Day, recently married, and whose husband is on duty at an air station in Arizona, was asked yesterday how she liked married life.

"Well," she answered, "it's married life through the courtesy of the Bell Telephone Co."

The Federal Diary

(Editor's Note: A War Department employe today substitutes for Jerry Kluttz, who's vacationing. He prefers to remain anonymous.)

The writer has recently returned from the British Isles, where the people have heard considerable of the machinations of sundry United States Government employes in their search for food, clothing and shelter in a wartime National Capital.

It is a fact that one could say the antics of the Federal employe give the people, and in particular the "civil servants" of England, an impression that the whole Nation is propelled by this group of hair-brained bureaucrats, whom the average Englishman sees in his paper either frying eggs on Pennsylvania Avenue or wading in the chill of Rock Creek. However, isn't it true—even though bad publicity on America exaggerates—that the Federal employe does perform a propelling function in the national war effort? And, is it not also true that the behavior of the Government worker proves the contention that people in responsible positions here do not yet know the meaning of total war?

It's an Employe's Fight

Let one who has seen the war at first hand remind those who haven't that this is as much a Government employe's fight as a soldier's. Every time a twelve-sixty typist goes out to chat with a messenger, drink a coke, or otherwise dawdle away time, she is in effect walking off the battlefield—and how proud she is of that soldier whom she could never imagine running away! She expects him to go on and on—and yet . . . But just a moment, she's transferring soon at an increase . . . pirating, who knows what that means?

Yesterday, on the Mount Pleasant line, sitting in front of two secretaries: "You know the secret file . . . the code index was Newfoundland. . . . Captain—was so difficult. . . ." With some knowledge I had picked up here and there I had a pretty good idea of what they were talking about . . . Treason?

The other night at an office party, the blonde file clerk gloated: "I know all the war secrets . . . I keep them locked in a special box . . . I can tell you when our ships will sail, the strength of the Army, and the very latest production figures. . . . I'm on the inside of everything. . . ." She was egging her audience on to ask her questions so she'd have an excuse to tell them more.

A friend of mine told me why he's not aware that there's a war on. He said, "Got two extra gallons yesterday, and got away with it before they asked me for the coupons . . . was offered an X card for $10."

We have an office for everything else—we could do with at least a branch whose job it would be to tell Jane Jitters why she's on the battlefield. These are things you do not learn, necessarily, by seeing the war in pictures or at first hand. You do not always understand it through vague statistics.

I have been asked and ask myself often why it is that the Washington worker is such an egocentric person about his appearance, living quarters, and his recreation, and yet does not appreciate his job in the war. By and large, the Government employe today is not at all in the war—even those folks that work all that overtime.

What's working on Sundays to guys who are working all the time?

Gripe if you like, but all the sooner you will weep instead. Pirate if you will, but the more certain you will be taught a thing or two on what pirates are really like. Tell all you want, but the better the chance someone will be telling you—and it won't be the section supervisor.

Came to Do a Job

Living in Washington may not be so hot today—socially. But who came here for pleasure? About half the people? Well, I'm talking to the other half. There are some people who came here to do a job, and had more perspective about the war before they arrived in town. The funny thing is they are doing a job but they don't know it. The sad thing is they could do it much better if they did know it.

To the lowly clerk there is little difference between working in a defense and nondefense agency. His jobs are the same to him. He does not hesitate a minute in differentiating between Auchinleck and Rommel, though one—not the one he would like—sometimes gets the results. But how can he do anything about that? He wonders today, requisitions the forms tomorrow that order the planes that eventually arrive on the battlefront. Yet he wonders today where he stands in the war.

Show Windows Broken in Eight High's Stores

Lustine complained that windows in the following stores were damaged: 2117 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast; 1016 North Capitol Street; 3417 Eighteenth Street Northeast; 1841 First Street Northwest; 1331 B Street Northeast; 1374 H Street Northeast, 1326 Half Street Southeast, and 1000 Fourth Street Northeast.

Following the complaint, Inspector Harvey G. Callahan, assistant Superintendent of Police, issued an order to precinct commanders to investigate the damage done, and guard all stores against further depredations.

Camp Shelby, Miss.—Sergt. Roy More, 53, boasted his pate was "so hard even lightning couldn't hurt me"—and he proved it. During an electric storm he was knocked unconscious by lightning and a red mark the size of a half dollar was left on his head. "Who hit me with that two-by-four?" he inquired when he regained consciousness. But he was discharged the next day.

Trains May Be Stopped In Blackouts

Landis Seeks Full U. S. Cooperation to Erase Lights Upon Highway, Water Front

Even railroad trains may not be able to run in the District during the next blackout, if requests of National OCD Director James M. Landis for full governmental cooperation are granted, a civilian defense spokesman said last night.

Following up his complaints that the Union Station yards, the Mount Vernon Highway and the waterfront navigation lights formed perfect orientation points from the air during a blackout, Landis was reported to be asking for "full cooperation from all Government departments."

Specifically, this was meant to apply to the Coast Guard, which controls the river, and the Interstate Commerce Commission, which would have to give the authority for the revision of train schedules. Obviously, it was pointed out, the train yards could not be blacked out if the usual quota of trains were pulling in and out of the station. The only thing to do, Defense Executive Lemuel Bolles said, is to stop railroad traffic entirely during the blackout.

Just Like an Air Raid

Since this would affect persons not only in the District but also passengers coming to or from Chicago, New York or Atlanta, the ICC would have to give clearance to such blackout orders.

"After all the trains can't run during an actual air raid," Bolles said. "They ought to get the same training during the practice tests as any other thing."

To stop the leakages of light from stores, which were the most highly criticized failures of the Monday night blackout, Defense Coordinator John Russell Young instructed Police Chief Edward J. Kelly to order absolute enforcement of the blackout order of March 20, which provided that stores may not leave lights on after dark unless "adequate arrangements" have been made.

Some confusion resulted yesterday from a divergence of opinions of what exactly was meant by "adequate arrangements." Storekeepers were required to file notice of such arrangements with the commanders of their respective precinct stations. Inspector Harvey J. Callahan said last night that there had been excellent compliance with that order reported from all precincts.

Shop Owner Fined $25

Some storekeepers, however, believed that notification of outside switches from which display lights could be turned off by air-raid wardens would constitute "adequate arrangements." Young said last night that only having an employe on the premises who could turn off the lights would be considered a satisfactory precaution.

The first case of the 148 reported violators of last Monday's blackout was fined $25 in the District branch of the Municipal Court yesterday. Tilly Cohen, proprietor of an electrical appliance shop at 1216 Seventh Street Northwest pleaded guilty of operating a neon light in the show window.

Friends Equip Mary Brown, WAAC-to-Be

As well equipped for duty as any full-fledged Army man will be Dr. Mary Agnes Brown, president of the District Women's Bar Association, when she reports August 3 as an officer candidate in the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps at Fort Des Moines, Iowa.

When Dr. Brown arrived at her desk in the Veterans' Administration yesterday morning, she found that her coworkers had provided her with every personal article suggested by the War Department on its list for prospective WAAC's.

She also received a bouquet of 60 25-cent war stamps done in corsage fashion, a number of real flowers, a small American flag and a few Armyish presents.

Dr. Brown holds B. A. and LL. B. degrees from George Washington University and is one of five women attorneys in the solicitor's office of the Veterans' Administration. This year she received the degree of Doctor of Judical Science at George Washington University.

In 1940 she flew to Mexico to attend regular sessions of the law school of the University of Mexico. At the first meeting of the Inter-American Bar Association, held in Havana, Cuba, she served as a delegate from the American Bar Association, the Federal Bar and the Women's Bar.

Dr. Brown's home is at 4606 Fifteenth Street Northwest. She is the daughter of Homer J. Brown, retired, formerly of the commission of conciliation in the Labor Department.

Mails Barred to 2 More Magazines

By the Associated Press

The second-class mailing privileges of the magazines Film Fun and Argosy were revoked yesterday by Postmaster General Frank C. Walker on grounds of obscenity. Film Fun is published at Dunellen, N. J., and Argosy in New York. Walker described matter published in Film Fun as "no more than appeal to the salaciously disposed." Film Fun was represented at a recent department hearing, but Argosy did not oppose revocation of its second-class privileges.

Walker also denied the application of Gripping Detective Cases and Play, published at New York and Mount Morris, Ill., respectively, for second-class mailing privileges. He held the magazines to be nonmailable under the statute prohibiting obscenity in the mails.

Farewell Party for Sailors of Anacostia Air Base

'FOR THEY ARE JOLLY GOOD FELLOWS . . .'—Sailors of the First and Fourth Sections of the Naval Reserve Aviation Base, Anacostia, D. C., last night staged a farewell party for Edwin H. McDuffie, chief aviation machinist's mate, and Elmer L. Jenkins, first-class aviation ordnance man. The two men, who are leaving for new assignments, were presented with combination cigarette-lighter cases. At Club 825 Fifteenth Street Northwest, shipmates and friends surrounded them and sang "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows." In the front row (from left) are James E. Reeves, who succeeds McDuffie; McDuffie, Mrs. McDuffie, Mrs. Jenkins, Jenkins, and Joseph J. Falabella, who succeeds Jenkins. The two officers seated behind them are Lieut. C. W. Harbert and Lieut. J. W. Condit

Trolley Splits Switch, Hurts 3 Pedestrians

Westbound on G Street, the car was operated, according to police, by Allen S. Holmes, 34, of New York Avenue Northwest, who has had one month's experience as a trolley operator. Instead of continuing west on G, the car turned north, unexpectedly, on Eleventh, it was said.

The victims, Mrs. Ida Broz, 65, and Mrs. Marie Linn, 41, both of 1814 Fourteenth Street Southeast, and Miss Nancy Schell, 21, of 21 Kennedy Street Northwest, were walking across Eleventh Street when the car struck them. They were taken to Emergency Hospital.

Head of Massanutten Academy Injured

Col. Howard J. Benchoff, 50, headmaster of Massanutten Academy, Woodstock, Va., since 1905 was in critical condition in Casualty Hospital early today with injuries suffered in an automobile accident on the Baltimore Boulevard, Berwyn, Md.

Hospital attaches said Colonel Benchoff suffered a possible skull fracture, a broken leg and severe injuries to an arm, possibly broken.

According to Berwyn police, the accident was the result of a three-car crash. Drivers of the two other cars were charged with reckless driving, police said. They were Col. Asby Jones, Baltimore, and James F. Rushe, Hyattsville. Col. Benchoff was removed to the hospital by the Branchville Rescue Squad.

All American War Prisoners To Get Standard Food Packages

In order to supplement the rations of American prisoners of war, the American Red Cross yesterday announced that it will provide standard food packages at regular intervals to all American prisoners of war, discontinuing a policy of shipments of packages to individuals identified by name.

The District of Columbia Chapter has been shipping on the average of 600 to 700 such packages a month to identified war prisoners. In accordance with national ruling, the District Chapter will discontinue such shipments.

Reasons for the discontinuance of the shipment of individual packages by the Red Cross are the desire to have every prisoner receive the necessary supplementary rations and the difficulty of locating individuals because of the numerous transfers of prisoners from one camp to another and the refusal of prison authorities to forward parcels.

There are many cases where parcels have not reached the individual for whom they were intended and have been turned over to some other needy prisoner of the same nationality at the camp to which the package was addressed.

This situation makes for difficulty and confusion in local chapters, it was pointed out, since donors expect to get an acknowledgment of their gift from the prisoner for whom they purchased it. Since the situation cannot be clarified it was deemed wiser to see that every prisoner got regular packages, thus relieving the mind of all relatives.

Friends and relatives will not be prevented from sending parcels to prisoners since the United States postoffices continue to accept individually packed parcels addressed to identified prisoners of war, postage free, in accordance with current postal regulations. Donors, however, must prepare and ship these themselves rather than paying for a standard package through the local chapter. Postal channels are not open for sending packages to the Far East.

All parcels for identified prisoners of war are individually mailed from Geneva by parcel post. Swiss and German postal authorities refuse to accept responsibility for loss, pilferage or damage in the mails, and pilferage of these parcels is increasing, according to reports received. Bulk shipments to unidentified prisoners can be sent to prison camps in their original wooden cases, 16 to a case, which reduces the possibility of loss.

Martha Raye To Feature Bond Rally

Martha Raye, large-mouthed film comedienne, the Army Air Corps Band, and possibly Commander Gene Tunney, U. S. N., will add glamor to a bond-selling rally to be staged by the local Civilian Defense Office at the Watergate next Tuesday night.

Several top-flight vaudeville acts also are being sought for the free open-air show, which will intersperse popular entertainment with bond selling and educational talks on the civilian defense program. The rally will begin at 8 p. m., and tickets of admission may be obtained from the 66 District deputy air raid wardens or from the county coordinators.

Miss Raye will lead the audience in group singing, and the Air Corps Band will play popular and light classical numbers. This band, known as one of the finest in any service, is conducted by Lieut. Alf Heilburg, and includes in its ranks former members of the Philadelphia Orchestra as well as of Tommy Dorsey's and Dick Stabile's bands.

Besides talks by Tunney and other nationally prominent men, plans are being completed for a demonstration of an air-raid communications control center, such as was presented for members of the protective services last month at the departmental auditorium.

The public is invited to get tickets from the air raid warden and attend the rally. All members of the civilian defense organization are requested to be present.

Marx, Elsie Houston Score Before Watergate Audience

By Ray C. B. Brown

Burle Marx conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in the eightieth "Sunset Symphony Concert" at the Potomac Watergate on Wednesday night. Soloist: Elsie Houston. Program: Overture to "Il Guarani" (Gomes), Dance from "Huemac" (Rogatis), Dance Suite (Norton), Songs by Villa-Lobos and Barroso, Overture to "Oberon" (Weber), Symphony No. 5 in C minor (Beethoven).

Yesterday's twilight hour turned a rather sultry afternoon into a tranquil and cool evening to the consequent enjoyment of several thousand auditors assembled at the Potomac Watergate for the penultimate summer concert of the National Symphony Orchestra. A drab sunset behind a cloud bank left only the faintest flush in the sky and no reflection upon the river which had a rippled surface of steel gray dotted with canoes bound for the barge. A light breeze wandered upstream, while in the upper air a westerly wind slowly drove scattered clouds across a gibbous moon.

Brown

On the podium was Burle Marx, conductor of the Rio de Janeiro Orchestra, who received a cordial welcome in memory of a previous visit to the Watergate. His opening number was the familiar overture to "Il Guarani" by Antonio Carlos Gomes, the first Brazilian composer to achieve fame outside his native land. "Il Guarani" had its premiere in La Scala on March 18, 1870, and was subsequently performed in Florence, Genoa, Rome, London and New York. Verdi commended the young composer for his dramatic power, and Gomes returned the compliment by using some of Verdi's instrumental devices in later operas, which did not attain a lasting favor with the public.

Argentina was represented in the second number, a barbaric dance from the opera, "Huemac," by Pascual de Rogatis. Primitive themes and rhythms are freely employed in this opera, which bears the name of a king of the Toltecs, and the specific idiom of the dance is Mayan. In the style of many Indian dances, it begins slowly and gradually gains momentum.

The soloist was Elsie Houston, who has delighted Watergate audiences before and did so again on this occasion. While this Brazilian singer is always mentioned as a soprano, she defies the limitations of that category. Her remarkable voice is what the French call "nombreuse" in that it contains a variety of timbres and is continually surprising the listener with its color changes. It can be tender one moment and raucous the next, and alternate between a clear limpidity of pure soprano quality and a throaty contralto. Five of her songs were by Heitor Villa-Lobos, three of them harmonizations of native melodies collected in Matto Grosso, and two inspired by Indian themes. She also offered a Rio adaptation by Barroso of "Ciribiribin" and four voodoo chants, the last self-accompanied on a hand drum.

A first local performance was given of a dance suite by the young American composer, Spencer Norton, who is now teaching at his alma mater, the University of Oklahoma. Mr. Marx met him not long ago at the MacDowell Colony and was impressed by his talent. The suite, consisting of a prologue, sarabande, bouree and festival dance, shows originality of style and a discreetly piquant admixture of polytonality. The sarabande is a particularly effective treatment of an old form in modern guise. Mr. Norton has a decided gift for orchestration and a keen sense of instrumental color, and his music discloses interesting traits of personality.

The first part of the concert justified its title of Pan American, but the adjective did not apply to the overture to Weber's "Oberon" what came after the intermission: and Beethoven's fifth symphony. Perhaps the original plan had to be modified by the lack of time for rehearsal of new works.

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, July 22.—Buck Newsom is on his way toward making American League history without trying. In fact, he's trying desperately to avoid it, but the signs are that he'll set a new record at season's end, despite himself. He would be the first American League pitcher to lose 20 games in three different seasons.

POVICH

Back in 1934, Newsom was a 20-game loser with the St. Louis Browns. Seven years later he repeated with the Tigers. With the Nats this season he has lost 14 games to date. At his present gait he's a cinch to hit 20 losses again.

But 'taint Newsom's fault. The fact is that Newsom, since early June, has been one of the better pitchers in the American League but he has been paying the penalty of pitching for a club that has been playing eighth-place ball. They have been giving Newsom precious few runs to work with, and behind his back the Nats have been messing up game after game.

Newsom, disgusted the other day by the Nats' failure to score any runs for him, was still able to see some humor in it. "I guess it's my own fault," said Buck wryly. "My trouble is I'm in a hitting slump. If I could hit, I could win a few games for myself. And if I could hit .250 I'd be outhitting the rest of the Washington club."

Buck's record reads seven victories and 14 defeats, but with any decent support, it would be the reverse, and Newsom would be on his way to 20 victories instead of 20 losses. He thinks so, emphatically.

"Since the first month of the season, I've been pitching as good ball as I did for the Tigers in 1940 when I won 21 and lost 5," says Buck. "This should have been a great year for me, but I can't carry the Washington club on my back and win, too," he added modestly.

Reports have persisted that the Brooklyn Dodgers were trying to buy Newsom from the Nats, but there is small chance that would happen. It would be impossible to waive Newsom out of the American League. In the first place, Clark Griffith doesn't want to sell him, and secondly, at least three other American League clubs would not waive their claims to Big Buck.

Newsom could lose 20 games at his present pace but if he lost them in the same manner that he has been collecting defeats thus far, he could kick conscientiously at any salary out. When he signed for $15,000 last spring he contracted to pitch good ball for the Nats, and he has done that. That he doesn't have a winning record isn't his fault.

All but three of Newsom's years in the big leagues have been spent with second division clubs, but he still can show better than a .500 record. In his career with a half-dozen major league teams in both leagues, he has won 140 games and lost 136. Before he hangs up his glove, Newsom might even attain the cherished goal of 200 big league victories.

The record books say Newsom is 35. He says he is 34. He might even be older, but it would be foolhardy to speculate when retirement might come to Newsom. He shows no signs of slowing up. Last month for example when he struck out seven Browns in seven innings, he was actually throwing a faster ball than he ever threw in his life.

Newsom's cunning. He doesn't depend on his pretty good fast ball. He uses a side arm, a pretty good curve and one of the better changes in pace in the league. The tendency used to be to regard Newsom as a big cluck who would be through from the moment that he lost his speed, but that will scarcely be true. He has enough other stuff to get by in the majors.

Buck's big asset, though, is that strong right arm, which has never been sore at any time. It has survived the popular sore-arm epidemic which set in when air-conditioned trains and hotels came into the big leagues, and it has withstood all of the abuse that good time Buck imposes on his physique generally. Folks have given up wondering when Newsom will be through.

If Newsom had taken his pitching seriously in his younger days he might even now be able to boast more 20 victory seasons than any man in the big leagues. But in those days he was content to try to fog his fast ball past the opposition. He didn't have control. His control has been all right for about three years now, and so has his head for business. For the third straight year he is the highest paid pitcher in the league. He may lose 20 games again but he'll never be without pride of some sort.

Spa Sales Bring Out Breeders' Jitters

New York, July 22.—Preparing to ship what they hope is a million or so dollars worth of thoroughbred yearlings to Saratoga, for the impending yearling sales, Kentucky breeders find themselves more jittery than the yearlings.

CONSIDINE

They don't know whether it's going to be a case of chicken or feathers. Race tracks are doing a tremendous business these days, but what about thoroughbred owners? With one luxury after another being lopped off the upper crust, will they be bidding strongly for race horses this year? New taxes make the purchase of a yearling the wildest kind of gamble. Even in good times, of course, buying a yearling was about the riskiest investment of them all.

The breeders don't know what to expect at Saratoga. They may possibly run into a wild spending spree, with defense plant tycoons buying up the colts to help them kick down social barriers. They may get a fair return on their yearlings, thanks to the confidence of veteran thoroughbred owners in the immediate future of racing. They may boxcar their quarduped wares and go back to Lexington in a huff, as old Tom Piatt did last year when nobody wanted to pay more than cigarette money for the yearlings of the man who had sold Alsab for $700.

Past Auctions Indicate the Trend

It doesn't help the breeders much to look to the most recent horse sales. On July 13, in California, 70 horses in training, as well as brood mares and yearlings, were auctioned. The whole lot brought only $11,755, or $168 a head. Back in 1928 a syndicate of gay spenders paid $75,000 for a yearling colt by Whisk Broom II—Payment. The syndicate named him New Broom, and he swept them cleaner than one.

On the other side of the ledger, Marshall Field auctioned off eight of his brood mares on July 13, at Newmarket, England. And bomb-perilled British thoroughbred fanciers bid aggressively. The eight mares brought $76,902, an average of $9613. An Irish breeder named Alan Baker plunked down $20,200 for a 6-year-old gray named Infra Red—or about twice as much as the Californians paid for 70 head. The Aga Khan, who blew a lot of dough when he took it on a regal lam out of France, paid $14,700 for a 12-year-old named Eclair.

As has been the case for many years, a good bit of the pomp and circumstance surrounding the yearling sales will center in the disposal of Clairborne Stud youngsters. A. B. Hancock, the grand old guy who owns Clairborne, is sending 67 yearlings to the sales. In better times they would have returned him a mint.

If you have the dough and the disposition, you can pick up colts and fillies by some of the greatest of all sires, during the Claiborne sales. Blenheim II, pappy of Whirlaway, sired five of the Hancock representatives. Blenheim II has been blended with two of Sir Gallahad III's daughters, Galagold and Risk. He has also been crossed, if that's the word, with the Fair Play or Man o' War line, as represented by My Flag, a daughter of American Flag, who is a son of Man o' War. What heritage, brother.

Sir Gallahad III Sends His Get

Sir Gallahad III, who has been this country's greatest stallion for years, will be represented during the Claiborne disposal by three colts and four fillies. Gallahad's grandson, Omaha, sends three colts, one of them from a daughter of John P. Grier. A great Gallahad son, Gallant Fox, sends two fillies and a colt. War Admiral sends a filly from what we believe is his first crop.

Other famed sires represented this year will be the Les Combs parcel of yearlings by Stimulus, Pharamond II, Blue Larkspur, Sun Teddy and The Mahmoud, son of Blenheim II. Johnstown, who won the Derby, Belmont, Withers, Dwyer, Wood and Paumonok, then developed a whistle, sends his first crop to the sales this year.

The 1942 yearlings for sale at Saratoga are part of about 10,000 foals dropped during the spring of 1941. By the time the 1944 Kentucky Derby rolls around—the race which all of them were figuratively born to win—only about 15 of them will be ready to face the starter. They will have died, been killed, gone bad and been guided into other pursuits.

But there's always the heavy chance that the winner will come out of the impending sales. The breeders may not do too well this time, things being as they are. But, at worst, they won't go hungry. They'll always be a few bidders left, as long as people remember that Man o' War was knocked down to Sam Riddle for $5000 at another wartime Saratoga auction.

Roy Cullenbine's Homer Beats Tigers, 2 to 1

Bill Nicholson Out at Home, Although Cubs Didn't Need Run

Bill Nicholson, Chicago Cubs outfielder, is shown being tagged out at home in the ninth inning of game yesterday between Cubs and Braves by Braves' Catcher Ernie Lombardi, as Umpire Jocko Conlon calls the play. Cullenbine Also Fielding Hero At Third Base; Loss to Bridges

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Detroit, July 22.—Roy Cullenbine swung his bat at the first thing he saw coming his way in the fifth inning and provided the Nats with the words, the music and the mood for a song, "At Twilight, Tra La."

What Cullenbine saw he liked. In fact he loved it. It was a nice curve ball thrown by Tommy Bridges of the Tigers—nice, but not too good. Cullenbine kissed it into the upper deck of right field at a time when two were out, Stan Spence was on base and the Tigers were in a 1-to-0 lead. That's how the Nats won today's ball game, 2 to 1.

It was a twilight affair, starting at 6 p. m., and 7079 customers saw Sid Hudson do pretty well, too. Hudson held the Tigers to five hits in his duel with Tommy Bridges and won a ball game after ten previously futile starts in succesion. He also snapped the Nats' three-game losing streak.

But Cullenbine was a dual hero. Aside from thumping home the tying and winning run, the converted outfielder was helping Hudson out of trouble all evening with fancy stops and throws around third base, the same spot where he butched up yesterday's games for the Nats. Today Cullenbine was a composite of Ossie Bluege and all the other great third basemen of history.

Gets Good Support

Hudson got inspiring support too from other playmates in the ninth inning. Taking his 2-1 lead into the ninth, Hudson walked Ned Harris with none out to put the tying run on base. Then he got a lot of help.

Rudy York rammed a long blow toward the fence in right center and it looked for a moment like the beginning of the Nats fourth straight defeat, but Bruce Campbell galloped along the wall and hauled the ball in with a running catch. Frank Higgins then smashed a fierce drive toward Shortstop

Pros Qualify in Rich Chicago Tournament Which Opens Today; Lewis Worsham Has 78

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 22.—For 14 hours today, 158 golfers—playing two tournaments—attempted to keep out of each other's way in a traffic jam on the Tam O'Shanter course.

If several of the boys haven't lost their way in the darkness, then the day's work can be considered finished, with a couple of Philadelphia pros and all the top flight amateurs but one meeting up with success.

The two tournaments were the All-American Amateur, in which 64 players started match play, and the $15,500 Tam O'Shanter Open, in which professionals began qualifying.

Pocketing $200 apiece for sharing medalist honors in the 18-hole qualifying round for 94 nonexempt pros were the two Philadelphia traveling buddies, Henry Ransom and Gene Kunes. Ransom, former Texas P. G. A. and Texas Open champion, fashioned a 35-33—68 on the par 36-36—72 proving ground, and Kunes, 1935 Canadian Open winner, blazed in with 33-35—68.

Abbott Beaten

Kunes had a 65 in a recent practice round here and was rather disgusted with today's card. He was five under par on the eleventh hole and appeared destined to break the course record of 65 and hit a $500 jackpot for doing it. But he took bogies on the next three holes and blew the chance.

Western Amateur Champion Pat Abbott of Pasadena, now an Army private at Denver's Lowry Field, was the only big name fun player to fall by the wayside as the field of 64 was trimmed to 16 by two rounds of match play. Abbott was sidelined—until tomorow, at least, when he and the other losers enter the open play—by Gus Novotny of Chicago, a 40-year-old linksman who has been at the game 30 years, in the first round. Novotny was defeated in the second round by 215-

Ross Outhurls Wagner, Chisox Beat Bosox, 2-0

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 22.—Luke Appling's double with two mates on base in the sixth inning today broke up a pitchers' duel between Buck Ross and Charley Wagner and gave the Chicago White Sox a 2-to-0 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Ross pitched a five-hitter while Wagner turned in a four-hit performance. The Chicago team made only one hit off Wagner until they scored twice in the sixth inning. The Red Sox never got more than one hit in any inning.

It was the Chicago team's second victory over the Red Sox and Ross' fourth triumph of the season.

Nicholson's Hit Defeats Braves, 2-1

By International News Service

Boston, July 22.—Bill Nicholson's triple in the ninth inning with Lou Novikoff aboard, gave the Chicago Cubs a 2 to 1 victory over the Boston Braves today. The triumph enabled Claude Passeau to chalk up his fourteenth victory of the season. Passeau allowed only two hits, one in the fifth and the other in the seventh. Nicholson's error in the seventh permitted Boston to tie the score.

The Chicago ace pitched to only 30 batters in the nine frames. In eight of them the Braves went down in one, two, three order.

Sympathetic Card Scout Sees Draft Tables Turn

New Orleans, July 22 (AP).—Wid Matthews, St. Louis Cardinal baseball scout, was greeted at Pelican Stadium here by Vincent Rizzo, head usher, with a draft notice in hand.

"The boy had a long face," said Wid, "and I immediately gave him a pep talk, telling him what a good thing it was to be called upon to serve his country. He let me talk, and when I finished, he said:

"'Thanks for wishing me good luck, but this letter happens to be from your own draft board.'"

Hemsley's Four Hits Help Yanks Win, 5-1

Four Runs in 10th Inning Beat Cleveland; DiMaggio's Hitting Streak Halted at 18

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 22.—Joe DiMaggio didn't get a hit today but Rollie Hemsley collected four and the New York Yankees scored four unearned runs in the tenth inning to stretch their winning streak to 11 games at the expense of the Cleveland Indians, 5 to 1, incidentally boosting their league lead to 12 games.

Till the overtime stanza the contest was a tight hurling duel between Atley Donald of the Yanks and Lefty Al Milnar of the Indians.

Cleveland's big southpaw not only ended DiMaggio's hitting string at 18 consecutive games, hitting him with a pitch once and walking him on his final turn at bat in the tenth, but limited the world champions' scoring in the regulation distance to one run—Charley (King Kong) Keller's twelfth homer of the season.

Grimes Errs

He also got the first two men out in the tenth, but then let Tom Henrich single and passed DiMaggio. At this point Joe Gordon grounded to Shortstop Oscar Grimes, who fumbled the ball, kicked it around and finally threw over Catcher Otto Denning's head as Henrich scored, DiMaggio went to third and Gordon reached second.

Keller was intentionally walked to load the bases after which Phil Rizzuto singled for two runs and Hemsley doubled for his fourth hit and second two-bagger to score Keller.

It was the tenth hit in four games with the Yankees for the little catcher, who was released last week by Cincinnati because he had made only 13 hits all season and had a batting average of .113. He now is batting .588 for the world champions.

Donald Wins Seventh

Donald, in achieving his seventh success against two defeats, held the Tribe to nine hits and scoreless except for the seventh, when Manager Lou Boudreau, Jeff Heath and Les Fleming bunched singles. Boudreau took himself out for a

Mike Getto Confirmed as Dodger Coach

By the Associated Press

New York, July 22.—Mike Getto has been named to succeed Jock Sutherland as coach of the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National Professional Football League, Owner Dan Topping announced today.

Getto, a former All-America tackle at the University of Pittsburgh and first assistant to Sutherland at Brooklyn, was selected from among scores of applicants who sought the job upon announcement that Sutherland would enter the Navy, Topping said.

"A strong factor in dictating the selection of Getto was the unqualified indorsement given him by Sutherland," the Dodger owner added.

A native of Jeanette, Pa., Getto was an outstanding star on Pitt's Sutherland-coached teams from 1926 through 1928. During the 1928 season Getto was an almost unanimous All-American and at the close of the season played with the East in the annual East-West game at San Francisco.

In 1929 he was chosen by Sutherland as an assistant for spring practice at Pitt and in the fall was signed as line coach at Kansas.

Getto remained at Kansas for 11 years, or until 1940 when Sutherland took over the Dodgers and summoned him East as first assistant.

The new Dodger pilot makes his home at Lawrence, Kans., seat of the university, during the off season.

Miss Corbett and Miss Passow paired up to defeat a Milwaukee team, Vi Egan and Connie McMillan, 6—1, 6—2, in a doubles semifinal.

Wells Holds Middies to 6 Safeties

D. C. Boy Helps Cause With 2 Hits; Hassett, Hines, Costello Also Star at Bat for G. U.

Annapolis, Md., July 22.—Georgetown's Hoyas, picking up where they left off with Navy last spring, walloped the Middies, 11 to 4, today in the opening Maryland-District of Columbia League baseball game of the season here.

The Hoyas, who snapped Navy's 10-game winning streak during the regular campaign, piled up 13 hits today and tallied seven runs by rallies in the fifth and sixth innings while taking a comparatively easy triumph. The Tars committed five bobbles in the field as Coach Max Bishop experimented with 17 players during the contest, including six plebes.

Joe Wells, Washington, D. C., right-hander, went the route for Georgetown, limiting Navy to six hits, one a home run by Plebe Jack Coulter, of Roanoke, Va., with Third Baseman George Watson on base in the fifth.

Bill Hassett, brother of the New York Yankees' first baseman, Buddy Hassett, sparkled at shortstop for the Hoyas. Triples by Georgetown's Gyorgydeak, Murphy, Hines and Costello played havoc with four Navy hurlers. Wells also helped his own cause with a pair of singles.

Marriage Sets Record At Arlington

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 22.—Coward and Dupuy's one-time $1000 plater, Marriage, set a new North American record for a mile and a quarter on the turf course when he won the $7500 added Grassland Handicap at Arlington Park today.

Marriage beat Clyde Troutt's Take Wing by three lengths as he ran the distance in 2:02 2-5. The old record of 2:05 was set by Grapple, a six-year-old carrying 110 pounds, at the old Sheepshead Bay track in Long Island on June 30, 1908. Marriage also a six-year-old toted 116 pounds.

Marriage led throughout to win handily. Finishing third was L. B. Mayer's Reading II, the 4-5 favorite that won the Green Velvet Handicap on the grass a few weeks ago. Reading II, an Australian horse, was top weighted at 122 pounds.

The winner, ridden by Art Craig, paid $14.20, $6.00 and $3.20. Take Wing paid $5.80 and $3.20 and Reading II paid $2.40.

Marriage was claimed for $5000 from Hirsch Jacobs late last year by R. A. Coward. He has won several stakes since. Marriage also was a big money winner for Jacobs, who picked him up in a cheap claiming number.

Mauriello, Burman In N. Y. Bout Tonight

Hernandez Battles Costantino With Winner Scheduled to Fight Wright for Crown

By Sid Feder

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, July 22.—Air-cooled Madison Square Garden (bring your own ice bag) opens for the business of busting beaks tomorrow night for the first time in two months, and the chances are very promising that the heavyweight omelet may be scrambled even more by the time Tami Mauriello and Red Burman finish flailing each other.

Tami is the tough young kid from the Bronx who was handed a draw with rapid Robert Pastor on a platter some eight weeks ago. He is 5 to 12 in the betting to do considerably more to the Baltimore redhead this time in a 10-rounder. The card also features a 12-round tussle between Lulu Constantino and Pedro Hernandez, for which the winner will get a shot at Chalky Wright's featherweight championship. A crowd of 9000 is expected for the party.

Ever since Tami suddenly found himself with a draw decision with Pastor, he has been somewhat of a "white-haired boy" in the fight game's more important centers. Since rapid Robert is well up on the list of warriors, anyone who can even come within shouting distance of belting him around attracts attention at the box office. That's an asset no promoter is likely to overlook in these days when able heavyweights are about as plentiful as new tires for the family bus.

But it is possible that Mauriello may be trying to take a hold on the working end of a riveting machine this time. Red has the experience and the style that is definitely not pie a la mode for the Bronx boy. He keeps moving in and firing torpedoes at the tummy that would hardly be what Tami would ask for in his Christmas stocking. If Red's veteran legs can cruise along at reasonable speed for 10 rounds, this corner tabs him to upset Mauriello.

The featherweight fuss has been getting almost as much notice as Mauriello's outing. In this one, Costantino, who has lost only one fight in 60, takes on the Puerto Rican from Brooklyn who won that one. Costantino is favorite, because the last time he was supposed to have been suffering from a bad case of ice cream, eaten too rapidly on top of a sea-food dinner. He claims he's been staying closer to the simple life this time.

Old Orchard, Me., July 22 (AP).—Colby Hanover, the early Hambletonian favorite, out-trotted several of the strongest contenders he will meet in that famed stake today when he captured two of the three heats in the $9078 National Stake on the kite-shaped track.

That black colt, owned by Irving Gleason of Williamsport, Pa., and C. W. Phellis broke early on Driver Fred Egan during the first heat, which was won by the lightly regarded Green Diamond. On his next two tries, however, Colby Hanover took the lead at the start and held it all the way. His time for the second heat was 2:03, the fastest trotting mile of the grand circuit season.

Dodgers Beat Reds as Higbe Hurls 5-Hitter

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, July 22.—Kirby Higbe muffled the Cincinnati Reds to five hits tonight while he and his teammates raided Ray Starr and Gene Thompson for twice that many to give the Brooklyn Dodgers a 5-to-1 triumph. Higbe himself knocked in two runs with a double.

It was Higbe's tenth victory and he had the Reds under control all the way—yielding their only run in the eighth inning on a triple by Lonny Frey and a single by Gee Walker after the Dodgers had completed their assault.

Brooklyn waded into Starr for a run in the first frame on a double by Joe Medwick, who also started a two-run flurry in the fourth with a single. Dolph Camilli brought him home with a two-bagger and Peewee Reese scored Camilli on a single.

Then Higbe closed the book with his two-run double in the sixth. Starr, charged with his seventh defeat after winning 12 games, was removed for a pinch hitter in the seventh and Thompson finished.

Hunt Blanks Colonials on Three Hits

Boothe's Slugging Leads Maryland's 13-Hit Attack On 3 G. W. Pitchers

The University of Maryland made a smashing debut in the summer college baseball league yesterday at College Park by blanking George Washington, 14-0, behind the 3-hit pitching of Max Hunt.

Hunt, veteran, chunky right-hander, permitted only one Colonial as far as second base in the twilight game that was halted as Maryland batted in the last of the eighth.

The Terrapins slugged Aaron Silverman and two other George Washington pitchers for 13 hits and bunched their runs in three big innings. They sent 10 men to bat in the second to shove over seven runs and then added two in the fifth and the final five in the sixth.

Cocaptain Danny Boothe, one of Maryland's best outfielders of all time, paced his team at bat and afield. The lanky slugger slammed a triple and two singles to bat in three runs.

Also prominent on attack for the winners were Kinsman, Evans and Ellett, with two hits each. Evans hit a double and triple while both of Ellett's blows were for two bases.

Shortstop Elmer Leukhardt, a freshman and recent star at Anacostia High School made an auspicious start for the Colonials by accounting for two of their three hits. The other safety was made by Matt Zunic, the right fielder.

Coleman Headley Sues for $50,000 Assault Damages

Baltimore, July 22 (AP).—A suit for $50,000 damages was filed by L. Coleman Headley, University of Maryland track coach, today against Guy Costanene, proprietor of a tourist camp at which Headley was shot and seriously wounded on July 20, 1941.

In a suit filed in the Court of Common Pleas, Headley charges through his attorney that Costanene, a Baltimorean, negligently pointed a revolver at him and fired it; a second count alleged assault and battery.

Headley's suit contended that he had been disabled since the affray, which took place in Constanene's tourist camp on the Washington Boulevard.

Headley, who lives in Laurel, was represented by Attorney George C. Doub.

Battles to Coach With Wade's Team

New York, July 22 (AP).—Cliff Battles, assistant football coach and mentor at Columbia University, has been granted leave of absence to assist Maj. Wallace Wade in coaching the Western Division of the Army All-Star football team, it was announced today by Dr. Edward S. Elliott, Columbia athletic director.

Battles, former pro backfield ace with Boston and Washington, will coach the Army backs. He will rejoin the Columbia staff a week before the Lions' first game, September 26.

American Association Stars Meet Kansas City Tonight

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, July 22.—The cream of the American Association baseball crop will tangle with the league-leading Kansas City Blues tomorrow night in the rubber game of the ninth—and probably last for the duration—annual midsummer classic.

The Blues arrived from a northern road trip today hampered by injuries and the loss of their star outfielder, Eric Tipton, but with a burning desire to avenge a pair of previous All-Star defeats administered in 1939 and 1940.

Manager Bill Burwell of Louisville, who with Fred Haney, Toledo pilot, will handle the All-Star club, listed George (Red) Munger, giant Columbus right-hander, as his probable starter on the mound. Johnny Neun was undecided as to his choice, but indicated it might be Southpaw Johnnie Johnson with Francis Shea and Ray Volpi as alternates.

The annual tilt, inaugurated at Minneapolis in 1934, now stands at four games apiece with the league satellites having taken the last three games. The Stars humiliated Kansas City, 19 to 7, in 1939, handed the Blues' Ernie Bonham a 5-to-3 licking two years ago, and completed the sweep against Minneapolis last July.

Although Munger, who has given Kansas City as much trouble as any hurler in the circuit, will start, Burwell said all of his mound corps likely would see action. This would mean little respite for the Blues as the Colonel skipper has such aces as Harry Brecheen, the other Columbus mainstay who is riding the crest of eight straight victories; the Louisville strikeout king, Nelson Potter; Milton Heefner, the Millers' little portsider, and George Coffman of St. Paul.

All receipts of the game will go to Army and Navy relief funds, and everyone, including venders, sports writers and visiting dignitaries, will purchase regular customer tickets.

The probable batting orders:

All-Stars — Blackburn (Indianapolis), rf.; Stanky (Milwaukee), ss.; Vosmik (Minneapolis), lf.; McCarthy (Indianapolis), 1b; Bestudik (Indianapolis), 3b; Norman (Milwaukee), cf.; Drews (St. Paul), 2b; Lacy (Louisville), c.; Munger (Columbus), p.

Kansas City—Nonnenkamp, cf.; Saltzgaver, 2b; Levy, 3b; Sears, c.; Craft, lf.; Rosenthal, rf.; Collins, 1b.; Milosevich, ss.; Johnson, p.

East Potomac, Rock Creek Plan Benefits

Managers Len Burrage at East Potomac and Harry Graham at Rock Creek plan to hold Pearl Harbor Tournaments at their respective courses in line with the United States Golf Association's request to the Nation's 1900 public links to aid the Hawaiians.

The U. S. G. A. queried the municipal courses yesterday as to holding 18-hole tournaments between August 1 and 16 with all proceeds to go for some type of war relief for Hawaii.

Charles V. Rainwater, chairman of the public links committee of the parent golf body, is anxious to have a complete representation of the many courses in view of the strong bonds of friendship which existed for many years between the Hawaiians, who traveled thousands of miles to compete in the National Public Links Championship, and their competitors from this country.

One of the favorites was Arthur Armstrong, who went to the semi-finals of the national championship in Baltimore in 1939 and was runner-up in 1934.

The U. S. G. A. suggests an 18-hole selective handicap tournament with a 50 cent entry fee. Certificates will be awarded the low scorers.

As the local public links have little handicapping system, Burrage and Graham will probably run Blind Bogey tournaments at Rock Creek and East Potomac over one of the next two weekends. Anacostia may also compete.

Cottage City Wins

McCoy Slugs Ref and Loses Mat Feature

Taking illegal pokes at persons of authority is one certain method of alienating friends and losing decisions. This woeful fact was learned the hard way by one Bibber McCoy last night when he lost a decision to big Tommy O'Toole of the Coast Guard in the feature wrestling match at Turner's Arena.

McCoy floored Referee Casey Berger with a ponderous right when the arbiter contained to take exception to the manner in which McCoy was mauling his opponent. Berger is a very sensitive fellow with regard to his authority and his jaw. Therefore he heaved himself to his feet, dusted resin off his trousers, and promptly raised O'Toole's paw in a signal of victory after 19 minutes.

Before this took place, however, McCoy was giving O'Toole a very unpleasant evening. The Boston Bad Boy makes a wonderful villain, and for 19 minutes he threw the dictionery of foul deeds at the sailor, gouging, pulling hair, slugging, etc.

O'Toole was not taking this placidly, though, for he frequently reverted to his former profession of pugilism and floored the Bibber with a flurry of punches upon several occasions. One time, after being dropped in a corner, McCoy rushed to midring in a frenzy to meet a poke squarely in the teeth which sent him rolling through the ropes.

McCoy's smartest performance did not occur in the ring, but took place as he was going into the dressing room afterward. An anonymous fan threw a surreptitious punch at the squatty fellow, who whirled and caught the miscreant with a light right that landed smack on the side of the head.

This act cooled the ardor of all spectators who honestly feel that the right to abuse the Thespians goes with the purchase of a ticket.

A major upset occurred in the two-man team match, which saw Maurice La Chappelle and Johnny Melas lose the championship of the Fourteenth and W Street area to Michele Leone and Al Norcus. La Chappelle, who has variously teamed with Ace Freeman and others, has lost these dual scuffles so seldom that a defeat can be classified as news.

Leone and Norcus captured the first and third falls in an excellently acted drama which varied from the customary plot. Usually, the villians take the first fall and then lose the last two by close margins.

The first fall came after 18½ minutes when Leone pinned La Chappelle with a body press. Melas was just clambering into the ring after being tossed over the ropes, but Norcus took him out of the play with a half-hearted block.

The heroes captured the second fall in eight minutes when Norcus was flattened with a body press after La Chappelle had slammed him resoundingly on the mat. At the time, Brother Leone was visiting with some customers the Frenchman had thrown him at.

The final fall could have gone either way. After five minutes of bloodless doings Leone jumped on Melas with a body press at the same time La Chappelle was pinning Norcus with an identical hold. The referee saw Leone's handiwork first and named his team winner, despite much clamoring from the fans and the losers.

True Star, $15.50 Shot, Scores in Bel Air Racing Inaugural

Great Step Runs Second In Feature

7000 Fans on Hand For Opening-Day Program; Carrillo Rides Winner

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Bel Air, Md., July 22.—M. J. Schmitt's True Star, raced 29 times last year without visiting the winner's circle, continued to show that 1942 is his year by winning his second purse in three starts this month. The 5-year-old son of Transmute turned back four rivals in the Bel Air Inaugural, featuring the opening-day program of the 10-day meeting here in Hartford County. True Star, ridden by Jockey E. Carrillo, finished three parts of a length in advance of Mrs. M. E. (Liz) Whitney's Great Step with M. Seth's Blue Twink third. Mrs. J. Y. Christmas' Rough Time, the overnight favorite, was scratched just before post time.

True Star was the longest shot in the field of five and returned his scattered backers a $15.50 mutuel. He was clocked for the seven furlongs in 1.28 3-5 over the fast track. The record for the route is 1.26 2-5 set by War Scare in 1940.

Despite tire shortages and gasoline rationing, a crowd of 7000 greeted the return of the bang tails to the Baltimore area. Betting fell behind last year, however, in the early events but picked up as the program progressed.

In the feature, Blue Twink, Weatherite and True Star ran as a three-horse team out in front during the early stages. Weatherite was first to feel the effects of the strong pace. At the far turn, True Star shook off Blue Twink to gain a definite lead for the first time.

Great Step and Darby Du, being rated to this point, were placed to drives. Great Step had clear sailing on the outside and came on to almost wear down the winner. Darby Du, however, was driven up along the rail and got in tight quarters. Jockey Woodrow Kirk was forced to take up and the veteran did not regain his full stride until the end.

General Manager G. Ray Bryson announced that for the remainder of the meeting post time for the first race will be 2:30 p. m. with betting on the daily double closing at 2:15.

The Louis C. Leith Steeplechase, the day's secondary feature and the first jumping event of the summer season, went to Fatal Interview, ridden by Gentleman Jockey J. C. Arthur. The favored Rougemont was second with Tam O'Shanter third. Fatal Interview took the lead from Rougement the first time around and paid $7.90. The winner set a new track record of 3.38 2/5 for the 14-jump course.

Only 30 Boats Enter 14th Chester Regatta

Chestertown, Md., July 22 (AP).—Not more than 30 boats are expected to enter the greatly curtailed fourteenth annual regatta of the Chester River Yacht and Country Club here Saturday, July 25, W. Clarke Grieb, chairman of the entry committee, announced.

The event, which yearly attracted thousands to Chestertown, has been reduced from a three-day program by the elimination of power boat racing.

Selections at Bel Air

Dear Al:

There is a scarcity of steeplechase riders here. If you want to ride over the jumps, take out a license and get steady work. Frank Cronan, former racing writer, is handling the public address system here. He also does the announcing at Charles Town, Dade Park and other tracks. Jimmy Wallace is handling the riding engagements for Jockey J. Harrell, Jockey Arnold and Anderson arrived from Rockingham Park. Apprentice Al Bocson loses his "bugs," or five-pound allowance, after he rides another winner. C. P. Miller, jr., shipped in six horses from Delaware Park. Jockey Danny Scocca, injured at Delaware Park after being in the hospital at Charles Town, is coming along nicely and leaves the Wilmington (Del.) hospital next week. Roman Nose, the half brother of Roman Boy, had to be destroyed, Owner Stewart said today. The colt was badly broken down. The jumper, Walkaway, in today's steeplechase suffered a broken foot here two years ago and has been brought back to the races. He performs for the Yelliot Stable. Jockey Hilton Dabson, hurt in the spill along with Scocca, is O. K. now. He was a visitor yesterday. Leeds Riely of the Charles Town official family is headed for an ensign's commission in the United States Navy. Yancey Christmas' Rough Time was scratched from yesterday's feature because the owner was unable to engage a van to bring the horse over from Pimlico. If you bet on Exhort yesterday when the son of Cohort was beaten a head by Jewel Song in the second race, blame his defeat on the war. One of Exhort's rear bandages became unravelled and he tripped along, barely losing. Trainer Tom Lewis explained after the race that he has been unable to buy strong safety pins to lock the wrappings and the one on Exhort yesterday broke. Don't sit under the infield tree without a bet on Royal Fleet.

BILL.

First race — TECO TACK has shown enough to warrant a top selection in this field. Should like the track and I'm going to string along. ANYWAY had a mishap last out and still was good enough to win. NYLEVE is better than shown recently and may take it all.

Second race—DIVIDEND has performed in good fashion of late and could take the measure of this kind. CLOCKS and WAKE have speed and may fill out the money bracket. COURNORA is an outside possibility.

Third race—The Yelliot-Bosley entry of WALKAWAY and LONE GALLANT seems the best in the day's steeplechase. The last-named is the best of the pair. JUSTA BUD and CLAQUE may get into the cash circle.

Fourth race—ROYAL FLEET and FOUR LEAF, a couple of 2-year-old speedsters who have done about everything asked, clash here and I prefer them in the order named. LINDEN GIRL to take care of the others.

Fifth race—SEVENTH SAGE was a winner at Hagerstown and deserves this top call in this field. TERRY MAY has speed but the long stretch will help the top one. INGERFIRE belongs close with this company.

Sixth race—CROISSANT and GROUCHY are a tight fit in this field. I like them in the order named. WORTHOWNING is fit as hands make horses and will be a keen factor and is due respect.

Seventh race—BAR SHIP will appreciate the long stretch at this track and probably will be along in time to take it all. DIZZY DAME is dropping down with these. SINGING STEEL for the minor award.

Eighth race—IDLE NIGHT has been rested and will like this mile route. I'm going to string along. GENDARME will like the change in tracks. WILDMUTE for the show end.

Best bet—SEVENTH SAGE.

Shans Moves Up To Fight Ruffin

New York, July 22 (INS).—Cleo Shans, popular Los Angeles featherweight, who has been campaigning most successfully in the East, will move into the lightweight class to take a crack at tough Bobbie Ruffin, one of the division's favorites in an 8-rounder at the Bronx Coliseum August 18.

Shans is also slated to meet Pittsburgh Jackie Wilson for the N. B. A. featherweight title in Wilkes-Barre on September 14. He hopes to campaign in both the 126 and 135 pound divisions.

Athletics Overcome Six-run Deficit to Wallop Browns, 11-8

Laabs Hits 18th Homer Off Besse

A's Pound Sundra And Successors In Big Innings; 28 Hits in Game

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 22.—Proving that a team can never get too many runs, the Philadelphia Athletics scored 9 times in 2 innings today to overcome a 6-run lead and defeat the St. Louis Brown, 11 to 8.

It was the second defeat for the Brownies in their last 13 games and this one appeared to be in the bag until Connie Mack's men came to bat in the fifth inning trailing by an even half dozen runs.

Six rapid-fire hits, a sacrifice and a walk tied the score before the puzzled Browns could discover where they were falling apart. The Athletics moved ahead with another 3-run spurt on two hits in the sixth and added single tallies in the seventh and eighth. Altogether there were nine extra base blows, five for the Browns and four for Philadelphia.

Chet Laabs, who has been hitting lately like a Babe Ruth, set off the Browns' 5-run fourth inning with his eighteenth homer of the year. Harold Wagner, the A's catcher, hit his first homer of the year with none on in the seventh.

Paul Dean Eyes Another Job in Majors

By the Associated Press

Houston, Tex., July 22.—The old zip is gone from the brawny right arm of Paul Dean, but in its place has come phenomenal control to give the youngest member of that once famed brother act—Dizzy and Daffy—13 victories and a longing glance at the majors again.

DEAN

Apparently washed up three years ago, Paul returned to the Texas League this season and proceeded to bring "ahs" from the fans and happy grins to the men operating the Houston franchise.

To date he has pitched in 19 games, 12 of them complete, given up 34 runs and 109 hits—and just 14 bases on balls.

That means Paul has issued an average of only one pass in 10 innings which is not much for batters to look forward to. In his last time out, Paul beat Tulsa, 5-1, and made only 74 pitches.

His earned-run average is 1.88 in 143 innings, and he has hurled two three-hitters, one four-hitter, a five-hitter and two six-hitters.

Fred Ankenman, president of the Houston Club, says Dean's fast ball isn't like it was when he worked with Brother Dizzy to make baseball history for the St. Louis Cardinals. But, adds Ankenman, Paul has a fine curve ball and a baffling change of pace.

Says J. Walter Morris, veteran Detroit scout: "When Dean hurt his arm after the St. Louis-Detroit World Series in a barnstorming tour it took away that famed fast one. But he's still a good pitcher—has control an dis smart."

Dean belongs to the Cardinals by way of Sacramento. He quit last year when the Giants, who had taken him on the rebound from the Texas League where he cured an ailing arm, traded him to St. Louis and the Cards wanted to send him to Sacramento. This year Houston obtained Paul on option.

Paul thinks so, too, and he says he can get the job done. Well, why not? He's only 28, has a family and runs little chance of being drafted.

Cards Whip Phillies, 7-0; Beazley Hurls

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 22.—Bunching 14 hits behind John Beazley's shutout pitching, the St. Louis Cardinals scored an easy 7 to 0 victory over the Phils today in the second game of their series. It was Beazley's eleventh victory this season.

The Cardinals blasted Si Johnson out of the box in the fourth scoring two runs after a two-run second inning. Frank Hoerst went out in the sixth when the Red Birds tallied three more. Earl Naylor finished the game.

Roy Cullenbine's Home Run Beats Tigers for Nats, 2-1

Sid Hudson Hurls Five-Hit Ball, Gets Help Afield From Mates; Tommy Bridges Loses

Johnny Sullivan and it was keeno for Hudson—a double play that Sullivan routed to first with the help of Ellis Clary.

The Nats were a wastrel bunch in the early innings. They slugged Bridges around for six hits in the first four innings, but got nothing. Vernon and Spence helped Bridges out of difficulty in different innings by getting out on stealing attempts.

Cullenbine helped Hudson turn back the Tigers scoreless in the first three innings. He made a diving stop of Cramer's ground smash in the first inning to throw the batter out, and in the third, he made a barehanded pickup of Bridges' hot shot after Hudson had deflected it, to get the runner at first at a time when nobody was out.

McCosky Scores

The Tigers took a 1-0 lead in the fourth after McCosky doubled to center for the second hit off Hudson. He was sacrificed to third and was fetched home by Harris' long fly to Spence.

In their own half of the inning, the Nats filled the bases on hits by Estalella and Sullivan and Early's walk, but with two out, Clary rammed a hard line drive into McCosky's glove.

All of a sudden in the fifth, the Nats won the ball game. Spence drew a walk with two out, and then it was that Cullenbine slugged his home run. It was fair only by inches.

The Nats got only one hit after that—Cullenbine's third hit of the game, a single to center in the eighth—but Hudson made his one run lead stand up very well. In the last five innings he gave up only two hits, both singles, and only one Tiger got to second base.

Vernon Demoted

Manager Bucky Harris shook up his batting order mildly, demoting Mickey Vernon from third to fifth place and moving Estalella into fourth . . . George Case was absent from the line-up with a painful right arm, the result of being hit by a pitched ball in Washington on Sunday . . . Clary and Sullivan are now giving the Nats a better double-play combination than they have boasted all season . . . Tomorrow it will be Alex Carrasquel for the Nats vs. Harold Newhouser . . . Carasquel shut the Browns out with five hits in his last start and Newhouser held the Nats to four hits in his last appearance here for six innings, but was the losing pitcher.

1—Right off the reel—We knew that something big was likely to happen when we asked the whiskey-wise world to try IMPERIAL. We knew that a whiskey with that marvelous aroma, grand flavor and delightful smoothness would go places!

2—WHAM!...it even surprised us! In state after state, sales records began to tumble—IMPERIAL grew bigger than our biggest guess! And faster! For instance, in Michigan alone—in its first sales year—IMPERIAL leaped to the lead over 332 long-established brands!

3—A whale of a whiskey! Taste why IMPERIAL is America's fastest-growing whiskey—taste why it's going great guns right here in your town. Ask for a tryout drink of IMPERIAL at your bar—or take home a bottle of this great whiskey today!

Great—for two big reasons!

• "Flavor-Peaked" Base Whiskies! This superb American blend has that expensive "imported-whiskey" flavor because its foundation whiskies are specially distilled to give them individual qualities—then blended together to a delicate "flavor peak."

• "Velveted" Spirits! Choice spirits actually made in the same stills as the rare base whiskies are then "velveted" by a method similar to the softening of spirits used in making fine Scotch.

Northwestern Mutual Assets at New Peak

Milwaukee, July 22 (AP).—Assets of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. reached a new high of $1,481,542,835 on June 30 and business results for the first half of 1942 were quite satisfactory, the company board of trustees was told today.

Here Is Guide to Labyrinth of Government For Businessman Who Wants to Sell Goods

Nobody ever sold anything to the Government of the United States. But a lot of people have sold goods to outfits called the "Coast and Geodetic Survey," or "Supply Officer, Navy Yard, Portsmouth, N. H.," or "Army Ordnance Department, 1006 Terminal Building, Cleveland, Ohio."

A lot of people have sold goods to men who worked for the Government and turned out to be as mean and nasty, or as friendly and courteous, as the purchasing agents in private business.

The market is not made simple because the Government does the buying. And until a businessman has found out who in the Government could use his goods, and where that man works, he isn't within a stone's-throw of Government business.

Government: In the field of direct production for the war effort, the businessman thinks first, naturally, of the War Production Board, and yet the bulk of purchasing is handled by dozens of agencies of the War Department, the Navy, the Maritime Commission and Lend-Lease.

In the War Department alone, a man must know whether to deliver his sales to Ordnance, Quartermasters Corps, the Army Air Corps or some other agency.

And other businessmen — the prime contractors—remain one of the best sales goals for the smaller industrialist.

The businessman these days is apt to forget, too, that the old-line departments and agencies of the Government still are in the market for goods. They also have their war jobs, and organizations like the Treasury, Agriculture and Interior Departments still buy many things on the market. Not all the war business is at WPB.

Should I Go to Washington? "A lot of people come here to sell shoes to the Army, for instance, when the only place they can sell them is in Boston."

The speaker, an expert on what's what in Government, agrees with most business advisers that a businessman is waisting money, time and good nature going to Washington before he has canvassed the Government agencies near his home.

The Army buys coffee in Jersey City (not in Washington), canned goods in three or four centers (not in Washington), and so it goes. The same is true of other agencies.

A haphazard trip to Washington is apt to miss the mark. Try your home region first.

Whom can I see at home? Several agencies offer helpful service 'steering committees" for the businessman. They don't buy goods themselves, but they know who does. Here are a few of them:

Department of Commerce—The regional offices in each of the Federal Reserve Bank cities are available to advise businessmen on all manner of problems involving relations with the Federal Government.

Office of War Information—What used to be the U. S. Information Service has scores of offices scattered across the country. Specialists on the ways of Government are in these offices to advise businessmen on chasing a war contract, as well as to answer almost any question about the Federal Government. They have at hand a wide variety of up-to-the minute data on Government operations and can get missing answers from Washington on 24-hour notice.

War Production Board—Regional State and district offices try to assist businessmen with specific problems relating to the war production effort. Generally, their experts are not specialists in routing people to the proper Government channels. They are paid to know the Government system, the WPB and its rules and orders, and the mystery of who handles what. The "Little Nelsons" of the 13 regional offices have considerably power to authorize priorities and otherwise to pry loose bothersome log-jams.

Housing—There also are regional offices with considerable authority representing the Federal housing set-up and the Federal Works Agency.

Generally speaking, these offices don't have contracts to hand out, they don't make purchases or allocate goods. Their function is to help the harried businessmen find where those things are done.

They are paid to advise you where to go to make a sale, how to expedite your materials deliveries (if possible). They often can put a businessman in touch with a prime contractor in search of "bits and pieces" or guide him to the Army, Navy or Maritime Commission buyer who might take his goods.

The experts say: Try them first.

Hydro Holding System Plans Dissolution

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 22.—Irwin L. Moore, president of the International Hydro Electric System—top holding company of a $600,000,000 public utility empire in five New England States, New York and Canada—said today that a system probably would be worked out for distribution of assets among security holders of the holding company, ordered dissolved yesterday.

The Securities and Exchange Commission held yesterday that there was lack of justification for the existence of the system.

"The problem presented by this order," Moore said, "is one of how best to protect the interests of the holders of outstanding Hydro securities. To this problem the management has already given considerable thought. It is expected that very soon a plan for complying with this order in a manner which will deal fairly and equitably with each class of Hydro security holders and which will also avoid the losses that would result from open market sales of Hydro's portfolio, will be filed with the S. E. C. for approval.

"While no final action has been reached, it is probable that the plan will provide for the distribution of the assets of Hydro in kind to its security holders as soon as such assets are in suitable form for ditribution. In order to put the assets in form for distribution, it is expected that simplification and consolidation will be required both for the New York and New England groups. Proceedings under the holding company act initiated by the S. E. C. are now pending before the commission for the simplification of the New England group. No change in the corporate structure of the Canadian group is anticipated."

The principal subsidiaries of the IHES are New England Power Association, Gatineau Power Company, operating wholly in Canada; Hudson River Power Corp., and System Properties, Inc. The latter two own undeveloped and partially developed water power properties in New York and New England and six hydro-electric plants in New York. New England Power is a holding company controlling an interconnected electric power system, gas service in 56 communities in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Vermont and Rhode Island, and providing transportation service to most of Rhode Island.

8000-N. A. M. Members To Aid Scrap Drive

New York, July 22 (AP).—The president of the National Association of Manufacturers today called upon its 8000 members to help the War Production Board's search for "every ounce" of scrap iron and steel.

The executive, William P. Witherow, who is president of Blaw-Knox Company, a Pittsburgh steel firm, said:

"We can greatly enhance the possibility of shortening the war if this scrap collection campaign is vigorously pursued by every plant in the country."

The Nation-wide search for iron and steel scrap is being conducted by the American Industries Salvage Committee with the cooperation of State, local and national trade and manufacturing organizations.

The sharp increase from the week of July 11 carried total distribution 11.4 per cent above comparable 1941 figures.

The Pacific Coast continued to lead major geographical regions in increases over a year ago with a rise of 19.4 per cent. The gain in the Southern States was 18.5 per cent, West Central, 9.7 per cent, Central industrial 9 per cent, Mid-Atlantic 6.6 per cent, Rocky Mountain 6.1 per cent, and New England 4.3 per cent.

Ickes Steps Up August Rate Of Oil Output

By the Associated Press

Petroleum Coordinator Ickes yesterday set the August production rate for all petroleum liquids at 4,038,500 barrels daily, almost 200,000 barrels a day over the July output schedule.

Ickes said this marked the third consecutive month that it had been possible, "due largely to expansion of overland transportation facilities from the Gulf Coast" to boost the national production of petroleum liquids.

Gasoline, Fuel Oil Stores Continue Drop

New York, July 22 (AP).—United States' gasoline stores continued to decline for the week ended July 18 and heavy fuel oil supplies, which advanced the previous week, again were down, the American Petroleum Institute reported today.

Stocks of finished and unfinished gasoline decreased 1,589,000 barrels to 84,069,000 barrels at the end of the week. In the previous week, 85,658,000 barrels were reported on hand.

Residual (heavy) fuel oil supplies were 77,230,000 barrels, a decline of 661,000 from last week. Distillates (light fuels) increased 758,000 barrels to 35,176,000.

Daily average crude oil production for the week amounted to 3,713,400 barrels, an increase of 56,600 from the previous week.

Refineries operated at 76.5 per cent of capacity, indicating a crude run averaging 3,582,000 barrels daily. The same figures were reported the previous week.

Gasoline production for the week was estimated at 10,963,000 barrels, compared with 10,675,000 last week.

Shortages Reported In Drilling Materials

Tulsa, Okla., July 22 (AP).—United States oil field operations have slumped sharply this year because of wartime transportation difficulties and the shortages of drilling materials.

Drilling activity this month may show a decline of more than 50 per cent since July last year, the Oil and Gas Journal will say in tomorrow's edition.

Three areas showed signs of increasing activity—California, where more heavy oil is needed; Illinois, where production has been dropping slowly but steadily, and west Texas, where additional oil is not required.

In view of the trends of production now apparent, the journal suggests that the industry faces two major problems in connection with getting the oil to market.

"The first is to get oil from the East Central States to the Atlantic Seaboard and the other is to insure a supply to the Western end of this system . . .

"In meeting the demands of a dislocated system during the war, the postwar requirements should also be borne in mind . . . getting oil into the East Central States will be a major problem after the war when normal tanker movement to the East Coast can be resumed."

Closing Slump in Steel List Unsettles Stocks; Rail, Rubber Shares Continue Quiet Strength

New York, July 22.—The stock market's efforts to prolong its rise were frustrated today by a sudden drop in steels just before the close. Sympathetic selling cancelled gains in some other leaders and pushed a few into net losses but enough held above water to leave the final tone no worse than irregular.

Brokerage quarters attributed the break in the steels to the publication of unofficial estimates that U. S. Steel's June quarter profits would be cut by tax adjustments to a level leaving little for the common stock after payment of the regular quarterly dividend on the preferred.

Steel common led the retreat with a slid eof 1⅝ points and Bethlehem just as promptly yielded 1⅛.

Rails and rubbers gave the market fair leadership in the earlier dealings, the former gaining friends on the good showing of revenue reports for the first half of the year and the latter responding to the announcement of some rubber manufacturing companies that they had a plan for supplying necesary tire needs for the next two years.

In the quiet climb that proceeded until the last hour upset the market appeared to be untroubled by reports of further Nazi gains in the drive for the Caucasus.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite was unchanged at 37.1. The rail average rose .2 of a point. Transactions totaled 435,510 shares compared with yesterday's 283,882.

DuPont declined 2 points and Allied Chemical was off 1. Fractional losers included Crucible Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Chrysler, American Can, Westinghouse, Anaconda and Montgomery Ward. Among higher closings were Sears Roebuck, U. S. Rubber preferred, Santa Fe (this reached the best price since 1938), Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Union Carbide, Air Reduction, Eastman Kodak and Johns-Manville.

Chicago wheat ended ½ to 1 cent a bushel higher and corn was ⅛ down to as much ahead. Hogs were mostly 10 cents lower. Cotton futures finished 10 cents a bale lower to 25 cents higher.

Aluminum Co. of America in the Curb pushed up 3¾ points and Colt's Patent Fire Arms climbed 1½. Smaller gains were recorded by American Cyanamid and Pittsburgh Plate Glass.

Penn-Central Air Lines and St. Regis Paper were off slightly. Transfers here were 48,720 shares against 49,990 Tuesday.

Confidence Vote Given New Heads Of Brewster Aero

New York, July 22 (AP).—About 30 stockholders of Brewster Aeronautical Corp. today approved a resolution of confidence in the new management which took over after the company for a month had been operated under the United States Navy Department.

C. A. Van Dusen, who was named president and chief executive officer in May, was among the directors. Others included William Fulton Kurtz, president of the Pennsylvania Co., Philadelphia; Evan Randolph, president of the Philadelphia National Bank; S. D. Schnacke, Dayton, Ohio, attorney and general counsel; David Van Alstyne, jr., partner in Van Alstyne Noel & Co.; George C. Westervelt, consulting engineer, and Russell Van Horn, company treasurer.

Stockholders also approved an expansion of the board to nine members, leaving two vacancies; fixed compensation for directors, and provided idemnification for directors in certain types of law suits. When the plants were taken over last spring, the action was attributed to "dissatisfaction with the management" in charge at that time.

Listen! with Glynn

(By Robert Ehrman, for Paul Glynn, now on vacation.)

When a civilian is homesick, he usually goes home. When it happens to Johnny Doughboy, he usually stays where he is. The latter enjoys in imagination what the former does in the flesh. Through letters and snapshots and trinkets received from home, he recaptures in a small way the simple pleasures of the old swimming hole, the corner drug store, the Sunday dinner with the family. But when home is far away, these pleasures do not materialize. Home, at best, is a memory.

Recently WJSV found a way to bring the realities of home a little closer to the soldier and sailor on distant duty. When a boy leaves home for military service, he is often unable, for one reason or another, to hear his favorite hometown radio talent. In the Washington area, for example, several Missouri boys complained that Venida Jones, popular St. Louis organist, could not be heard over any of the D. C. radio stations. Within one week the complaint was answered. Venida Jones was transcribed by St. Louis, shipped to Washington, and broadcast over WJSV exactly as listeners hear her back home in Missouri.

From this small beginning the program has grown into a weekly series, usually aired Tuesdays at 6:30 p. m. The boys have discovered that the next best thing to a furlough is WJSV's "A Package from Home."

Contract Bridge

A bidding problem is presented by Mrs. M. R. O. The hand is shown in today's box: it was bid to six, but in the wrong suit. Here is what our contributor says:

"Today on our lunch hour this hand came up, and on a six-spade bid, doubled, not vulnerable, I was set one. I contended that my partner should not have gone to four spades with only the jack and a small spade. She replied that she was taking me back to my original major suit. May I have your comments?

"Did I play incorrectly? I was able to finesse through East's queen of spades and through West's king of diamonds. Am I wrong in contending that if my partner, North, had adequate trump support I would have made the bid? Should she have said four spades with only two spades? I did not rebid spades, as it was a four-card suit. Would six have been made in diamonds or clubs?"

North was wrong in saying four spades; her bid is either five clubs or five diamonds. Five clubs is the most likely bid, as North has no way of knowing her partner has more than three diamonds, including an honor, whereas her own four clubs make that a very playable suit.

At spades, with West holding the spade nine, a spade trick, as well as the ace of hearts, must be lost to the defenders. Whenever the jack of spades is led from North, East will cover with the queen, promoting the nine to a fourth-round trick.

Nazis Reported Trying to Split So. Americas

By the United Press

German agents are seeking to arouse enmity between Argentina and Brazil in the hope of dividing the Americas and thus clear the way for an Axis thrust at South America, the weekly review, Diplomatic Correspondence, said last night.

The publication, prepared by Sir Willmott Lewis and Edward Weintal, veteran foreign correspondents, is widely distributed in diplomatic and official circles here.

The article, presumably based on diplomatic information, said that "German agents in Brazil, and especially in Rio Grande Do Sul and Parana—which lie near the Argentine border—have been spreading alarmist rumors of an "inevitable war" between the two nations.

"The wild improbability of any such happenings must be apparent," the article said, "but the relations of this subversive activity to a possible future German thrust from Africa against Brazil is obvious."

The Hitler agents, it said, have made capital of the recall of Argentine Ambassador Eduardo Labougle from Rio de Janeiro, of a recent Brazilian government order suspending all exports, and of the prohibition of money transfers from the Bank of Brazil to the Argentine.

"These economic measures were doubtless dictated by the difficulties of the war situation," it said. "Not the least of which is the continual maintenance by the Argentine government of relations with the Axis powers. They were certainly not discriminatory in their intent, but their effect upon official feeling in Buenos Aires was immediate."

The agents were particularly active during the Axis advances in Libya, presumably with the intention of distracting Brazil's attention from the danger to her own security involved in any Axis conueqst of Africa, the article added.

House Authorizes Plans for Jefferson Bicentennial

The House has passed and sent to the White House legislation authorizing the Thomas Jefferson Bicentennial Commission to carry out its plans for the observance of the anniversary next year.

The commission, created two years ago, is headed by Senator Glass (Democrat) of Virginia as chairman, and Representative Smith (Democrat) of Virginia as vice chairman.

Commission plans call for memorial meetings and exercises in Washington and throughout the country during the year, for which the commission would be allowed to spend $10,000; production of a motion picture depicting the main events in Jefferson's life at a cost of $10,000, and preparation of a Congressional memorial edition of the writings of Jefferson, including heretofore unpublished manuscripts, at a cost of $15,000.

Gallagher, Former Flying Tiger, Reenlists in Navy

Edward Francis Gallagher, 26, 730 Somerset Place Northwest, a former member of the famous Flying Tigers, and wearing the uniform of that outfit, applied for reenlistment in the Navy yesterday and was accepted.

Ineligible for aviation cadet training leading to a commission because he is married, Gallagher was enlisted as an aviation machinist's mate, first class, his previous rating before being released to fight in China with the American Volunteer Group. He was assigned to duty immediately at the Navy's new preflight school at Athens, Ga.

After serving in the Navy for six years, Gallagher was released in 1941 and served with the Flying Tigers for approximately one year. While his principal job was to keep the A. V. G.'s planes in shape to fly, he also was able to put in nearly 60 hours of combat flying on his own. He was born in Roxbury, Mass., November 1, 1915. His wife is Mrs. Sally LaScola Gallagher. Their 6-months-old son, Edward, jr., Gallagher saw for the first time when he reached Washington recently.

FBI Seizes 42 Aliens

New York, July 22 (AP).—P. E. Foxworth, assistant director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, announced today that FBI agents in cooperation with New York and Hempstead, N. Y., police had rounded up 42 enemy aliens, including 40 members of the Federation of Italian World War Veterans.

The war veterans federation, known as "Associazione Nazionale Combatanti Italiano," occupied offices at the same address as that of the Italian consulate in New York and was "a strictly Fascist organization," Foxworth said.

The aliens, including one German and one Japanese, were picked up in simultaneous raids in Manhattan, the Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens and Hempstead.

The federation was formed and incorporated in New York State in 1929. Prior to that time, Foxworth said, its appointed officers had been active members in the Fascist League of North America, and membership cards of the federation were identical to those of the Fascist party's in Italy.

Foxworth said that in 1941 the war veterans federation had 93 branches in the United States, requirement for membership being that applicants had seen service in the Italian army during the World War or had performed distinctive services for the Italian army during the Ethiopian campaign.

Since its organization, Foxworth said, the federation was closely associated with the Italian consulates in this country. At a general assembly of the federation in 1935 a resolution was adopted giving the unconditional support of the federation to Italy, he said.

Quotations from the resolution, said Foxworth, included: "Their unfaltering attachment and devotion to the Italian mother country;" "their full, complete and unshakeable confidence in the work of the Italian government;" and "their firm purpose of supporting with every means, and if necessary, with the sacrifice of life itself, the actions of the Italian government."
